WAR WILL END IN JULY, IS JOFFRE'S PREDICTION.

Promises.

OFFENSIVE OF ALLIES MAY INCLUDE RUMANIA.

Additional Assurances from a French Official Returned from Balkans.

Railroads from Bucharest to the Hungarian Border Have Suspended All Passenger Traffic in Anticipation of Hostilities from New Source—Men and Ammunition Assembled for the Last Stroke.

BY ARTHUR S. DRAPER.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 18.—All doubt as to Rumania's course is undoubtedly at an end. On the authority of persons high in [illegible] councils whose names for obvious reasons cannot be divulged, [illegible] able to predict—as far as it is possible to anticipate events—[illegible] Rumania will join the allies in May. Gen. Joffre's prediction [illegible] the war will end July 1.

Additional assurances to this effect were given me today by a [illegible] official who has just returned from a mission in the Balkans. [illegible] as confident that Rumania would cast her lot with the allies [illegible] Verdun would resist the Germans.

PREPARING FOR WAR.

Rumania today is astir with preparations for war. Like Eng[illegible] she has had to create great munitions establishments. Her [illegible] and arsenals are running night and day to create the imple[illegible] and supplies formerly furnished by Krupps and the Skodas. One of the great reasons for Rumania's continued neutrality [illegible] this shortage of munitions. Before the war her ammuni[illegible] were considered adequate for all emergencies. But [illegible] present scale of extravagance they would last scarcely four [illegible]. And, shut off by Turkey, Bulgaria, and the central [illegible] she had no avenue of supply from the outside world except [illegible] Russia.

AGREEMENT WITH RUSSIA.

By an agreement with Petrograd this latter avenue has now [illegible] opened up. Machinery for shell-making and war supplies of [illegible] are being rushed from England through Russia, unimpeded [illegible] countless clerks at the frontiers.

Railroads from Bucharest to Predal, on the Hungarian border, [illegible] suspended all passenger traffic. For ten days, says the Havas [illegible] at Bucharest, nothing but military trains have been [illegible] to move toward the frontier. Trenches have been prepared [illegible] everything made ready for defense.

Rumania's entry, it is believed, has been timed with the grand offensive on all fronts. On the east, fresh Russian armies, re[illegible] and re-munitioned, are awaiting the opening of spring. [illegible] Balkans the allies have gathered through the winter 300,000 [illegible] at Saloniki for the reconquest of Serbia and the invasion of [illegible] and Thrace. They are under the command of Gen. Sarrail, [illegible] French commander of Verdun, one of the few com[illegible] who has gone through the war with the reputation of never [illegible] experienced a defeat.

EXEMPTIONS CANCELLED.

Reports from Sofia indicate that railroad schedules have been [illegible] for the operation of troop trains. Every available man [illegible] pressed into the army, and all exemptions, as in Austria, [illegible] cancelled. Neither the Turks nor the Germans are able [illegible] any aid to King Ferdinand.

Additional alarm has been created by the interruption of all [illegible] communication between Germany and Austria and Bul[illegible] and Turkey. The financial situation also is bad, and the Bul[illegible] Minister has made repeated trips to Berlin in search of loans, [illegible] grudgingly and at exorbitant rates.

Development.

AVS AGAIN RESUME THEIR WESTWARD MARCH.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

[illegible]GRAD, March 18 (via Lon[illegible])—After three weeks of sus[illegible] activity the main Russian [illegible] Erzerum, which have [illegible] the development of op[illegible] the Black Sea and in the [illegible] to make their po[illegible] possible flank [illegible] the Turks, again have re[illegible] westward march toward [illegible]

[illegible] the Russian advance is [illegible] growing number [illegible] prisoners, there is no rea[illegible] that the Turks have [illegible] serious resistance to [illegible]. According to unof[illegible] the large number of [illegible] accounted for by the [illegible] with conditions [illegible] the Turkish army, which [illegible] in a growing disposition [illegible] to surrender. In this [illegible] it is interesting to note [illegible] high percentage [illegible] taken prisoner. Some of them say that they were unable longer to tolerate German control of the army.

The capture of Manhatun bridge shows that the Russian forces are within sixty miles of Erzinjan, on the road to Sivas. Sivas probably will mark the first organized resistance of the Turkish armies.

TWENTY CARPENTERS QUIT IN SHIPYARD.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

OAKLAND (Cal.) March 18.—Twenty carpenters struck at the Moore and Scott shipyards here today on the ground that the company's shipwrights belonged to an "independent" union, not affiliated with the Building Trades Council or the American Federation of Labor.

A conference will be held between the firm and labor leaders Thursday to settle the dispute.

U. S. CENSORSHIP GROWS TIGHTER.

Columbus Weekly Paper Only Able to Print its Legal Notices.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

COLUMBUS (N. M.) March 18.—Additional evidence of the tightening of the censorship was contained in the failure of the local weekly paper to print anything today, its regular press day, except legal notices. There was nothing else which the proprietor considered he had a right to print. The local telephone company also was warned that only officers or men of the army whose names were included in a list provided should be permitted to use the long distance lines. The only civilians permitted to use the toll lines are residents of Columbus or persons well known to the telephone operator, newspaper correspondents being barred.

GAVIRA PRAISES MEXICANS' HONOR.

General in Command at Juarez Points Out that Fact that Americans Have not been Attacked Indicates Cohesion and Stability of Character.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 18.—Gen. Gavira issued a formal statement today to the Associated Press at his headquarters at Juarez, in which he interpreted the fact that no resistance had been offered to the American forces crossing the border as proof of the faith of the Mexican people in Carranza. The statement was as follows:

"The Constitutionalist army, formed by men of liberal thought and by armed citizens to fight oppression, has shown its force to the world by breaking the reactionary efforts of Diaz, Huerta and Villa.

"The American government, almost always poorly informed, did not understand either our aspirations for liberty or our internal conditions. To decide in our favor by recommending us as the de facto government, it was necessary for the Secretary of State and the representatives of A.B.C. to publish as unanswerable proof of our cohesion and discipline a series of answers that, from distant points and without previous agreement, were sent them by numerous liberal chiefs. These answers were set forth in the note that we all know.

"Now, American troops have just crossed to our side of the line without protest or difficulties. To what, then, is it to be attributed that the Mexican public, so scrupulous and extremely sensitive in all that concerns its sovereignty, has not protested in the vigorous form it knows well how to make?

"It is because the people of Mexico have faith in us, they know well the patriotism and sense of honor of the first chief, and of the higher officers, military and civil, who are in control. They know that such men would not barter away the fatherland. Could the American people wish a better proof of the power of the Constitutionalist army than has been constituted by the men of the revolution?"

Woman Empties Revolver into Husband's Body at Home in Maryland.

Exonerated by Coroner's Jury After Relating the Facts of the Case.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

FREDERICK (Md.) March 18.—Mrs. Eloise Young English shot and killed her husband, Arthur E. English, a lawyer of New York, at their home near here today. The shooting was done in the presence of their 6-year-old daughter, and is said to have occurred during a quarrel. English was the son of Thomas Dunn English, a former Congressman from New Jersey, and the author of the song, "Ben Bolt."

Mrs. English claims that she shot in self-defense, when her husband, in a fit of anger, pointed a revolver at her. An examination of the body of English showed that a bullet had gone through the heart and that four other bullets had taken effect. The furniture in the room in which the body was found was in great disorder, indicating that a struggle had taken place.

After the shooting Mrs. English took her four children to the home of a neighbor, to whom she related the story of the tragedy.

Mrs. English was exonerated from blame for the killing of her husband by a coroner's jury here tonight after she and three of her children had testified as to English's alleged brutality and frequent threats to kill his wife.

The young woman testified that while their two sons were cutting wood this morning she requested her husband to permit the elder boy to quit on account of illness. She said this angered her husband, who began to smash dishes and furniture in his rage. Mrs. English secured a revolver, hid it in her dress, and later when her husband took his revolver and threatened to kill her, she testified, she emptied the five chambers of her revolver into his body.

Mrs. English was the daughter of the late McClintock Young, an inventor, many of whose devices are used by large corporations. She was one of the most attractive members of the younger social set of Frederick at the time of her marriage to Mr. English, sixteen years ago.

CAREER OF ENGLISH.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—Arthur English was assistant United States attorney in the Department of the Interior from 1893 to 1897, when he resigned and resumed private practice in this city. He was one of the commissioners of the Hudson-Fulton celebration in 1909. The present Mrs. English, whom he married in 1900, was his second wife.

Mr. English was born in this city in 1863 and was a graduate of New York University.

Suspicions.

SUPPOSED BOMB FOUND ON COURTHOUSE STEPS.

DEPUTY SHERIFFS and a score of detectives made a city-wide search early this morning for two men, believed to be Mexicans, who attracted the attention of Deputy Sheriffs Maxwell and Bailey as a result of their suspicious actions shortly after midnight.

After chasing the men for several blocks the deputy sheriffs returned to the building where they found a large metal ball believed to be a bomb. The "bomb" was taken to the Sheriff's office where it will be examined this morning. For several days the police have been investigating reports of threats to dynamite the courthouse and other municipal buildings. According to the police the threats were made by Mexicans who were incensed because of the punitive expedition by the United States Army into Mexico in pursuit of Villa.

MILITARY DRILL FOR THE BOYS.

National Camp Association Hopes to Enlist One Million Youth.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—More than 2500 boys of the elementary schools of New York and Brooklyn answered the call of the National School Camp Association today and signified their willingness to prepare themselves for war in times of peace. The boys enrolled at armories and United States Army officers were in charge of the registration. The boys will wear army uniforms, but guns will not be supplied them. It was explained that the effort is to enlist a million boys in the movement.

MEXICAN ADVICES ARE REASSURING.

BETTER VIEW OF SITUATION TAKEN IN WASHINGTON.

Improvement Noted at Tampico and the Adjacent Oil Fields—Orders to the American Punitive Expedition do not Contemplate the Occupation of Any City.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Reassuring advices came to both the State and War Departments today from Mexico, where an American army is following the trail of Villa and his bandit followers. The official reports indicated that the American troops thus far have encountered no Villa bandits, though it was indicated a brush with them might be expected soon, and consular dispatches told of quiet conditions elsewhere throughout Mexico.

The State Department's advices, which included a dispatch saying conditions were improving about Tampico, were laid before President Wilson personally tonight by acting Secretary Polk. Mr. Polk also conferred late in the day with Eliseo Arredondo, Gen. Carranza's Ambassador-designate, but neither official would discuss the subject of their talk, except to say that reference had been made to shipment of munitions which the de facto government is anxious to get to Vera Cruz from New York.

Gen. Funston's request that American forces be permitted to use Mexican railways for troop transportation was forwarded late today to Consular Agent Rogers for presentation to Gen. Carranza at Queretaro. Officials here closely associated with the de facto government are understood to believe that Carranza will be strongly advised by many of his followers against granting the request on the ground that to do so might arouse public sentiment against the de facto government, seriously affecting the control it has established over the native population.

The report of better conditions at Tampico and in the adjacent oil fields, where the situation for several days past has been a cause of some concern, brought the information that previous apprehension had been caused by the failure of the military authorities to receive from the de facto government an understanding of why American troops had crossed the border. It was said that as soon as accurate information reached Tampico, improvement in general conditions was apparent.

A development which was regarded in Mexican quarters here as likely to do much toward assuring continued co-operation between the Mexican de facto government and American troops was announcement by the War Department that the orders under which the punitive expedition entered Mexico did not authorize occupation of any Mexican cities. It was said the purposes of the expedition did not necessitate any such occupations which border dispatches have indicated might be misunderstood by the Mexican public.

BLOSSOM FESTIVAL AT SARATOGA.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SARATOGA (Cal.) March 18.—Three thousand people came to this little foothill town today to attend the seventeenth annual blossom festival and view Santa Clara Valley's orchards in full bloom. A chorus of 120 voices rendered a programme in the afternoon, which was a feature of the day. The attendance was only a fraction of the usual number on account of threatening weather. Basketball games, typical country athletic contests, picnic lunches and automobile rides to points from which the best views were obtainable were other features. Open-handed hospitality was dispensed by Saratoga people.

American Women Fleeing from Marfa Despite Carranzista Assurances.

Reward of Fifty Thousand Dollars, to be Paid Out of His Own Bank Account, is Reported to Have been Offered by Col. Slocum for the Capture of the Outlaw — Cowboys may Try for the Big Stake.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MARFA (Tex.) March 18.—A messenger from Mexico arrived at Presidio this morning with a report that Villa bandits were mobilizing to attack Presidio.

Most of the American women left Marfa this afternoon.

Col. Frederick Sibley of the Fourteenth Cavalry today conferred with Col. Riojas, Constitutionalist commander at Ojinaga, opposite Presidio.

Carranza troops were reported co-operating with the American forces for possible defense against bandits.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FORT SAM HOUSTON (Tex.) March 18.—According to authentic announcement received here the offer of a reward of fifty thousand dollars for the capture of Villa, dead or alive, came direct by wireless to Columbus (N.M.) from Col. Slocum yesterday. It is a personal offer of Col. Slocum and will be paid out of his own private fortune, it is presumed. The reward is supposed to be open to all comers, Americans and Mexicans alike. It is reported a flying column of American cowboys may attempt to pull down the big stake.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—One dispatch from Gen. Funston tonight said Gen. Pershing had reported finding a supply of corn, alfalfa and beef at an unnamed point in Mexico. Whether the provisions had been abandoned by fleeing Villa troops or were purchased or requisitioned by the American commander, was not stated. Gen. Pershing also asked for some water-carrying trucks, and Gen. Scott announced that twenty-seven trucks had been ordered from a private firm and would be forwarded to the expeditionary force as soon as possible.

Reports tonight from various points along the border, particularly in the vicinity of El Paso, told of efforts by some Americans and Mexicans in that territory to convey into interior Mexico an impression that the American expedition was the forerunner of intervention. Every effort to counteract the effect of such activities is being made by administration officials. Dispatches are going forth constantly to consular officers with the purpose of reassuring the Mexican people.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

DOUGLAS (Ariz.) March 18.—Arrivals today said that 100 additional policemen had been enrolled by the city government of Cananea, Mexico, and armed with rifles. Uneasiness was reported there by both Mexicans and Americans on account of growing sentiment in favor of a miners' strike. In order to combat this, the Presidente Municipal, Luis A. Garcia, issued an order giving unemployed people ten days in which to find work or leave the district, with the alternative of being arrested.

The time limit expires Monday. Many Mexicans have left but others from all parts of Sonora are reaching the town at the average rate of five hundred daily, so that little impression is being made on the floating population. Acting on reports that Villa sentiment is strong among the people, the Carranza authorities say they are watching closely.

The Cananea Consolidated Copper Company properties, as well as other mines in the district, continues to operate.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

MEXICO CITY, March 18.—The Minister of War, Gen. Obregon, issued a decree today declaring all participants in the Columbus raid, outside the law. The decree gives the right to any citizen to apprehend and kill, if necessary, the followers of Villa who crossed the American frontier.

The first victim of this decree was summarily executed today in the city of Hermosillo, near which place he was captured by men who denounced him as one of the raiding party. The execution was carried out on direct orders of the Minister of War, who personally sent instructions to Gen. P. Elias Calles, military governor of Sonora, to that effect.

The authorities declare that the efforts to run down the bandits will increase with time, and that the government will not rest until all those guilty of crime against the United States have been run to earth.

GERMANS ARE PREPARING FOR FAILURE AT VERDUN.

Kaiser's Main Aim is to Minimize the Expected Commercial Boycotts.

High Hopes of Maintaining Peaceful Relations with the United States Due to Confidence that Trade with this Country will Grow by Leaps and Bounds When Hostilities are Over—Plan to Pit Allies Against One Another.

BY HARRY CARR.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 18.—Army officers of our General Staff express the belief that the German assault upon Verdun will fail of its ultimate objective. They may prove to be wrong, but it is perfectly plain that the Kaiser is preparing for such an eventuality. He knows what he will do next if he fails at Verdun. I take it that every one realizes that this war is to be immediately followed by another war which will be a war of commercial boycotts by which England intends to bring utter ruin upon Germany. The most recent events in Europe convince me that these two wars have actually begun to merge. Some of the events that we have interpreted as belonging to this war of fighting men actually belong in the war of boycotts. The second war has begun without waiting for the present war to cease.

The resignation of Von Tirpitz, the declaration of war upon Portugal, the peculiar "bug" in the peace terms offered by Germany, belong rather to this after-war than to the war which we are now reading about.

INVENTORY.

In order to more thoroughly comprehend this astonishing situation, let us briefly take stock.

In Asia Minor the Russian advance has proceeded to a point which seems to definitely relieve the Suez Canal from danger of an attack. By advancing upon the Bagdad Railroad, Russia threatens to destroy Germany's dream of world power. In fact, I think we can safely say that the Kaiser's dream of world dominion will never come true now. His pathway to the Persian Gulf has been blocked. On the other hand, Russia seems to be acting now more for herself than in the interests of the allies. We must take cognizance of this further fact that Russia can no longer come to the relief of either France or England by a direct attack on the east front. Her activities are too far away from Germany, and Poland now stands between Russia and any pressure she can put upon the Fatherland.

We take stock of another threat of Rumania to flop to the allies. But Rumania is now understood to be running a genial variety of blackmail. War correspondents just returned from the Balkans tell me that Rumania loads up her guns and sends them to one frontier, then to the other—in whichever direction the chances for getting money seem to be the best at the moment. On the west front the Kaiser is desperately engaged in what will probably be the last great offensive of the war. The Germans may take Verdun, but in all probability they will not succeed in destroying the French army or in forcing France to a separate peace.

If the German offensive finally wears out, two alternatives present themselves: One is a tremendous counter-offensive against Germany; the other is peace.

COUNTER-OFFENSIVE

A counter-offensive against Germany on a large scale does not seem to be among the strong probabilities. Although France, with a gallantry and heroism absolutely unexampled in history, is holding out against the finest and most powerful German troops, she will be in no condition to attempt an offensive against the Germans.

If there be an offensive against Germany, it must come from England.

Let us examine the probabilities of an English offensive. Thus far in the war England has made a sorry showing. She has done worse than nothing on land and has had no chance to do much at sea. The only two events of which the English boast are the retreat from Mons and the retreat from the Dardanelles. In addition to the loss of prestige, England is in a bad way at home. Any candid person must see that England is in grave peril of something like a revolution, or, if not a regular revolution, then draft riots. Ireland is on fire.

England could undertake an offensive against Germany only in case she were dead certain sure it would be a successful offensive. To launch another offensive that might end in another blunder and in the useless sacrifice of thousands of lives would be an exceedingly awkward performance. In judging whether she could be successful in an offensive, England will also take into consideration the fact that the battle of Verdun has definitely proved the superior chances of the army upon the defensive. Even a successful offensive undertaken by England could only result in driving the Kaiser back to his Rhine forts, where the shortening of his line would automatically give him the equivalent of 500,000 more men. Another thing, England has until now never given up the hope that America would be dragged into the war as one of the allies. That hope has now been blasted by a frisky gentleman named Pancho Villa. Owing to Senor Villa, we now have plenty of troubles of our own and don't care a hang what happens to the allies.

THE ALTERNATIVE

The alternative would be peace. This would not be a real peace. It would be a peace darkened by a ferocious commercial war with France, England, Russia and Italy (if England's plans pan out) signed up and pledged to the commercial ruin of Germany.

Knowing that peace only means the recall of his soldiers and mobilization of his merchants, the Kaiser is pretty sure to pull off the sensational event for which the world has been waiting.

The bridge between the two wars will be the dash of the German fleet out of Kiel. The recent actions of the English government show plainly that this is what is anticipated. Why else was Portugal called into the war?

THE COMMERCIAL WAR.

The commercial war will begin with a tremendous rush by England and Germany. They will race with their merchant ships for the outlying markets of the world. At the present outlook Germany would be badly outdistanced in this race by the superior English merchant fleet.

If the Kiel fleet comes out, its objective will not be the destruction of the English battleships, but the destruction of English merchant ships. If the Kiel fleet comes out, I look to see it scatter to the seven seas, tearing up British commerce as a terrier does in a rat-killing contest. Sooner or later the German fleet would be hunted down and destroyed piecemeal. But it would be a worthwhile sacrifice if it could destroy enough British shipping before it sank beneath the waves.

It was in view of this possibility that Portugal was called into the war. The English feared that the German fleet might dash out; tear up all the British merchant ships it could find; then take refuge in Portuguese ports and intern. Furthermore, there were in Portuguese ports, a large number of German steamers that would have been a valuable asset for Germany in the trade war to come. These, of course, will be put out of the way by England.

The resignation of Von Tirpitz has a direct bearing on these eventualities. The German merchant, especially the Saxon merchant, is a very clear literal thinker. He sees that if England, Fance, Italy and Russia boycott Germany, then the hope of Germany lies in her trade relations with the United States.

POLITICAL ECONOMY.

The German does not delude himself with the idea that people always trade "where they can buy the cheapest." At the Henschal Locomotive works in Cassel they told me that before the Morocco affair, about one-third of the output of the factory was sold to France. After that international difficulty their French market for locomotives was absolutely wiped out. Their export trade to France was assassinated. That convinced the German manufacturers that buyers do not trade where they hate.

These being the facts, Germany can't afford to start into this fierce trade war and have America as an enemy full of hatred. Germany honestly doesn't want any more submarine incidents and dead American babies. I can tell you further a little secret. A bitter feud between the German Foreign Office and the German General Staff was brought about by the Lusitania tragedy. The Foreign Office bitterly opposed it. Under the German theory of war making, however, the Foreign Office took a back seat when the first gun was fired, and thenceforth the General Staff was supreme. The theory of the General Staff was that the more frightful the war, the more merciful and the quickest ended. Von Tirpitz was the archangel of this school. But it soon became clear to the great Kaiser that, if the war should be indecisive, Germany must have public opinion on her side. Hence, Von Tirpitz was dropped.

"BUG."

The "bug" in the peace negotiations offered recently by Germany is also significant and shows that Germany is already trying to sow the seeds of a discord that will break up the boycott. In these semi-official terms, Germany suggests moving out of Belgium, giving back the captured territory in France; and suggests that Russia be allowed to keep Persia. This, of course, is intended to make trouble between England and Russia. England would rather give Russia Westminster Abbey than Persia.

Let us consider for a moment what chances England has of successfully boycotting Germany in this trade war.

From my observation in Europe, I feel safe in saying that England will not succeed. Further than that, the very first of the allies to break the boycott league will probably be England herself.

In London I talked to British merchants who were quite frank about it. One of them said, "this is all rubbish. Of course I am going to trade with Germany after the war. Why shouldn't I? My grandfather started this business and most of his trade was carried on with a German house in Leipsic. My father did business all his life with this same German firm. All my business life has been one continual relation with this German firm. They have become a part of my life. I don't hate them. Why should I? As soon as the war ends, I am going to reopen my business relations with them; only," he added, "I hope that they won't do so much of this submarine frightfulness that the public will prevent my handling their goods."

Another man, a paper manufacturer, told me that he was anxious for the war to end so he could buy some German machinery, of which he is very much in need. "Pshaw," he said, "we've got to have their machinery, and that's all there is to it."

As between Germany and America, of course trade will begin with a rush. Our merchants are in almost desperate need of dyestuffs and various other German products.

GALLANT FRANCE.

Gallant France is likely to hold out against German trade longer than any of the other allies. German merchants told me that this was their opinion. Germany honestly likes France and feels sorry for her. I dare say the warmest admirers of the wonderful fight made by the French at Verdun are the German soldiers, who are pouring death into the fortress. That's the way the end of the war looks to me. I think we will see Europe slipping so gradually into this other war of boycotts that we will hardly know where one war began and the other left off. As I hope I have shown, the second war has already begun before the first has ended.

LOS ANGELES MAN GLAD TO LEAVE.

ANXIOUS TO QUIT MEXICO SINCE MASSACRE.

J. P. Steele Declares Citizens of Torreon Felt that Anti-American Outbreaks Might be Started and Fearing Murder Decided Best Thing was to Get Out.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

EL PASO, March 18.—In a party of twenty-two Americans and as many Germans and other foreigners J. P. Steele of Los Angeles arrived here today from Torreon. "We started to get anxious the Monday after that Columbus affair and we worried a good deal because we could not get a train out," said Steele. "On Tuesday we succeeded in getting those freight cars hooked up to an engine and started with men, women and children herded into one car. These included the employees of the Continental Rubber Company, the Tualalilo Cotton Company, owned by Juan Brittingham and the other American owned industries of the Torreon district. We feared that Villa or man of his followers in the Torreon district would start anti-American outbreaks and we would all be murdered. The food supply at Torreon was scant when we left and we had barely enough to keep us alive on the trip. I would say that there are 10,000 men out of work in Torreon alone.

"We met coaches full of Americans at every junction coming out of San Luis Pôtosi, Mexico City and the other southern cities. All told the same story. They were heading for the border and were all anxious as we were to get away for they said that the Carranza garrisons were strongly Villista in sympathies and they feared outbreaks or intervention."

H. S. Stevenson, manager of the Palomas Land and Cattle Company and a former Los Angeles man, arrived at the border today after acting as chief scout for Gen. Pershing through the Palomas ranch property. He was sworn to secrecy before he left but said that the column had made 135 miles when he left it to return to the border.

INSISTS SCOOP MAY BE CRIME.

Correspondents Accountable for Their Dispatches.

Maj. Sample Declares He is Authorized to Act.

Doesn't Want Villa to Get News of Movements.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

COLUMBUS (N. M.) March 18.—New orders were issued here today holding every correspondent accountable for his dispatches under the national defense act.

"The man who gets a scoop is an arch-criminal," said Maj. W. R. Sample, commanding officer of the Columbus camp today, "and I have evidence enough to bring several under the Federal law.

"American soldiers' lives already have been possibly endangered by violations of the censorship," said Maj. Sample.

The major took measures today to make correspondents strictly accountable to the national defense law, which, he says, he is going to see is observed. He received an order to this effect from Gen. Funston.

NEWS REACHES VILLA.

"These betrayals of our movements have, of course, reached Villa, who naturally has taken means to make himself more elusive," he said. "This means the extension of our lines, and extensions mean death to American soldiers from disease and other causes, and American soldiers are American citizens the same as civilians. The American people should realize this and above all the American papers should know the more publicity the more deaths of American soldiers.

"Furthermore, this expedition is a test of preparations. We also have a chance to test the power of censorship. If we ever got into a big war the efficiency of censorship would be a life and death matter to the nation. I regret to say that some men connected with the papers have carried matter censored here to other points to telegraph. This must and will stop, by power of the Federal laws."

As the result of the new order, Columbus ceased to be a favorable place for journalistic enterprise.

SCOPE OF WARNING.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The warning to newspaper correspondents at Columbus that they would be held responsible for their dispatches under the national defense act appears to have been issued without any special instructions from the War Department. If the purpose is to prevent the disclosure in newspaper dispatches of any military information regarding the progress of Gen. Pershing's campaign, it was said the act would be of no avail.

The national defense act passed by Congress March 3, 1911, was designed to prevent the sale to foreign governments or the publication in newspapers, magazines or otherwise of "any document, sketch, photograph, photographic negative, plans, model or knowledge of anything connected with the national defense to which he is not entitled."

Officials here are at a loss to see how the act can be invoked successfully to prevent the disclosing by newspaper correspondents of the movement of troops in Mexico.

Speculative.

MAY ALTER HIS PLANS IF VILLA WON'T FIGHT.

But Pershing's Maneuvers with the Punitive Expedition are a Secret — Every Effort Being Made to Prevent Publicity — To Force a Battle or Trap the Outlaw the Probable Alternatives.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) March 18.—Failure by Francisco Villa, on whose trail more than four thousand United States troops are marching, to make a stand and fight before the end of next week will radically alter the methods so far employed by the commander of the punitive expedition.

What Gen. Pershing's plan is, however, has not been revealed and will not be if Gen. Funston can prevent it. Every effort will be made to keep secret the movements of troops if it becomes necessary to abandon the direct line of pursuit with the units of the little army practically in contact.

When Gen. Pershing led the expeditionary force over the boundary line into Mexico the juncture of troops which has taken place near Casas Grandes was planned with little expectation that Villa would be sighted before this time. It was realized that the only chance of the Americans to catch him at that stage of the operations was that he would gather his forces and resist their advance. Not only did he not do that, but, according to Gen. Funston's reports, not a shot was fired at the invaders.

Gen. Pershing's scouts may have brought him information as to Villa's location, but such information as has been received at the general headquarters here makes an assertion on the subject little better than a guess. There is reason to believe that he has retreated as the Americans advanced and that now he is somewhere in the Galena district south of Casas Grandes, in the environs of which a cavalry force under Col. Dodd rested today. Information received by Gen. Funston from Chihuahua indicated that he was at Colonia Gracias, but most of those reporting contented themselves by placing him "in the mountains from sixty to one hundred miles south of Casas Grandes."

THE ALTERNATIVES.

To force Villa to fight or to trap him in one of his many hiding places has now become the object of Gen. Pershing's plan. Whether Villa will risk a fight or play out the role of a common fugitive is a subject for speculation.

Unofficial reports that Gen. Pershing did not insist upon sending into Casas Grandes the advance cavalry force after Gen. Gavira had intimated such entry would mean resistance, lessened the tension at Gen. Funston's headquarters. Gen. Funston was convinced that Gen. Pershing would not pass his troops through any Mexicon town unless he regarded it as a military necessity, but in case of such necessity he was prepared to indorse the action of the man on the spot.

Gen. Pershing continued his reports of routine development of the plan, none of his reports dealing with an unexpected or unusual incident.

Gen. Funston replied to thousands of petitioners from scores of towns in Texas where the inhabitants wanted troops for protection, that it would be impossible to grant their wishes. In all cases he suggested that if they felt the need of protection it might be well if they were to organize local defense forces.

Maxim Declares Country Must Spend All it Can on Preparedness.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—Hudson Maxim, inventor and member of the naval consulting board, speaking on national defense at the National Democratic Club here today, declared that "we must spend all we can and be prepared, and then if we do not have any war we shall have only protected our interests and gained by the service of our youth, a better generation to come, with patriotism, loyalty and happiness." The money that is used for fire departments, Mr. Maxim said, should be doubled for defense.

One of Thirty-nine Americans Held Prisoner by Bandit Chief Declares He Heard the Scheme Divulged Over Three Months Ago at Chihuahua.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 18.—Villa boasted three months ago that he would force intervention in Mexico by the United States, according to a story told here today by Harry Williams of Chihuahua, an American mining man. Williams asserted that he had heard Villa make the boast on December 18 last, when he was a prisoner of the bandit.

"I am one of thirty-nine Americans employed on the mining property of the Madera company," said Williams. "We were all arrested because the pay of the Mexicans working under us had not arrived from Chihuahua. It amounted to $17,000, and the company was afraid to send it because they were certain it would be confiscated.

"Villa brought us to Chihuahua, and I have never seen him in an uglier mood. We did not know whether we were going to be shot or not, but we were not by any means too optimistic. He told us, 'I am going to force intervention by the United States in three months. The United States has recognized Carranza and must pay for it.'

"He demanded $31,000 from the company. I do not know whether it was paid or not, but we were released the next day after being warned to keep off the streets.

"I planned to leave on the train that was made up to take out the men of the Cusi Mining Company. Fortunately I felt sick and could not go. The next day I heard of the massacre of the eighteen Americans on the train at Santa Isabel."

Mr. Williams has been seventeen years in Mexico, but says he is not anxious to return.

Nurse Who Was Wed Abroad Seeks Husband in San Francisco.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 18.—A romance that began in the Red Cross campaign against the typhus epidemic in Serbia soon after the war began, became public here today when Mrs. Margaret Yeftich of New York, one of the principals, asked detectives to search for her husband, Paul Yeftich, formerly publisher of a Serbian newspaper in San Francisco, who disappeared from his home last Thursday evening and has not been seen nor heard of since.

Mrs. Yeftich said her husband had been showing signs of acute depression over the hardships of his native country ever since they came to New York a few months ago.

Mr. Yeftich was one of the first from America to volunteer for service in fighting the spread of typhus in Serbia.

He was assigned to duty at Kragujvatz. It was there that he met Mrs. Yeftich, who had gone to the country with the Scottish Red Cross unit.

BATTLE WITH VILLA IS LIKELY ANY TIME

American Troops Strike the Trail of [illegible] Outlaw into Mountain Slopes.

Second Phase of the Invasion Already Under Way—[illegible] Stringent Censorship is Said to be Indicative of a [illegible] in Official Circles that a Brush with the Bandits is [illegible] Due to Take Place.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

EL PASO (Tex.) March 18.—The first phase of the American expedition into Mexico, the rush along Villa's dim trail to the endangered Mormon colonies, was an accomplished fact tonight—completed, according to reports reaching the Columbus base, without the firing of a hostile shot by the Americans.

The second phase already was beginning, it was indicated here, as the Americans turned somewhere from Casas Grandes to resume their night marches under the brilliant Mexican moonlight toward the rough mountain slopes where it is known Pancho Villa already has preceded them with more than 100 miles start.

Warning that this second act in the chase might not be passed without fighting against bandits, was implied in a new and more stringent censorship imposed at Columbus. Further leakage of news of military movements, the censor said frankly to the American press, would be likely to cost soldiers' lives.

EXCITEMENT.

There was brief excitement today at Columbus when from across the hot, dusty Mexican border, two soldiers on stretchers were being brought into the camp. Both were cavalrymen. Excitement passed when it was learned that one had been thrown from his horse, injuring his leg, while the other, who at first was said to have been shot in the abdomen, was suffering from a well-known form of stomach ache.

When Washington announced that the American columns did not intend to occupy cities a menace to Mexican national pride was removed. The Carranza garrisons, which have been passed by the marching Americans, and which therefore, are now in the Americans' rear on their flanks, continued tranquil, so far as reports to El Paso indicate.

Gen. Gabriel Gavira, at Juarez, commanding the territory through which for five days the Americans have been penetrating, himself announced that for a time the situation as reported to him had been "very delicate, and even serious." With evident relief he said the crisis had passed. This crisis, it is believed, reached its height last night, when couriers dashing into Casas Grandes, announced with careless enthusiasm that the American troops would enter that city by midnight. Gen. Gavira wired immediate orders to his troops not to permit this.

Dawn showed the long line of cavalry horses just outside of Colonia Dublan, the troopers dismounted and in camp at rest.

WHERE VILLA IS.

Villa was located today with some degree of definiteness, if weight of evidence counts in pinning down his rapid shifts. From several sources Constitutionalists received messages, all of which placed him in approximately the same portion of Western Chihuahua. These dispatches had him nearly due south of the American columns' present known positions and close to the Sierra Tarahumare, so close to them, in fact, that if his reputation as a fox holds good during the American chase he should be able to make a puzzling disappearance in these ranges with a very few hours' hard riding. By all accounts he is more than 100 miles ahead of the Americans, about the same distance he has been out of their reach for a week, but with one possibly important difference, that while heretofore the Americans have been riding on a somewhat cold trail, they are nearing ground which Villa very recently passed over and where they may have practical opportunity to test out the temper of the rural Mexicans from whom they might receive valuable information.

The story that Villa is gathering men and preparing to resist was revived in Constitutionalist circles today and he was even said to have 10,000,000 rounds of cartridges and shells, many of home manufacture, secreted in the mountains, where he was expected to make a stand.

Doubt that Villa would do any such thing was expressed, however, by Andres Garcia, the Mexican Consul here, who claimed that Villa intends to make the American expeditionary force a joke. Mr. Garcia declared he was convinced that the bandit had no intention of fighting Americans.

"One of my men," he said, "who returned from the Galeana district today, brought me positive information that Villa was disbanding his men and intended to hide in the mountains with three or four of his trusted followers and defy the Americans to find him. An army might wander in that region for years, and never find a man like Villa, who knows every foot of the ground.

"I am convinced that Villa intends to play hide and seek with the American soldiers with the intention of making their expedition ridiculous. He may make raids on communications or something like that, but he will never risk a real battle."

REWARDS.

The rewards which have been offered for Villa, alive or dead, in Mr. Garcia's opinion, are the best hope of ending the bandit's career.

"The news of these rewards will flash through the re[illegible] [illegible] "and I should be very [illegible] prised if they do not bring [illegible] sult."

The Carranzista consul has [illegible] of his own which he believes [illegible] best way to capture Villa.

"Gen. Gutierrez," he said, "[illegible] that he expected to have [illegible] on Villa's trail within a week. [illegible] there are 4000 to 5000 [illegible] troops. If they [illegible] fast and were the right [illegible] would have a good chance to [illegible] by the heels."

Mr. Garcia denied emphatically repeated statements that the [illegible] Guerrero and Galeana are in [illegible] with the fugitive.

"Many of them are afraid of [illegible] of course," he said, "because of [illegible] reign of terrorism he [illegible] there, but it must be remembered [illegible] the Villa of today is not the [illegible] five years ago.

"In the early part of his [illegible] he was very liberal with the [illegible] about him. LONDON, Feb. 29.—Military service tribunals, consisting of anywhere even to twenty members, are throughout England hearing ications for exemption from men at the front. UPHOLDS RIGHTS IN MINING CLAIMS.

ARIZONA PROPERTY AFFECTED BY COURT DECISION.

Department of Interior is Without Authority to Attach Holdings in Unpatented Properties Except Through Regular Legal Procedure. Ralph Cameron Wins Victory.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 17.—A decision of large importance has just been made in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, holding that the Department of the Interior is without power to attack vested rights in unpatented mining claims save through regular court procedure. The case at issue was from Arizona, a continuation of the long drawn-out litigation through which it has been hoped to dislodge Ralph H. Cameron, former Congressman, who for many years has maintained possession of many mining claims that cover every feasible approach to the depths of the Grand Canyon in the vicinity of El Tovar.

He produces assays to sustain his contention that every claim carries gold or platinum or copper, and that every location has been made in good faith for mining purposes. For years he personally controlled the Bright Angel trail, but that has passed to the ownership of the county of Coconio. The Santa Fe system has built a trail of its own, but both trails pass over Cameron ground.

About two years ago the Interior Department instituted contests in the Phoenix Land Office against eighteen of the Cameron claims. Joseph E. Morrison, for Cameron, pleaded that the department was without jurisdiction in its own offices, but was overruled by the land office and lost an injunction application which he took to the United States court, largely because the suit had been brought against subordinates of the Secretary of the Interior. So it is probable that the matter now will be taken, for trial on its merits, before a United States court.

LIND'S INTEREST IN LAND GRANTS

Wilson's Envoy Summoned to Capital to Explain.

Owns Much Property in Both Oregon and California.

Representative Kent Takes a Hand in Measure.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 18.—John Lind of Minnesota, who was President Wilson's personal envoy to Mexico during the Huerta administration and ex-Governor of Minnesota, was shown today to have a much heavier interest in Oregon and California grant lands than heretofore had been supposed, and after baring several important facts the subcommittee which is redrafting the land grant bill voted to summon Lind to Washington to explain fully his connection with the transaction. It is expected he will be heard Tuesday.

Representative Kent, of California, who previously sought to show that C. A. Smith had no interest in the Attorney-General's amendment confirming outstanding executory contracts, appeared today and read a second telegram from his son-in-law, M. S. Arnold, who is now land attorney for C. A. Smith, former Minneapolis lumberman and ex-regent of the University of Minnesota. A previous telegram from Arnold said that Smith had no interest whatever in that amendment. The message read today said that Smith had transferred to Lind his interest in between 5000 and 7000 acres of Oregon and California lands in satisfaction of Lind's claim against the C. A. Smith Lumber Company, amounting to $63,000.

The subcommittee thought it more essential than ever to clear up Lind's connection with the Attorney-General's amendment and Representative Lenroot of Wisconsin, with whom Lind recently conferred, then produced a letter from Lind, saying his interest was explained in a letter he had written Senator Chamberlain. This latter letter Lenroot also read. In it Lind said that Smith owed him a large sum of money and had transferred to him a tract of Oregon and California land as security. Trustees of the C. A. Smith Lumber Company, he said, knew all about the transaction, and he further said the transfer was on record in Oregon.

On top of this S. W. Williams, of the Department of Justice, informed the subcommittee that Lind had conferred with the Department of Justice with reference to the amendment now in dispute, and admitted further the amendment had been suggested by Lind and was intended to protect his interests.

AMMUNITION IS PLENTY OVER MEXICAN BORDER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN ANTONIO (Tex.) March 18.—Unusual activity displayed by the de facto government of Mexico in adding to its stores of ammunition is shown in reports from customs officers at different border ports of entry. According to these reports and to information secured by army officers, shipments of rifle ammunition in carload lots by express have become common in the past three weeks. This apparent haste was being shown before Villa raided Columbus. Much of the new ammunition entered at points on the New Mexico and Arizona border and was supposed to be intended for the troops in Sonora. Since the Columbus raid 3,000,000 rounds passed through the customshouse at Laredo.

Far from being a shortage of ammunition in Mexico, army men say there is more small arms material there now than there has been for many years.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—Seventy graduates of the United States Military Academy at West Point assembled at their annual banquet in the Palace Hotel here tonight, exchanged greetings over long-distance telephone with a similar gathering at the Hotel Astor in New York and listened to addresses by leading West Pointers after toasts had been drunk to absent alumni, who had been called for service in Mexico or on the international border.

BRITISH ENTER DENIAL OF SINKING TUBANTIA.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, March 18, 1:50 p.m.—Assertions having been made from German sources that the Tubantia was sunk by a British torpedo, the Admiralty announced today that no British submarines were near by when the Dutch liner went down.

An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Copenhagen says the German government has ordered the Admiralty to make an investigation whether a German submarine torpedoed the Tubantia.

SWEAR SHIP WAS TORPEDOED.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Two officers and lookouts of the destroyed Dutch liner Tubantia, the American Consul at Amsterdam reported today, "swear the steamer was torpedoed." He added that passengers were of the same opinion. The Consul reports four persons missing.

SCHILLINGS IDENTIFIED.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

AMSTERDAM, (via London, March 18, 11:12 p.m.)—Richard Schilling, who, with his wife and daughter, was on board the steamship Tubantia when she was sunk, is the Consul for Guatemala at Stuttgart, where he has resided for thirteen years. He was naturalized in the United States thirty years ago. His wife is a German.

TORPEDOED, SAYS AGENT.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BUENOS AIRES, March 18.—The Argentine agent of the Hollandsche Lloyd, owners of the Tubantia, said today he was able to confirm the reports that the Tubantia was torpedoed.

The sinking of this vessel has made a deep impression here. La Nacion says:

"It is impossible to admit the right to interrupt navigation between neutral nations and to attack a steamship engaged in passenger service between Rotterdam and Buenos Aires. Our conscience does not approve such an inhuman method of warfare and we cannot remain indifferent when confronted with acts of war which prejudice us and offend the nation in this manner."

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

The poison is put in the holes occupied by squirrels during the winter.

ELEVEN-YEAR-OLD MURDER LAID TO SEATTLE CLERK

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SEATTLE (Wash.) March 18.—James Mariano, a clerk in a marketing stall, was arrested by city detectives today and locked in the City Jail as the man wanted in San Francisco for the murder of B. Vilardo, whose body was dismembered and buried there April 5, 1905.

The police assert that their identification of Mariano as the man wanted in San Francisco is positive, but Mariano stoutly denies the charge. The circular sent out by the San Francisco police in May, 1905, names Pietro Torturici, alias James Gaffene, as the man wanted, and the Seattle police say they have evidence that Mariano formerly went under those names.

The arrest of Mariano resulted indirectly from the prosecutions of George Hammond, alias Boozer, and a woman who is said to be his wife, on charges of grand larceny. Hammond pleaded guilty in the Superior Court last Friday and the trial of the woman will be held Monday. Detectives say that Mariano, who [illegible]

KICKED COPPER'S STOMACH, GREEK CONSUL ACCUSED

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—Cleanthe Vassardakis, Greek Consul-General at San Francisco, still is confined to his bed today under the care of a physician as a result of an encounter with a deputy sheriff and a policeman Wednesday when the officers entered the consulate and seized property there to satisfy a judgment against Vassardakis for $822. Sheriff Finn has made a complete report of the occurence to Gov. Johnson, who has been asked by the State Department to investigate the difficulties between the Consul and the local authorities. The Sheriff maintains that he acted entirely within his rights. Vassardakis declares that the consulate was illegally violated, that the treaty existing between this country and Greece was broken, and that he was brutally beaten.

strians Turn on Italians Along Isonzo Front.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

LONDON, March 18.—The German [illegible] in the Verdun region now nearing the end of its fourth week has again slackened decidedly, both Paris and Berlin reporting the continued absence of infantry operations on either side. The big guns here and there along the front in the vicinity of the fortress are intermittently shelling opposition positions, but the chief activity just at present seems to be by the airmen.

Numerous raids by French aviators are reported by the Paris War Office, [illegible] points bombarded including the railway stations of Conflans and Metz. Showers of heavy shells dropped are declared to have been effective causing numerous explosions and [illegible]

Elsewhere on the western front artillery is the only military arm that has been busily occupied and even it has not displayed more than ordinary activity. In Russia there has been only sporadic fighting, although there are signs of preparations for movements of probably importance particularly along the northern end of the line.

ON THE ISONZO.

In Arabia the British report a defeat for a Turkish force which attacked an outpost near Aden.

TORPEDO DUTCH STEAMER.

The torpedoing of the Dutch steamer Palembang, bound from Rotterdam to Java, is announced. The vessel met her fate off the Galloper light, in the Thames estuary, Saturday morning. All the members of the crew are reported saved.

Apparently the lost vessel was the Dutch-owned steamer Palembang of 6674 tons engaged in the Holland-Java trade, for although there are two steamers of that name, the other is an oil vessel, which last reported at Kirkwall on a voyage from Philadelphia to Norway.

A dispatch to Lloyd's Weekly News from Harwich says that the fifty-five members of the crew of the Palembang and two Dutchmen, who were passengers, have been landed there. Three members of the crew were injured by the explosion. No lives were lost.

Although the ship remained afloat for seven minutes, the injured men were placed in boats with the remainder of the crew.

The passengers and several members of the crew declare the submarine fired three torpedoes.

Twenty members of the crew have entered the sailors' home in the eastern district of London. One of them in a statement said nobody could say with certainty whether the vessel had been torpedoed or had struck a mine. Nobody, he said, saw a submarine or even a periscope. The weather was fine and very clear.

The Palembang was steaming along rapidly when the slight explosion, quickly followed by two of great intensity, occurred. The vessel listed immediately and sank head foremost.

DATES NOT NECESSARY ON RECALL PETITIONS.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, March 18.—The State Supreme Court held today that it is not necessary to date signatures on municipal recall petitions unless it is specifically provided by law. Justice H. A. Melvin dissented, holding that election boards must have the date of each signature in order to determine the validity of the signatures.

The election board of the city and county of San Francisco was ordered to examine a petition for the recall of Percy V. Long, City Attorney, which the board had refused to do because the signatures were not dated.

Mort is charged with having led a party of American soldiers into Mexico last January to rescue other American soldiers who had been captured by Mexicans. All the other American soldiers and officers have been relieved of responsibility.

ROCKEFELLER WORK TO BE EXTENDED.

Acquisition of More Property by Medical College in Peking is in Line with Foundation's Plan to Establish Institutions Equal to Those in United States.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—Appropriations amounting to $1,200,000 have been made by the Rockefeller Foundation, it was announced here today, to extend the work of the department recently established at Princeton, N. J., for the study of animal diseases; to enlarge the property and scope of the Union Medical College in Peking, China; to carry on the hospital work of Dr. Alexis Carrel in France, and to aid the prison camps of Europe.

The acquisition of more property by the medical college in Peking is said to be in line with the foundation's plan to establish in China two institutions that will be the equal of the best in America. It is hoped, according to those in charge, that by means of these schools there will be trained Chinese men, who themselves will become teachers of modern medicine.

The receipt of a bequest of $48,860 from the estate of the late Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Sr., also was announced today. This is in addition to a gift of $349,874 made in September, 1915.

LULL AT COLUMBUS.

The Columbus camp was enjoying a lull today. Certain troops have been dispatched "somewhere" and "certain others" have "arrived" and taken the places of those who have gone into the sand waste lying south of the railway track. The aeroplanes have been tested out and seem to be waiting transport. The big special motor trucks used with the aeroplanes to follow the flights are just now busy with the more prosaic duties of carry fodder, provisions and other supplies. The number of motor trucks will be materially increased soon, according to reports around the camp.

This morning reveille was blown at 5 o'clock over in the cavalry camp, but when the people of Columbus turned out of bed they found nothing but foot and hoof prints and littered sand in what had been a populous corner of the camp. There were still plenty of soldiers on hand and Columbus' billiard rooms and soft-drink places—the town is dry—daily take in enough to pay the city debt.

An automobile record between Denver and El Paso, a run of 890 miles, was made by Lieut. A. M. Graham of the Eleventh Cavalry, in answering the call to be with his regiment in Columbus by Thursday. He was on the road fifty-five hours with seven hours' sleep. He made the run alone.

CENSORSHIP.

The correspondents who have gone into Mexico with the expedition remained silent today on account of the censorship. It was said that most of them were under polite corral, along toward the rear, with the infantry. While this could not be verified it was a fact that the only members of the correspondents' party, whose presence has been definitely reported, were far behind the vanguard at last reports. If any newspaper observers are among the leading columns, the censor has succeeded in hiding their moves much more effectively than they cloaked the position of the troops.

Deming, N. M., was today included in the Columbus censorship area. Heretofore many correspondents, whose dispatches were censored in Columbus, would take an hour's run to Deming, evading the censor. The price of this run jumped from $5 to $15 on account of the patronage.

Several additional scouts left El Paso today for Columbus to report to the military commander there.

Outlook.

ARIZONA EXPECTS REUNITED G.O.P.

"PROGRESSIVES" AT MEETING OF STATE COMMITTEE.

Seceders will be Welcomed at the Primaries and Convention and if They Can Capture Organization it will be Granted Them Without a Demurrer.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 18.—With a few Progressives present as interested and welcome spectators, the Arizona Republican Committee today in Phoenix held the best attended session known for years and made definite progress toward victory in the fall. On the basis of a reunited party agreed upon was a novel feature that the State Convention in Tucson May 6 shall be empowered to suggest names for a State and Congressional Republican State ticket, either then or later. This convention especially has been called to select delegates to the Republican National Convention.

Almost every action taken today was unanimous, though usually after sharp debate. Declaration was made that the "Progressives" will be welcomed at the primaries and in the State Convention and that if they can capture the State organization it will be given to them without demurrer. Chairman Kibbey stated that all Arizona Progressives should be considered Republicans and that most of them already were back in the fold.

Percival Lowell of Flagstaff led enthusiastic utterances to the effect that a National Republican victory is sure.

In the morning was passed a resolution in favor of national female suffrage though not till after the matter had been tabled as something not within the scope of the committee's powers.

BAN ON SUPERSTYLES.

Denver Telephone Company Decides Girls Must Stick to Black Shoes and Stockings or Must Look for Other Work.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, March 18.—A ban has been put upon feminine superstyles by the Mountain States Telephone Company and "central" will not be a fashion plate in the future if a suggestion, tantamount to an order issued by the company, is accepted by the pretty operators in their employ. The high "chicken" shoes of white, gray and putty shades with stockings to match, now in vogue, and crepe de chine waists are to be exiled for the sake of efficiency. The girls may wear them "after hours," but during business hours the company will recognize only black shoes and stockings to match only to be d'riguer.

The reason is femininity's proneness to envy. It was discovered that some of the dressier operators had more income than others to purchase the extreme styles, and that other operators just as dressily inclined were eating their young hearts out with envy and instead of answering calls were enviously admiring Mabel's new "chicken" boots.

Why Preserve Your Teeth---and Neglect Your Hair?

—Is It Because Your Hair Does Not Ache?

Prof. John H. Austin, eminent bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, now at Hamburger's, says that the hair should be given the same daily care and attention as the other parts of the human body. There are not seven people in ten who pay one-half the attention to their hair that they do to their teeth. Why is this? Is not the hair the crowning glory of all nature's gifts? Is not a woman robbed of her beauty, when she is robbed of her hair?

About Ten Million Dollars is Spent Yearly to Prevent Troubles of the Teeth.

Now—How Much is Spent in Prevention of Baldness?

Not a half of that sum. And why? Simply because the hair does not cause you pain. Simply because you forget about your hair except when you comb it. If your hair could only cause you pain, there would not be nearly as many cases of baldness as there are now.

Men and women—do not wait until some scalp trouble has started your hair falling out, do not wait until you are nearly bald—it may then be too late to preserve your hair.

The right remedy at the right time is a certain cure. Guesswork is of no practical value concerning hair troubles. The exact ailment with which your scalp is afflicted must first be known before it can be intelligently treated. Prof Austin can determine this by turning a powerful microscope upon your hair and scalp. He has had 37 years' experience in conditions of the hair and scalp—surely it's worth a few moments of your time to take advantage of this free examination.

During the past year Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp for Hamburger patrons—and they enthusiastically appreciate this free service.

By showing you the roots of your own hair—magnified thousands of times, pointing out to you the parasites that are destroying your hair day by day, gradually killing every root until the head becomes entirely bald—you will be convinced that any use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonic, vaseline, and elixirs is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

Many people ask if hair troubles are contagious—they are. Even cases have been reported, in which husband or wife has contracted dandruff after marriage, he or she having been, before, free of the ailment. Then those experiments of Lassar and Bishop, two great scientists, point to the same conclusion. They took the scales from the head of a student who was losing his hair, and, after having made a pomade of them with vaseline, rubbed the same into the back of a guinea pig, and the pig became bald. You cannot tell when you may become afflicted with some scalp trouble. Find out now how to prevent it, and find out now how to cure it.

See Prof. Austin any day this week—both men and women are invited to take advantage of this Free Microscopic Examination of the hair and scalp, in Prof. Austin's private office, Second Floor, Hamburger's—hours 10 to 12 and 2 to 4.

Sixty-fourth Congress.

ARMY INCREASE BILL IS RUSHED.

House to Begin Discussion of Details Tomorrow.

Senate Measure Provides for Still Larger Force.

Will Sidetrack All Business to Push it Through.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—With virtually unanimous declarations for national preparedness, the House army increase bill reached the amendment stage today after ten hours of one-sided general debate. The House will begin discussion of details in earnest Monday, but there are indications that opposition to the measure as a change in national policy has collapsed. No opponent appeared during the debate except Meyer London, the Socialist Representative from New York.

The Senate's army bill also will come up Monday with administration leaders urging that the Senate sidetrack all other business until it is disposed of. Interest centered tonight in President Wilson's attitude as between these two measures, which differ essentially.

Chairman Hay of the House Military Committee described the House bill during debate today as "the President's own bill." Republican Leader Mann questioned the accuracy of this.

"Doubtless the President favors the best he can obtain," Mr. Mann said. "I have no doubt he favors it over the existing law."

WILSON NONCOMMITTAL.

Tonight President Wilson let it be known that while he approves the general features of the Hay bill, he has not committed himself to its details. Administration officials are looking to the conference committee which will adjust the House and Senate bills after passage, to produce a measure which will have the President's full approval.

Speaker Clark closed the general debate in the House, expressing approval of the Hay bill and declared it was satisfactory to the average American and as good as could be expected under the circumstances. The nation as a whole, he said, wished to hold a middle course.

"They want peace," he said, "but not peace at any price. They want peace with honor. They believe thoroughly that there are things worth fighting for. They are not willing to bankrupt the country on military and naval preparations. They are, however, willing to spend all that is necessary for the public defense."

Representative Mann characterized the bill as inadequate to the nation's need, saying it would provide for preparedness for peace, not for war.

MANN'S CONTENTION.

"I believe," he continued, "that it is the duty of the United States to prepare now an army which will add weight to diplomatic suggestions we make. The time has come when it is wise for us to consider the future and prepare now for what may come to us. If we do not, we may regret it to the end of our lives.

"We are having a little trouble on the border of Mexico and are sending a few soldiers into that country. The time for this came after we had had troops on the border for four years in contemplation of that very thing. Yet when this trouble occurred these troops were not actually sent across the border until the House had passed a resolution ordering an increase of 20,000 men to the places of the few soldiers who might cross.

"Never was there a more pat illustration than that of the fact that the present army and the proposed increase in it while sufficient in times of actual peace, would not be sufficient in time of war, or when any occasion arises for even a miniature war, and today we have the greatest war of the ages going on."

KAHN SPEAKS FOR NAVY.

Representative Kahn, ranking Republican member of the committee, in closing the debate for the minority side, said that after all the first line of defense was the navy and that it was more essential to put the navy on a footing where it could maintain control of the sea against any enemy than it was to build up an army. While the navy controlled the sea, he added, no invader could reach American shores.

Consideration of amendments began immediately on the close of debate. The only change made today was to raise the rank of the chief of coast artillery from a brigadier to major-general. An amendment by Representative Gardner, Republican, of Massachusetts, to increase the committee's figures for additional men in the coast artillery corps from 17,000 to 22,000 was voted down, without division, but after considerable argument.

When the House adjourned Representative Kahn had pending an amendment proposing a total authorized peace strength of 220,000 for the regular army instead of the committee's figure of 140,000. It will be taken up Monday, and a test vote may come over its disposition.

CLARK TAKES THE FLOOR.

Speaker Clark declared the bill was as good as could be expected under the circumstances and predicted it would have the general support of the country.

Summing up what he believed to be the view of the American people on the present situation, he said:

"They are unalterably opposed, always have been and forever will be, until the republic is on its last legs, to a large standing army, because, while we have never had a big standing army, they know full well that in other countries huge standing armies have been the instruments of despotism.

"They have no desire or ambition to have our country pose as a great military power, and they have no intention of seeing it as helpless as China.

"The average American is in favor of reasonable and adequate preparation by land and sea."

ABANDON PARTISANSHIP.

Speaker Clark pleaded for abandonment of partisanship in consideration of the army increases and commended the Military Committee for standing unanimously behind the bill. Democratic and Republican committeemen, he said, had "worked together in a brotherly and patriotic spirit."

"This is another illustration," Mr. Clark continued, "of a theory I have long maintained—that when there is any great question up in the House affecting the honor, glory or safety of the republic, politics has no place here.

"On such momentous occasions we are all plain Americans, intent upon doing our duty—our whole duty—to our country and our kind. It would be well, not only for our citizens, but for all the nations of the earth, to make a note of that pregnant fact, thereby avoiding trouble. I am fain to believe that this bill will pass the House with the same unanimity with which it was reported from the Military Committee.

"The committee, ignoring the extremists at both ends of the line, has brought in a bill representing to a remarkable degree the wishes of our countrymen generally. Of course, here and there will be found one who does not think this bill goes far enough and one who thinks it goes too far; but the average American will indorse it, and after all is said and done the average American constitutes the strength and glory of the republic."

The Speaker said that his views on the preparedness question had been gleaned from talking to men in all walks of life in thirty-one States where he filled speaking engagements since the agitation started.

The Speaker was applauded frequently on both sides of the chamber.

THE SENATE BILL.

The Senate military bill proposes a total peace strength for the army of 194,586 enlisted men and 10,726 officers. The figures are contained in the report on the bill made public today which was compiled by the army war college. The war-time strength would be 236,000 enlisted men.

The Senate bill would add the following organizations to the existing force, besides reorganizing the army:

Infantry, thirty-four one-half regiments; cavalry, ten regiments; field artillery, fifteen regiments; engineers, five regiments; coast artillery, ninety-three companies; mounted engineers, two battalions; seven aero squadrons.

The House bill proposes to add:

Infantry, ten regiments; field artillery, six regiments; coast artillery, fifty-two companies; engineers, fifteen companies; four aero squadrons.

Another difference between the bills is in the minimum strength fixed for the National Guard under the proposed Federalization provisions. The Senate bill provides for 280,000, while the House bill calls for 425,000 in five years.

The report on the Senate bill lays stress on its proposal for a third force to take in men who for any reason would not be found in the ranks of the regulars or the National Guard. This is described as a purely Federal volunteer force and in effect it is comparable to a continental army. A total strength of 261,000 in this force is provided for.

The House bill aims at the same force through authorization of the training-camp movement which has been in progress for two years.

The full strength of the defensive armies provided under the Senate bill would be 777,000 men in war times, exclusive of reserves.

Day of Grace Lost to Enemies, Declares Newspaper.

Ought to Have Made Peace on December Last.

Complete Unity Exists Among Advisers of Kaiser.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, March 17 (via London, March 18.)—Germany's enemies, in not taking advantage of the announcement of Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg December 9, that Germany would consider peace proposals whenever her foes are willing to ask terms, have lost the day of grace. This is the conclusion to be drawn from a leading article in the semi-official Lokal Anzeiger, in which it is declared flatly the time has now come to carry out the Chancellor's warning of December that if the enemies of this country did not ask for peace in a reasonable period they would have to pay more dearly for it. The Lokal Anzeiger says:

"According to everything one hears one must be convinced that our responsible statesmen, in complete agreement with the military leaders, now occupy a different attitude toward the general situation than they occupied when the Chancellor expressed our readiness to enter into peace negotiations under certain conditions.

"Everyone has to conclude that the leading men in the enemy camp lost all vision of the attainable, all understanding of the hard, immutable facts which already had developed, and have since that time only accumulated in greater extent.

"Without a threatening gesture, but with unshakable certainty, the Chancellor announced at that time that any continuation of the war must make sharper the conditions under which we should be forced to indemnify ourselves for the sacrifices wrung from the German people. It cannot be doubted that every means of power which is at our disposal must be resorted to unconditionally."

The Lokal Anzeiger assures its readers that a complete unity in aims and ideas exists among the responsible leaders, although it is impossible to make their plans known publicly. These involve, however, says the newspaper, the waging of the war to a victory with all the weapons available. The article closes with a rebuke to those who draw false conclusions from an incomplete knowledge of the facts and warns against irresponsible criticism of the leaders.

WASHINGTON, March 18.—The income tax will place in the United States Treasury this year approximately $100,000,000, or $15,000,000 more than was estimated last fall, according to preliminary estimates compiled today by the internal revenue bureau. Returns last year were about $80,000,000 and the new figure is a record.

The estimates which cover both individual and corporation returns are based on telegraphic reports from virtually all revenue districts. So far $19,484,000 has been collected.

TIRPITZ RESIGNATION GERMANY'S FIRST CRISIS.

Cologne "Gazette" Declares it Signalizes the Principal Upheaval that has so Far Occurred in that Country While Enemies of the Fatherland Have had Several Reorganizations Since War Began.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

BERLIN, March 17, (via London, March 18.)—The Cologne Gazette says that the resignation of Admiral von Tirpitz signalizes the first serious crisis in Germany since the beginning of the war, whereas in hostile countries there have been several reorganizations of ministries.

The Gazette says the admiral's retirement does not signify abandonment of the submarine campaign, which, as is shown by news dispatches of the last few weeks in regard to the submarine activity, is in full swing.

It is not yet known publicly, the Gazette continues, whether or to what extent the admiral's resignation was connected with the submarine question, but there appears incipient signs in the press, the Rechstag and the Prussian Chamber, that an effort is being made to bring public opinion to the view that submarines should not be used to such an extent and in such a manner as is necessitated by war, which is only another name for a means of subduing the enemies of the nation by force. The newspaper argues that such an attempt to bring the pressure of public opinion to bear upon Germany's methods of conducting the war does not harmonize with German military traditions.

This argument is supported by a long diversion into the recent history of France, Italy and Russia to prove that public opinion drives the military authorities into disastrous strategy.

"The Emperor at the same time ordered that the name of Admiral von Tirpitz should continue in the navy list and further bestowed upon him the star of Grand Commander of the Order of the House of Hohenzollern with swords."

ARMORED MOTOR CAR DASH ROUTS DESERT TRIBESMEN.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

LONDON, March 18.—An armored car section under the command of the Duke of Westminster played a leading part in the defeat and dispersal of tribesmen under command of Turkish officers on the western frontier of Egypt by the forces under the command of Maj.-Gen. Peyton. After an aeroplane reconnaissance disclosed that Birwar had been evacuated, motorists were ordered to push forward with "reasonable boldness."

Ignoring the armed Bedoins, who were proceeding westward, the motorists dashed into the enemy's camp, twenty-five miles west of Sollum, says an official report issued tonight on the progress of the campaign, shooting down the gun crews and scattering the hostile force. [illegible] shipwrecked sailors who had been on the Cyrenaica, and had been seized by the Senussi, were rescued. The report concludes:

"In three weeks the force under Maj.-Gen. Peyton has captured the hostile commander, killed or captured about 50 per cent. of the Turkish subordinate commanders, has driven and scattered the remainder of his force far beyond the Egyptian border, and has taken all his artillery and machine guns."

Why Preserve Your Teeth---and Neglect Your Hair?

—Is It Because Your Hair Does Not Ache?

Prof. John H. Austin, eminent bacteriologist, hair and scalp specialist of Chicago, now at Hamburger's, says that the hair should be given the same daily care and attention as the other parts of the human body. There are not seven people in ten who pay one-half the attention to their hair that they do to their teeth. Why is this? Is not the hair the crowning glory of all nature's gifts? Is not a woman robbed of her beauty, when she is robbed of her hair?

About Ten Million Dollars is Spent Yearly to Prevent Troubles of the Teeth.

Now—How Much is Spent in Prevention of Baldness?

Not a half of that sum. And why? Simply because the hair does not cause you pain. Simply because you forget about your hair except when you comb it. If your hair could only cause you pain, there would not be nearly as many cases of baldness as there are now.

Men and women—do not wait until some scalp trouble has started your hair falling out, do not wait until you are nearly bald—it may then be too late to preserve your hair.

The right remedy at the right time is a certain cure. Guesswork is of no practical value concerning hair troubles. The exact ailment with which your scalp is afflicted must first be known before it can be intelligently treated. Prof Austin can determine this by turning a powerful miscroscope upon your hair and scalp. He has had 37 years' experience in conditions of the hair and scalp—surely it's worth a few moments of your time to take advantage of this free examination.

During the past year Prof. Austin has made thousands of free microscopic examinations of the hair and scalp for Hamburger patrons—and they enthusiastically appreciate this free service.

By showing you the roots of your own hair—magnified thousands of times, pointing out to you the parasites that are destroying your hair day by day, gradually killing every root until the head becomes entirely bald—you will be convinced that any use of mange cures, dandruff cures, hair tonic, vaseline, and elixirs is like taking medicine without knowing what you are trying to cure.

Many people ask if hair troubles are contagious—they are. Even cases have been reported, in which husband or wife has contracted dandruff after marriage, he or she having been, before, free of the ailment. Then those experiments of Lassar and Bishop, two great scientists, point to the same conclusion. They took the scales from the head of a student who was losing his hair, and, after having made a pomade of them with vaseline, rubbed the same into the back of a guinea pig, and the pig became bald. You cannot tell when you may become afflicted with some scalp trouble. Find out now how to prevent it, and find out now how to cure it.

See Prof. Austin any day this week—both men and women are invited to take advantage of this Free Microscopic Examination of the hair and scalp, in Prof. Austin's private office, Second Floor, Hamburger's—hours 10 to 12 and 2 to 4.

Sixty-fourth Congress.

ARMY INCREASE BILL IS RUSHED.

House to Begin Discussion of Details Tomorrow.

Senate Measure Provides for Still Larger Force.

Will Sidetrack All Business to Push it Through.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—With virtually unanimous declarations for national preparedness, the House army increase bill reached the amendment stage today after ten hours of one-sided general debate. The House will begin discussion of details in earnest Monday, but there are indications that opposition to the measure as a change in national policy has collapsed. No opponent appeared during the debate except Meyer London, the Socialist Representative from New York.

The Senate's army bill also will come up Monday with administration leaders urging that the Senate sidetrack all other business until it is disposed of. Interest centered tonight in President Wilson's attitude as between these two measures, which differ essentially.

Chairman Hay of the House Military Committee described the House bill during debate today as "the President's own bill." Republican Leader Mann questioned the accuracy of this.

"Doubtless the President favors the best he can obtain," Mr. Mann said. "I have no doubt he favors it over the existing law."

WILSON NONCOMMITTAL.

Tonight President Wilson let it be known that while he approves the general features of the Hay bill, he has not committed himself to its details. Administration officials are looking to the conference committee which will adjust the House and Senate bills after passage, to produce a measure which will have the President's full approval.

Speaker Clark closed the general debate in the House, expressing approval of the Hay bill and declared it was satisfactory to the average American and as good as could be expected under the circumstances. The nation as a whole, he said, wished to hold a middle course.

"They want peace," he said, "but not peace at any price. They want peace with honor. They believe thoroughly that there are things worth fighting for. They are not willing to bankrupt the country on military and naval preparations. They are, however, willing to spend all that is necessary for the public defense."

Representative Mann characterized the bill as inadequate to the nation's need, saying it would provide for preparedness for peace, not for war.

MANN'S CONTENTION.

"I believe," he continued, "that it is the duty of the United States to prepare now an army which will add weight to diplomatic suggestions we make. The time has come when it is wise for us to consider the future and prepare now for what may come to us. If we do not, we may regret it to the end of our lives.

"We are having a little trouble on the border of Mexico and are sending a few soldiers into that country. The time for this came after we had had troops on the border for four years in contemplation of that very thing. Yet when this trouble occurred these troops were not actually sent across the border until the House had passed a resolution ordering an increase of 20,000 men to the places of the few soldiers who might cross.

"Never was there a more pat illustration than that of the fact that the present army and the proposed increase in it while sufficient in times of actual peace, would not be sufficient in time of war, or when any occasion arises for even a miniature war, and today we have the greatest war of the ages going on."

KAHN SPEAKS FOR NAVY.

Representative Kahn, ranking Republican member of the committee, in closing the debate for the minority side, said that after all the first line of defense was the navy and that it was more essential to put the navy on a footing where it could maintain control of the sea against any enemy than it was to build up an army. While the navy controlled the sea, he added, no invader could reach American shores.

Consideration of amendments began immediately on the close of debate. The only change made today was to raise the rank of the chief of coast artillery from a brigadier to major-general. An amendment by Representative Gardner, Republican, of Massachusetts, to increase the committee's figures for additional men in the coast artillery corps from 17,000 to 22,000 was voted down, without division, but after considerable argument.

When the House adjourned Representative Kahn had pending an amendment proposing a total authorized peace strength of 220,000 for the regular army instead of the committee's figure of 140,000. It will be taken up Monday, and a test vote may come over its disposition.

CLARK TAKES THE FLOOR.

Speaker Clark declared the bill was as good as could be expected under the circumstances and predicted it would have the general support of the country.

Summing up what he believed to be the view of the American people on the present situation, he said:

"They are unalterably opposed, always have been and forever will be, until the republic is on its last legs, to a large standing army, because, while we have never had a big standing army, they know full well that in other countries huge standing armies have been the instruments of despotism.

"They have no desire or ambition to have our country pose as a great military power, and they have no intention of seeing it as helpless as China.

"The average American is in favor of reasonable and adequate preparation by land and sea."

ABANDON PARTISANSHIP.

Speaker Clark pleaded for abandonment of partisanship in consideration of the army increases and commended the Military Committee for standing unanimously behind the bill. Democratic and Republican committeemen, he said, had "worked together in a brotherly and patriotic spirit."

"This is another illustration," Mr. Clark continued, "of a theory I have long maintained—that when there is any great question up in the House affecting the honor, glory or safety of the republic, politics has no place here.

"On such momentous occasions we are all plain Americans, intent upon doing our duty—our whole duty—to our country and our kind. It would be well, not only for our citizens, but for all the nations of the earth, to make a note of that pregnant fact, thereby avoiding trouble. I am fain to believe that this bill will pass the House with the same unanimity with which it was reported from the Military Committee.

"The committee, ignoring the extremists at both ends of the line, has brought in a bill representing to a remarkable degree the wishes of our countrymen generally. Of course, here and there will be found one who does not think this bill goes far enough and one who thinks it goes too far; but the average American will indorse it, and after all is said and done the average American constitutes the strength and glory of the republic."

The Speaker said that his views on the preparedness question had been gleaned from talking to men in all walks of life in thirty-one States where he filled speaking engagements since the agitation started.

The Speaker was applauded frequently on both sides of the chamber.

SAN DIEGO EXPOSITION BEGINS ITS SECOND YEAR.

Thirty-five Thousand Persons Take Part in the Rededication of the Splendid Monument to Southern California Enterprise — Secretary Lane Represents the President at the Celebration.

BY LEWIS HAVERMALE.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN DIEGO, March 18.—San Diego wrote history today. The marvelous is accomplished. A great exposition, after running its allotted time, has "come back—enhanced with a wealth of new exhibits, enlarged in vision and with a scope that includes pre-eminently the great Southwest, and to a gratifying degree the nations of the world.

The 1916 Panama-California International Exposition is a thing of reality. Its formal opening, starting this morning and lasting throughout the day and this evening, is a glorification of achievement—a revivifying of a great enterprise made possible by the dauntless combined effort of San Diego, Los Angeles and Southern California in particular and the State in general, with potent assistance of foreign exhibitors. It is now really an international exposition.

Granada has its marvelous Alhambra, a delight to the artistic eye and source of inspiration; San Diego has a charming Moorish-Spanish creation of exposition architecture, simply fascinating to all beholders and massed in a setting of semitropic verdure. Fairs of the world have their gathered portrayals of commerce and art; California has its massed exhibits of industry and displays of development of widely varied scope in the brilliant array at the exposition beautiful. Nations have their noted collections and displays at their central points; but in the 1916 Panama-California International Exposition at San Diego they have an ensemble of art and skilled handiwork and the cultivated products of nature that form an object lesson on the world's development.

A THING OF BEAUTY.

Never before were the exposition grounds so beautiful. Never were the buildings's interiors so harmoniously arranged as now. At no time has the Isthmus been so attractive to amusement seekers. Twenty national exhibits have been added to the previous attractions and some of the best concessions from San Francisco have found place on the Isthmus. Among the foreign exhibits are those from [illegible], Germany, Brazil, Italy, China, Japan, Egypt, Spain, Austria, India, [illegible], Switzerland, Holland, France, Philippine Islands, Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, Persia, Turkey. Greece and the government exhibit is one of rare excellence. The art treasures have been greatly increased and the general display in many lines has been extended. Southern California is better represented than ever, and this is an exhibit alone worth the trip to San Diego to view.

The spirit of San Diego today is fully as jubilant and hopeful as at the opening of the original exposition. This city is highly appreciative of the cordial co-operation that has been extended by Los Angeles—assistance that made possible the continuation of the exposition on a larger scale than had been anticipated. Through the event which culminated today, all Southern California has been knit in closer bonds and through the influences of this exposition, the fame of California is to be spread more thoroughly to the very corners of the earth.

THOUSANDS THERE.

About thirty-five thousand people participated in the exposition opening. Came first the dedicatory parade, one of the largest military pageants ever witnessed in San Diego. From the foot of Broadway to the exposition grounds all branches of the army and navy in and about this city marched in brilliant array. The course was lined with spectators, and each section, as it appeared headed by the American colors, was loudly cheered. Review of the troops occurred in Plaza de Panama.

Then began the formal dedicatory exercises, held in the open air, with a canopy of Spanish colors over the speaker's stand. President Davidson reviewed the work that has been accomplished, and especially complimenting Los Angeles on its part in the work. Former Senator Bulla, first vice-president of the exposition, then took charge and spoke on the scope of the new exposition.

FORMAL GREETINGS.

Mayor Capps of San Diego extended the formal greetings of the exposition city and read telegrams of congratulation and well wishes from all parts of the United States. R. W. Pridham, as chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Los Angeles county, extended the greetings of that territory and pledged the strong co-operation of Los Angeles toward making the 1916 exposition a great success and a benefit to the entire State. President Mitchell of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce spoke briefly, expressing similar sentiments.

[illegible] Rainey, representing Mayor Rolph of San Francisco, who was unable to come because of illness, declared he headed a delegation of one hundred men and women who had come from the Bay City to show their good will for the enterprise and their determination to aid in its success.

"We believe that this exposition, like our own, will be a great benefit to all of California," said he, "and we believe that we shall never be through reaping the benefits of these two expositions."

Vice-President Carl E. Heilbron spoke of the enlarged scope of the exposition, and presented to the great throng Miss San Diego, a beautiful girl in Spanish costume, who raised the exposition flag on the main flagstaff while Tommasino's Royal Italian Band played "The Star Spangled Banner" and all the multitude stood and cheered.

After raising of the exposition flag by Miss San Diego, the charming young woman was presented with a string of pearls and her scepter by the exposition officials. Immediately she was besieged with congratulations from friends and hundreds of strangers.

SALUTES FIRED.

The hour of high noon arrived; in the White House at Washington Secretary Daniels, acting for President Wilson, pressed the key that set ringing a great gong in the center of Plaza de Panama. On this signal salutes were fired from ships in the harbor, whistles were opened wide in all parts of San Diego; a great cheer came from the throats of thousands of people; flags were simultaneously raised at the various foreign exhibits; the doors of halls and assembly-rooms were flung wide open, aircraft preened high in the azure over the exposition grounds, and a great cloud of pigeons circled and swirled out and around the plaza. President Davidson stepped to the fore and solemnly declared that by the authority in him vested the exposition formally opened.

Then appeared a bevy of young ladies and young men, in Spanish costume, bearing trays filled with glasses of orange juice and participants in the programme drank this toast to the success of the 1916 exposition, given by President Davidson.

"May our exposition be a successful one in the highest possible sense. May happiness and prosperity abide in our land and peace be speedily restored throughout the world."

FROM SECRETARY DANIELS.

A telegram sent by Secretary Daniels the moment after he had pressed the key that gave the opening signal, was read as follows:

"Representing the President and voicing the interest of the whole American people in the magnificent exposition, embracing the best from San Francisco as well as the San Diego exposition, I congratulate the people of California upon providing an exhibition that will attract visitors from all parts of the republic."

Immediately following these formalities an address was given by Count del Valle de Salazar, representative of the King of Spain, after which he raised the Spanish flag amidst cheering.

Count Salazar declared he had been deeply touched with the delicacy and veneration with which San Diego and California view the early days of Spanish regime. Speaking of the exposition he declared it "profoundly artistic," and said that many languages of the world have phrased its beauties, but no word picture could do it justice.

"The excellency of this harmonious masterpiece is appreciated all over the world," said this speaker, "and we are delighted to know that most of the beautiful buildings will be permanent as splendid examples and inspirations from Spanish-Moorish architecture."

Gov. Johnson spoke on what the exposition means to California, declaring that San Diego is doing a loyal service to the entire State in continuing the exposition. Referring to the early history of this city he declared that San Diego was to California what Plymouth Rock was to the Atlantic Coast—the advance post of civilization.

LANE'S ADDRESS.

The main address was given by Secretary of the Interior Lane, appearing as the personal representative of President Wilson.

Secretary Lane said, in part:

"You call this an international exposition because there are exhibited here the products of the minds and fingers of some thirty or more nations. They show to us porcelains and silks, pictures and statues, carvings and carpets, finer than any that we can show, but in return we show to them a continent conquered and civilized in a century, a people more fertile in imagination than any that the world has ever known, and enterprises of greater magnitude than Caesar or Napoleon ever dreamed of.

"This is a fitting place for such an exposition. We stand upon the rim of the continent. The Aryan race, which was born in the other hemisphere, has encircled the globe and has come back to report to its wise and aged mother the story of its great adventure. What has this nation to say to those who lie before it and round about it? We answer that we have come to know that this world is made not for the gratification of the desire of a few but for the benefit of the many; that power must be common capital; that nature, not man, is the enemy man must conquer, and that the world belongs to him who reclaims the desert, who bores the mountains, who must swiftly sail the sea and most surely master the air; who, with plow and microscope, furnace and blow pipe, test tube and machine, makes this world serve mankind best.

"To conquer nature man broke down the gates of the Garden of Eden and came forth to meet the challenge of an unorderly world. For ten times ten thousand years he has been engaged in this conquest. Trench after trench he has taken, hilltop after hilltop and no one can dare to say what shall be the limit of his progress. A thousand years hence I have no doubt the world will see another international exposition beside this very bay and then will realize that the high purpose of democracy is to prove it is the conqueror of the world by being its supreme servant."

Following the dedication, Tommasino's Royal Italian Band gave a concert, and birdmen gave spectacular exhibitions. The Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce excursionists were tendered a buffet lunch by Charles H. Wilson and a concert was given by the City Guard Band in Aviation Field. During the afternoon Dr. Humphrey J. Stewart gave an organ recital on the exposition big outdoor organ and the throngs visited the exhibits and the Isthmus, where all concessions were in full blast.

Informality marked the afternoon and evening programme. Whirring aeroplanes gracefully flying high above the crowds against the blue sky, heavy perfume of orange blossoms from the grove of the Model Farm, music of bands and Spanish musicians and dancers, and the beautiful gardens, all gave one an impression of fairyland. The gay-colored sweaters and sport coats of the feminine portion of the crowd added much to the beauty of the scene, for they were of every color of the rainbow.

The Spanish dancers and troubadours, led by La Bella Sevilla, who were such a charming part of the exposition last year, made their first appearance, dancing in the California Quadrangle and from there wandered all about the grounds, lending color in their native dress.

AEROPLANE APPEARS.

At 3 o'clock, on schedule time, the first aeroplane from North Island came into view, soon followed by a second and then the third, fourth and fifth. Owing to great crowds, the aviators did not alight on the grounds, but circled gracefully above for many minutes. The pilots were Lieut. Thomas DeWitt Milling, Oscar A. Brindley, Lieut. J. F. Curry, Lieut. Roy Brown and Lieut. Ralph Royce. Out on the bay, Francis Wildman flew a Curtiss flying boat. The other machines were Martin tractors used in government service. The pilots gave a fine exhibition of the work of this branch of the army.

Although thousands flocked to the beautiful court known as the "Court of Leap Year," adjacent to the botanical buildings, the dedication was called off as the bachelors, overcome with shyness, did not appear. Instead, Tommassino's Royal Italian Band and the Milan Grand Opera Singers gave a concert.

From then until the hour of the big dedication dinner in the Cristobal, the crowds visited the exhibits, wandered about the gardens or frolicked on the Isthmus.

Practically all of the business houses were closed during the afternoon, a general half holiday being declared for San Diego. The crowds were greatly augmented during afternoon and evening.

Tonight the hills of San Diego have been bathed in the splendor of red fire. From all vantage points lurid blazes have ascended skyward. Around the tower of the California Building twenty-four cauldrons sent upward their crimson flames.

ELECTRIC DISPLAY.

The electric display was at full height, both on the exposition grounds and throughout the city. Four huge flashes were set in the center of the exposition grounds and the sky scintillated with pyrotechnic displays. Detonations resounded throughout the entire city. There were set pieces and fusillades of reds and greens and yellows and blues in rockets and showers and set pieces. On the bay the armored cruisers were fully illuminated and searchlights swept the waters and the fair city lying before them.

Tonight is one of special merriment on the Isthmus. Here San Diego and all its visitors have turned themselves loose to enjoy a night of merriment. The place is a blaze of light, a blare of music and filled with laughter and song. Confetti is showered on everyone until it forms a soft carpeting underfoot. Gay festivities are in progress at Cafe Cristobal on the exposition grounds. The elite of San Diego is present, with scores of notable outside guests.

The dinner was the biggest in point of attendance ever held on the exposition grounds. More than a thousand were seated at the tables and hundreds were turned away for three hours or more, unable to get reservations.

The great dining hall was simply decorated with the American and the exposition colors and there was a lively cabaret. Guests danced between courses throughout the entire evening. At President Davidson's table were seated 160 official guests of the exposition, including visiting representatives from other governments, States and counties and heads of the various exhibits.

OUT-DOOR BALL.

Following the dinner came the brilliant out-of-door ball in the Plaza de Panama. This scene was one of beauty and brilliancy. The great plaza, surrounded by the picturesque buildings, made a charming setting for the dancers.

Official guests of the exposition who came from the president's dinner were in evening dress, the women in exquisite creations of fashion, the beauty of which was enhanced by the gold braid and gold lace of military uniforms of many of the men.

Miss San Diego (Miss Marian Vogdes) in her becoming Spanish costume and carrying the sceptre presented to her by President Davidson, led the grand march, preceded by six military aides in full dress uniform. Then followed Secretary of the Interior Lane and Mrs. Davidson, President Davidson and Mrs. Lane, Gov. Johnson and Countess de Salazar, Count de Salazar and Mrs. Johnson, Admiral McRae Winslow, commander of the Pacific fleet and Mrs. Uriel Sebree, chairman of the Woman's Exposition Board, Admiral Sebree and Mrs. Fullam, Admiral Fullam and Mrs. Winslow. And after them came all of the military officers, the visiting mayors, governors and representatives of the various governments exhibiting at the exposition.

Among those present at the dinner at the Cafe Cristobal were:

Your Teeth

By Dr. T. W. Young

Among the endowments of nature toward the formation of perfect man, are THE TEETH.

They are among the most eminent characteristics of the human body and are most essential to health, happiness and beauty.

Heredity, Diet and Accidents.

Through hereditary influences, improper diet and accidental causes, the teeth are more or less destroyed, but it is rare in this day and age to find a young or middle-aged person minus all teeth.

Imitative restoration of nature is now possible to a greater extent than ever before. When two or more teeth are in the mouth it is possible, not only to replace the lost teeth, but improve upon and correct the irregularities of nature.

Where the teeth are misshapen, irregular, discolored or missing, I can replace them without the use of unsightly gold crowns or cumbersome plates. The result is comfort and utility with an appearance that is rivaled only by nature herself.

For the past fifteen years I have made a specialty of extracting with Vitalized Air, often extracting as many as fifty teeth in a day, and have yet, when using to have a patient say they felt a tooth being extracted. I use no gas, cocaine or any harmful drugs, and consequently, eliminate the bad after effects which are often worse than the original trouble.

My prices for all work are very reasonable and I will be glad at any time to examine your mouth and tell you what can be done in your particular case.

Railroad Fire Insurance Adjuster Here after Looking Into Santa Fe Losses at Woodward—No Other American Engaged in His Line of Work.

James L. Holden of Chicago, noted authority on the adjustment of railroad fire losses, arrived at the Lankershim yesterday after conducting an investigation of the recent freight wreck and fire on the Santa Fe at Woodward. Mr. Holden has the distinction of being the only railroad fire insurance adjuster in America. He represents more than twenty of the larger insurance companies, including Lloyds of London, the Phenix of London, the Liverpool, London and Globe and several of the Hartford companies.

During the thirty years he has been adjusting fire losses he says he has averaged more than 200 nights per year in a sleeping-car berth. During this time, according to a record he has kept, he has traveled more than 1,500,000 miles. His travels have taken him into every State and Territory in the United States, Canada and Mexico. He has adjusted losses on more than 3000 locomotives, 500 Pullmans, 10,000 freight cars and 5000 coaches. His adjustments on merchandise destroyed by fire while in transit total more than $1,500,000.

His record adjustment was made two years ago at Port Huron, Mich., when the shops of the Grand Trunk Railway burned and destroyed several locomotives, scores of cars and hundreds of complicated instruments, in addition to the shop machinery and warehouse material. The loss was adjusted for more than $500,000.

EX-SOLDIER ACCUSED.

Former Quartermaster of Co. F, Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., Arrested on Charge of Grand Larceny. Unable to Account for Property in His Care.

Charged by the police with being unable to account for about $500 worth of rifles, revolvers and clothing, Harry C. Brown, ex-quartermaster of Co. F, Seventh Regiment, N.G.C., was arrested early last night on suspicion of grand larceny.

According to Detectives McMahon and Cherry, who made the arrest, Brown was quartermaster of Co. F under Capt. F. R. McReynolds. They both left the company and a short time ago Mr. McReynolds discovered that a large amount of the company's property was missing.

Investigations made by the police, according to them, show that Brown took the stuff while quartermaster and sold it to different persons about the city. Some of the clothing was recovered by the police.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS ARE LONG-WINDED.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

BERLIN, Jan. 20.—The Social Democrats are the longest and most frequent speakers in the Prussian Diet, according to the minutes of the last session of that body, just published. Some one burning with curiosity on this point has checked up the minutes and extracted therefrom the exact number of times that the more prominent members took the floor.

Socialist Deputy Adolf Hoffmann takes the lead with eighty-four addresses, and Dr. Liebknecht, popular choice for first talker, runs second with seventy-two. A whole row of members of other parties come in at this point, but the Socialists, with Deputy Hirsch, come back at the figure forty-three and hold the field pretty well down to twenty speeches.

MOTHER! LOOK AT YOUR CHILD'S TONGUE

Give "California Syrup of Figs" If Cross, Feverish, Sick, Bilious, Constipated—They love it

Watch Children Now! Guard Against Colds, Grippe, Sore Throat and Sickness by Keeping Liver and Bowels Free from Poisons

A laxative today saves a sick child tomorrow. Children simply will not take the time from play to empty their bowels, which becomes clogged up with waste, liver gets sluggish; stomach sour.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, or your child is listless, cross, feverish, breath bad, restless, doesn't eat heartily, full of cold or has the grippe or a sore throat or any other children's ailment, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," then don't worry, because it is perfectly harmless and in a few hours all this constipation poison, sour bile and fermenting waste will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again. A thorough "inside cleansing" is ofttimes all that is necessary. It should be the first treatment given in any sickness.

Beware of counterfeit fig syrups. Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has full directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the bottle. See that it is made by the "California Fig Syrup Company." Don't merely ask for Syrup of Figs, but ask for "California Syrup of Figs." Remember, "California."

WAR HITS BUSINESS OF SOUTH AMERICA.

TRADE SUSPENDED FOR WANT OF CARRYING SHIPS.

Traveler Finds Docks and Warehouses Overflowing with Produce Unable to Reach Markets—American Capital Preparing to Turn Tide of Commerce to this Country.

Economic conditions in South America are in a chaotic state, according to Frank Strong Stott, of Stottsville, N. Y., a well-to-do globe trotter, who arived at the Clark yesterday, following a tour of South and Central America and the Hawaiian Islands. He says Argentina and Brazil have experienced a stagnation of industry as a result of the war, and the smaller countries are practically paralyzed industrially.

"This is due," said he, "to the withdrawing of commercial vessels, which are being used as auxiliary cruisers and transports abroad, in addition to the interning of approximately 100 German vessels which were in port at the otubreak of the war. South America has been left isolated from the markets where it formerly purchased supplies necessary to operate its factories, and has no merchant marine of its own with which to carry on its principal industry, export trade.

"In Brazil and other coffee growing countries, docks are jammed to overflowing and warehouses filled with countless millions of sacks of the product, which is of practically no value because of lack of marketing facilities. Cattle, hides and other products, can not be exported for the same reason. As a result, money is scarce and financial conditions are said to be at the lowest ebb in years.

"In Argentina, so serious has this money shortage become, the government has declared it a criminal offense to take gold out of the country. Men leaving the country are searched, and if gold is found in their baggage or on their person they are imprisoned and the money confiscated. Very little silver is in evidence, and practically all payments are made with paper money.

"The factories are working irregularly because of the shortage in fuel and other imported articles needed. Officials of the Armour Company, which operates in many sections of the South, were recently compelled to seek the services of the American Ambassador to Argentine, in order to obtain the release of a large quantity of drugs and chemicals which the Argentine government had refused to permit them to ship across the river to the plant in Uruguay. Each government has passed restrictive legislation regarding what articles may be taken from the country."

Mr. Stott says the National City Bank of New York has been loaning large sums of money to South American firms and has taken a considerable of the business from the English and German banks which formerly operated almost exclusively there. He predicts the major part of South American business will come to the United States at the close of the war, as a result of trade relationships established through New York firms during the last eighteen months.

Mr. Stott expects to be here until the middle of next month. He is a bachelor and professes great admiration for California women. "The only thing you need here in Los Angeles," he said, "is amusement. Tourists grow tired of the wonderful climate and scenery after a while and want to be diverted. There should be more life here. If you had a band or two giving afternoon and evening concerts in your parks, a casino and a race track where people could go for a few thrills when they felt like it, there is no place in the United States that could compete with you."

Service Station to be Built on Close-in Corner as Result of Lease.

The immediate erection of a modern service station at the southeast corner of Pico and Hope streets is assured as the result of a lease just concluded between Herbert Earlcliff, as lessor, and the Western Auto Electric Company as lessee. The site is 55x150 feet in size. Taylor MacDougal, with W. B. Merwin & Co., acted as agent in the transaction.

Mr. McDougal also reports having leased for Mrs. Eda S. Fenyes to the Franklin - Scripps - Booth agency, 51x120 feet at the southeast corner of Colorado and Vernon avenues in Pasadena. This site is now being improved with a fine garage and service station.

Weapons.

DEADLY DUMDUM BULLET IS USED BY MEXICANS.

If Americans Get in Close Touch with Villa They are Likely to be Shot at with Most Cruel and Dangerous Missile Known to Modern Warfare — Mostly Came from United States Sporting Goods Houses.

BY EDWARD C. CROSSMAN.

THE pleasant little dumdum or soft-point bullet will be the fate of many an American trooper if the invading column gets into touch with the cholos of Pancho Villa. The first scattering volley to mark the contact of advance guard with Mexican outpost will consist of the sharp-point service bullet from the American service new Springfield and missiles of any sort from the Mexican rifle. Probably half the Mexican ammunition is loaded with the unlawful, fiendish, lacerating, game-shooting bullet, the dumdum.

In the early days of the great European war charges of the use of dumdum bullets were bandied to and fro, mainly based on nothing save an effort to turn public sentiment against the opposing side or to prevent the sale from America of ammunition for the allies. Presently the coming of poisonous gas and the submarine paled the dumdum with all its terrors. We heard no more of the charges.

There is, unhappily, no doubt as to the sort of missile the American trooper has to face. So much of the ammunition now in the hands of Villa came through Los Angeles channels that 100 men in the city can testify to its character.

TYPE OF DUMDUM.

The dumdum, as it is known in military circles, is in this country merely a common jacket bullet as shot in high-power rifles with the jacket missing from the forward quarter-inch of the point instead of covering it completely as in strictly military bullets. The absence of this jacket of copper or copper-nickel makes the soft lead core of the bullet expand on striking flesh, tearing a great wound, lacerating blood vessels and so ruining internal organs that are hit as to make recovery usually impossible. Frightful bleeding even from a leg or arm wound is one of the dangers of being hit with this type of bullet.

By the agreement of civilized nations the use of this sort of missile is strictly forbidden because of its frightfulness and the unnecessary suffering it causes. It is used legitimately only on game, where it is more merciful than having the quarry escape wounded and die in solitude. In the Zulu fighting the British troops used a hollow-point bullet of much this type, and it was used also in the hill fighting in India, partly because Zulu and Hillman were not represented at the convention agreeing not to use such bullets, partly because they were hard to stop, like most uncivilized troops, and cruel bullets tore them enough to stop them.

The Mexican laws of warfare consisted of but one—get the other fellow, and get him quick. The means to the end were virtuous according to their efficiency. Cyanide in the water holes, soft-point bullets, mines on the roads to hoist the other fellow skyward and usually no quarter when taking prisoners all went to thin out the ranks of the opposing side.

The agents for Villa—and for that matter for every other Mexican faction—took any sort of bullet the factories or agents had around the place, so long as it fitted the rifles. Los Angeles agents for Villa bought up ammunition in small lots from every sporting goods store having any, and stocks such as the .30-30 and the 7 m.m. and the .30-40 in sporting goods stores are without exception soft-point bullets.

Hundreds of thousands of rounds of such ammunition have dribbled across the border in the past two years. Shortage because of the great war made the Mexican purchases of ammunition all the more carefree as to the sort of bullets included.

The piece de resistance of the Mexican arms is the American-made .30-30 rifle, usually the Winchester, and preferably the short carbine. Second bet is the Mexican service rifle, the 7-m.m. Mauser, made for the Mexican government under Diaz by Belgian factories many years ago.

When Villa started his "revolution" he started it with American .30-30 rifles. However, as fast as his pleasant little brown-faced companeros potted a Mexican regular, said little companero stripped the regular of his service Mauser and all his ammunition, and some later "rookie" got the less desirable .30-30 American rifle. Presently the Mauser became the style in the Villa army and no doubt in the heyday of his glory, when he took Torreon, he had more of the good Mausers than of the American rifle.

However, he has gone through various vicissitudes since and again his force is armed with more of the inferior .30-30 than of the better Mauser.

From a fighting standpoint the .30-30 is not a good rifle because it does not shoot flat, is not very accurate, has not the range of the American service rifle, and is more easily jammed by a mishap. A force of American regulars on a hill 1000 yards from the Mexican position could drive the Mexicans out and make the casualty list large without any great danger to themselves. This is beyond the effectiveness, though not the range of the .30-30, and such long shooting is beyond both the sights and the marksmanship of the Mexican and his rifle. Under 600 yards the difference is not so great, and the .30-30 becomes dangerous according to the ability of the Mexican to point it.

The Mauser is a horse of another color. With some of the modern sharp-point American ammunition sold to Villa and his cohorts, the rifle is the equal of the Springfield in range and flatness of flight of the bullet. Even with the old blunt-nose Mexican service bullet it is far more efficient than the .30-30, being then the precise duplicate of the famous Boer rifle and its ammunition. The rifle is merely the old Boer Mauser, made up for the Mexican government along slightly different lines. The more of these Villa has, the more likely he will be to put up a good fight.

The danger from Villa comes, not in the straight, stand-up pitched battle, opening in normal fashion at 1200 yards by infantry fire if the field guns do not get into it, but in sudden attack, ambuscade or cutting off of smaller bodies of American troops with the fire opening at a few hundred yards.

Villa has no field guns so far as we knew, being deprived of them during his hasty flight along the border when Carranza nearly got him. He may have a few machine guns of the Colt type, but these guns are of little efficacy when not handled by trained men of nationality other than Mexican. When effective in other Mexican fights such guns were served by Americans, Germans or other more mechanically inclined breed of man. The Mexican can make one talk for a while, but the accurate fire and the reduction of jams of the American service are refinements unknown to the Mexican gunner. The machine gun, I may explain, is not a rifle and not a field gun, it is a heavy, automatic gun firing the regular cartridge of the infantry rifle, but weighing 30 pounds or more, carried on mule back, and capable from tripod or short legs, [illegible] of the speed of 600 shots per minute when kept supplied with cartridges. These come in the containers adapted to the various guns, the American Benet-Mercer using cartridges packed in brass clips of 30, the Colt and Vickers guns firing cartridges [illegible] ing in woven belts like ordinary [illegible] belts, holding 250 rounds. The machinery of the gun plucks the cartridges from the pockets and [illegible] them into the barrel of the [illegible].

So crude in equipment is the Villa force that our aviators, if so disposed, can sail over them and bomb them out of position or turn machine guns [illegible] them, without fear of reply other than the squib fire of the Mexican [illegible].

There is of course an argument [illegible] most anything that will [illegible] pleasant force now being [illegible] the American forces [illegible] part of the arms are [illegible].

Villa's greatest weapon is the [illegible] and distance. Let the American [illegible] be strung out long enough, [illegible] small parties guarding [illegible] then the Mexican will [illegible]. Pity the American troopers [illegible] close enough fire to make Villa's dum dums inflict hits, or the party cut off and attacked by a [illegible] his misguided people.

"The gun first, my Yellow," ordered Madame Meunier. She seized the rifle, unloaded it, installed the German in her cart and ten minutes later arrived at the hospital of Nanteuil, now surrounded by French Chasseurs.

"I bring you a prisoner," cried Madame Meunier, "but I am going to keep the gun. When my husband comes back from the war it will be proof to him that I have not simply remained at home twiddling my thumbs."

Madame Meunier would have received the war cross certainly, and probably the military medal, but the privations she imposed upon herself and the exhaustion from the great effort she made to provision the French soldiers in the Nanteuil hospital through the German lines during the ten days were too much for her and she died literally of physical exhaustion and privation. Her grave in the little cemetery near Lessart is kept covered by fresh flowers by the soldiers quartered in the vicinity.

DEBATE IN THE SENATE ON WEST POINT EXAMS.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

WASHINGTON, March 18.—Radical modification of the entrance requirements at West Point so as to admit enlisted men was debated in the Senate today during consideration of the House bill doubling the number of cadets at the academy. The measure provides for appointment of one enlisted man a year from each regiment. Senator Reed offered an amendment making the appointments five to a regiment and Senators Gallinger and Smith of Georgia declared the cadet personnel at the academy should be made up entirely of men from the regular army ranks.

On suggestion of Senator Hitchcock, Senator Reed modified his amendment so as to limit the number of appointments from the ranks to 300 a year, though he said he personally favored opening the academy to any soldier who could qualify. Senator James proposed five appointments a year for each regiment of the National Guards and Senator Cummins advocated decreasing the number of cadets appointed from civil life to give room for more appointments from the army.

Remedy.

FOR PREVENTION OF UNEMPLOYMENT.

URGENT PLEA IS MADE BY W. C. ANDERSON OF LONDON.

Chairman of Recent Labor Party Conference Says that Unless this is Done a Large Measure of Chaos and Confusion and Much Discontent will Result.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Feb. 15.—An urgent plea for the immediate laying of plans for the prevention of unemployment in England when peace is established is made by W. C. Anderson, M.P., chairman of the recent Labor party conference, in a published interview. Mr. Anderson declares that unless this is done there will in large measure be chaos and confusion, deepened social poverty, and much discontent. Among other things he suggests the creation of a ministr yof labor, which would prepare plans and have them in readiness for any emergency that might arise.

"In all likelihood, peace will find us plunged in an economic crisis aggravated by various causes," says Mr. Anderson. "The slackening of government orders in various directions, the demobilization of the troops, will mean a serious dislocation of industry, and there will be a lack of capital, with high rates of interest. Food prices will remain high, though not so high as at present, and when the act dealing with rents expires there will be increases in house rent.

"The rapid or gradual discharge from the army of some millions of men will create special problems, especially in view of the large numbers of emergency workers who are doing the work now. It is not very easy to say what should be done to meet the situation that will immediately arise. Old things will, as it were, have passed away, and all things will have become new. But it is, at any rate, essential that we should be thinking about the future, for if no preparations are made we shall be overwhelmed and crushed by the magnitude of our task.

"There will, of course, be plenty of work waiting to be done, and the difficulty will be to stimulate effective demand. Taxes will be high, the cost of living will be high, the cost of materials will be high, and all that will act as a handicap upon production. I understand that the government, in so far as they have considered the question of getting the soldiers back into civil employment, will rely to a large extent upon the machinery of the labor exchanges. Now the labor exchanges can and ought to do useful work, but they are not concerned with the maintenance of wage standards or any other standard in respect of labor conditions. The government is absorbed with the task immediately before the nation, but it would not be a difficult matter to create a ministry of labor which, among other things, would prepare schemes and have them in readiness for any emergency that may arise."

Mr. Anderson asserts that the disbanding of the soldiers should be gradual, that to fling suddenly some millions of men on the labor market, especially in view of all the emergency workers at present employed, would present a problem of the gravest magnitude. He says he believes each soldier will receive from the government four weeks' furlough with full pay. Each soldier will also receive a gratuity, probably of £6 or £7, and during the first year of his return to civil employment there probably will be some scheme of unemployment insurance.

"But the real point at which we must aim all the time," he continues, "is the prevention of unemployment. We ought to have at this moment committees of experts at work getting ready the necessary machinery. Unless this is done there will in large measure be chaos and confusion, deepened social poverty, and much discontent.

"There is plenty of work waiting to be done if we have the energy, intelligence and foresight to get the schemes ready. The country is capable of growing a very large proportion of its own timber, if not the whole of it, and a forest station, while adding greatly to the wealth of the country, would provide healthful, open air employment for many families. This in turn would lead to schemes of rural housing and the springing up of new rural villages. Much might be done in the way of creating rural industries. The culture of sugar beet and the manufacture of sugar is a case in point. But if anything of importance is to be done in these directions vested interests must not be allowed to block the way."

FRANCE WOULD SEND BACK SECURITIES.

[BY ATLANTIC CABLE AND A. P.]

PARIS, March 18.—In his speech in the Chamber of Deputies last night Minister of Finance Ribot, alluding to American securities, said:

"We must look through our portfolios of foreign securities and send to the United States all we are able to pick up in the French markets of securities negotiable there. The total of American securities is not so large as we could wish.'

The Minister added that considerable amounts of securities of other neutral countries were still available. France, he said, should follow the example of Great Britain and reduce her importations to strict necessities.

THE OPEN SHOP.

Col. John P. Irish, at Fresno, Cal., January 15, 1916, in Debate with Walter MacArthur, Union Labor Official.

Jefferson, the philosopher of the Revolution, wrote into our civic scheme, two affirmations, without which the rights of man cannot be enjoyed and free popular government cannot exist. The first of these was, "equal rights for all, special privileges for none."

The second was in that mighty preamble to the Declaration of Independence:

"We hold these truths to be self-evident that all men are created equal and endowed with certain inalienable rights, amongst which are life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, and that to secure these, governments are instituted amongst men."

In these forty-eight words, Jefferson wrote the impregnable indictment of the closed shop, and lifted the open shop to the dignity of the highest expression of the rights of man.

From 1776 to 1876, 100 years, this country enjoyed equality of rights, and its citizens had a right unquestioned to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. In that period, we reared generations of Americans who gave to us by the Mexican War our splendid frontage on the Pacific Coast, and the territory now divided into five American States, and a generation which preserved the Union in the Civil War, and reaffirmed the civic philosophy of Jefferson. In that century, a greater percentage of American workingmen went forward to financial independence than since, for every man depended upon skill and industry in his handicraft for constant employment and the best wages.

Then began a change, inperceptible at first, but gathering force, until now in the form of union labor, it denies the equal rights of men, and denies the right to life itself, unless under conditions it enforces, and not under the equal operation of economic law.

We have now reached the period of the closed shop, in which no man is permitted to live by the work of his hands, except by the consent of the walking delegate and business agent of union labor.

There is no economic argument against the organization of labor, if it be legally responsible and keep within the limitations of law.

It should mean the superior skill of its members, but it does not.

It should mean their superior industry and productivity, but it does not.

Labor unions claim the right of collective bargaining, and the making of contracts, but they refuse to incorporate under the law and to assume legal responsibility for contracts, and the right to sue and be sued.

They demand contracts of the employer, but whether that employer be an individual, a firm, a partnership or a corporation, each has a legal status, and may sue or be sued in case of breach of contract, or be punished for any violation of the law which holds a strong hand over them all.

So, between the two parties to such collective bargaining and contract, there is no equality of right. The contract is not bilateral, it is unilateral, with all the responsibility upon one party, the employer.

Under this condition of irresponsibility of the union, the closed shop is intrenched in its absolute denial of the right of a non-union man to work, and therefore denial of his right to live.

The labor guilds of France grew so strong that they demanded of the King that he treat the licensing of labor as a royal prerogative, and that no man be permitted to work without the royal license. He was a greedy monarch, and the guilds offered him a cash subvention if he would assume this prerogative. He referred the demand to his Minister of Finance, the great Turgot, who was a friend of Jefferson. Turgot wrote the King's answer, saying that, "God, by giving to man wants, making his recourse to work necessary to supply them, has made the right to work the property of every man, and this property is the first, the most sacred, the most imprescriptible of all." What the King refused to do the labor unions do with impunity. The government of the United States cannot forbid anyone the right to work. Backed by all its power, it cannot do that. But the labor unions, extra-legal bodies, irresponsible before the law, do it by the closed shop.

How do the unions enforce this policy? Let union men who may have a conscience and a memory study the method. It is enforced by crime, by murder, by arson, by dynamite, by thugging and by the bludgeon. One union alone, the structural ironworkers, enforced it by the destructive dynamiting of $17,000,000 of property, and by more than a hundred murders. Where is the evidence? Read it in the pleas of guilt by the McNamaras and the confessions of their co-conspirators. Read it in the murder of Gov. Steunenberg and the confession of Harry Orchard. It is written in the judicial records of our courts, State and Federal, and in scores of convictions of union leaders and conspirators.

This, union men, is the price at which you have maintained the closed shop. It is a record of horrors, a "damned spot" that will not out. Think of it and ask yourselves whether the closed shop has been worth the price you have paid for it in crime.

Now what does the open shop mean? It stands for no discrimination between union and non-union men. It denies to neither the right to work, nor the right to live. It does not even deny collective bargaining, that does not include the closed shop. It does not need dynamite, arson and murder for its maintenance. It stands for equality of right, and the right of man to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. A press that lacks courage and politicians who want votes may be for a time longer restrained by fear of your members, but I beg to assure you that both at heart, despite your closed-shop policy and the crimes that sustain it, that some day the spirit of the Revolution will reappear and your organizations, with all the good that is in them, will be swept off the earth, because of the crimes with which your leaders have identified you.

Now for a further feature of the closed shop policy: The streets of Oakland have been crowded for months by union pickets, tramping in front of leading business houses. Why? These houses were paying the union scale of wages and above, to employees who had been long with them. The unions demanded that those employees join them, and the employees refused. Then the unions demanded that the employers make them join or discharge them. This the employers refused, answering that they would not discharge them for joining or refusing to join. Then followed the boycott and picket.

Now observe. Here was involved no question of hours or wages, but a demand that men be refused the right to work unless they joined a certain organization. Would that be tolerated in any other organization? Would the Masons, Odd Fellows, Woodmen of the World, Native Sons, Young Men's Institute or a church be permitted to exist a week if any made such a demand and started such a boycott? No. They would be held legally liable.

Such a demand is monstrous. It is a denial of those rights to secure which government is instituted among men.

Do union men think that courts will always be cowardly, the press craven and politicians hypocritical?

If they are, then we may bid farewell to a government that entered the family of nations, dedicated to the right of man to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

In order to maintain the closed shop the labor unions forbid apprenticeship of American boys to the trades and handicrafts. The result is that youth are left to fester in the vices of idleness, and learn crime in the street and the gutter. When they are arrested and sent to the reform school, and taught trades there at the expense of the taxpayers, and come out proud of their skill and capacity to support themselves, and become good citizens, the unions refuse to permit them to work or admit them to membership. So the taxpayers are building more reform schools and detention homes in which to confine the young victims of the closed shop.

In the effort to put our youth in the way of independence and good citizenship, the taxpayers are building costly vocational schools, in which the boys learn perfect skill in the trades and handicrafts.

But when they graduate, qualified journeymen mechanics, the labor unions to enforce the closed shop deny them membership and refuse to permit them to work under the usual union penalty of being maimed or murdered.

In answer to this Mr. MacArthur said:

"The jobs belong to our men by a God-given right and boys must not be permitted apprenticeship to the trades, for when they become journeymen they will compete with our men for the jobs. Let the owners of industrial machinery look out for them. It is none of our business."

To this Mr. Irish rejoined: It is claimed then that American youth have no God-given rights, and the closed shop demands that they be outlawed under their country's flag, left without means of livelihood, turned into the streets, with all roads closed to them, except the road to hell.

You have just heard the distinct and official avowal of union labor that the American boy has no rights on his native soil, under his country's flag and Constitution, but he is an outlaw in the interest of the closed shop. When the American spirit awakens to the atrocity of this policy, labor unions must abandon it or aroused American spirit will sweep labor unions off the face of the earth.

Fathers and mothers of American boys, think this over in the quiet of your homes tonight, when you go from here. You have heard it firsthand from a chosen champion and an official of union labor, sentence pronounced upon your boys, condemning them to crime or beggary. You have cherished your sons from the cradle to their youth. You have looked upon them as the support of your old age. You have looked forward to the time when they would repay your care of them by care of you. In the monstrous language you have listened to here, all this parental dream fades away. Union labor, the new Herod, condemns them to moral death and physical degradation, in order that the closed shop may flourish by making them your sorrow who should be your joy. Think it over.

RISKS LIFE FOR SMALL LOOT.

"Human Fly" Scales Fire Escape and Crosses Roofs to Rob Hotel Guest.

Police detectives early last night started a search for the "human fly," who did $1000 worth of climbing to steal $3 from a room on the sixth floor of the Angelus Hotel.

According to Police Detective Cummings, who investigated the case, the "human fly" first climbed to the roof of the Angelus Hotel by way of the fire escape. Then he climbed down to the sixth floor and entered the room of A. L. Benson and stole $3. Making his way to the roof again, the burglar walked across a slender plank to the roof of the Mason Building and then down the fire escape to the street.

The course of the daring burglar was outlined to the police by a maid who saw the intruder make his start from the roof of the Angelus Hotel.

GOLDEN FRUIT IS FOOD-SHOW RULER.

CITRUS BEAUTIES FEATURE OF DAY AT EXPOSITION.

Addresses, Music and Hurry-up Eating Contests All Bear Out Single Idea—Three Cash Prizes Offered for Future Competitions. Attractive Programmes Coming.

Orange Day was observed yesterday at the third annual Pure Food Exposition, No. 239 South Broadway, with a special programme of music and addresses. A huge golden orange, in the center of a 300-pound cake of ice, was placed in the doorway. Miss Fay Harper, one of the booth attendants, was chosen from fourteen contestants, by a committee of judges, as Orange Queen and was awarded a large silver loving cup. Miss Harper is an ardent advocate of the slogan, "Eat California oranges."

During the evening James Donovan, former Attorney-General of Montana, delivered an address on "The California Orange," and was followed by G. Harold Powell, manager of the California Fruit Growers' Exchange, who discussed features of "Orange Day and What it Means."

Special music was furnished by J. A. Mullen, George A. J. Howard, Miss Maude Ryan, Henry King and Beno Bink.

Three orange eating contests were the climax. The boys and girls had a hard-fought battle and had to consolidate to best the grown-ups. The newsboy participants in the cracker-eating contest seemed entirely hollow. The boy who ate the smallest amount of crackers managed to do away with more of the edibles than an average person would eat in a week.

Manager Neal P. Olsen announced $5 gold pieces as prizes will be held during the coming two weeks. One prize will go to the housewife who bakes the loaf of bread esteemed the best by the judges. All bread received will be donated to the Children's Hospital Society. To the school child who writes the best essay on "Quality vs. Premium Buying" will be awarded a second gold piece.

One day during the coming last week of the exposition housewives will be admitted free upon giving a pass-word which they can secure from their grocers, if the grocers are members of the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association. Five dollars will be awarded the person who originates the most apt password.

Several hundred tangerines were given away yesterday and school children were admitted free when their parents accompanied them. This practice will be continued each Saturday until the close of the exposition.

The programme for this week is as follows:

Monday, Housewives' day: Opening of the cooking school on the second floor at 2:30 o'clock p.m. The preparation of bran scones, orange cake, cream frosting, combination salad and yeast-raised waffles will be demonstrated by Chef Wyman, in charge of the school.

Tuesday, bread contest: A $5 prize will be awarded. The Ad Club will be in charge during the afternoon and evening and will present a special entertainment of folk and fancy dancing, music and addreses.

Wednesday, grocery clerks' day: Special buying and selling contests will be featured during the evening.

Thursday, the numerous fraternal organizations of the city will be hosts. A special literary and musical programme will be given afternoon and evening.

Firday, Retail Credit Men of Pasadena in charge. A programme of special features will be offered by Pasadena grocers.

Saturday, Children's day: Folk dances, calisthenic drills, singing and modern dances will be featured afternoon and evening. There will be a monster automobile parade in the morning. It is expected 1000 cars will be in line.

A silver cup, thirty inches high, will be awarded the proprietors of the best decorated booth. This cup was won last year by the National Chemical Company. A contestant must win the cup three times before securing final possession.

ANTELOPE VALLEY SALES.

Three Tracts Transferred to Purchasers Who Will Improve.

Three important sales of acreage in the Antelope Valley are reported by Edwin J. Bowes, Jr., president of the Bowes Realty Company. One was the transfer for Mrs. Martha Chatt to Joseph H. Thien, of 160 acres, of which eighty acres is fenced and forty acres plowed. The property is described as having a good pumping plant and it is declared that it will all be cleared, plowed and put in crop immediately. The consideration is given at $7500.

A tract of 100 acres was sold through the same agency by L. H. Stroud to the Antelope Valley Farm Lands Company, of which Mr. Bowes is president. This land lies between Lancaster and Palmdale and is said to have brought $3000. It will be cleared and plowed at once. The third tract sold adjoins the Trueworthy ranch and was also purchased by the Antelope Valley Farm Lands Company. Mrs. E. S. Staley, the seller, received a reported consideration of $1000.

NINE-YEAR-OLD BOY STUMPS THEM ALL.

FOURTH-GRADER A PRODIGY IN HISTORY, GEOGRAPHY.

He Challenges Anybody of Any Age to Outdo Him in Sheer Knowledge About What's Happened in the Past or What's on the Earth's Surface at All Times and Places.

> Can you answer these questions off-hand?
> How far is it from New York to Nome, Alaska?
> Who was Vice-President of the United States under Buchanan?
> How long is the River of Doubt?
> Who founded the house of Hapsburg?
> What is the area and population of the Orange Free State?
> What is the height in feet of Mt. Rainier?
> How many times has France changed its form of government in the last two centuries and what was the name of its ruler after each change?

If you can't answer these without referring to a book you need not answer the challenge to all comers to compete with him in general history and geography, which was issued yesterday by 9-year-old John Edward Walsh, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Walsh of No. 331 West Forty-fifth street and fourth-grader at the West Vernon school.

His teachers regard him as probably the most learned boy of his age in the world in history and geography.

The most remarkable thing about this youngster is his memory. In history he can go back 500 years before Christ and give dates on all important events which are recorded up to the present time.

In geography there is nothing on the map new to him; ask him of any city, he will tell you where it is located, also its population; the rivers of the world, he can tell their length in miles; the mountains of the world, he can tell you the height in feet, etc.

He can give offhand the names of the Presidents and Vice-Presidents from Washington down the line to Wilson.

He is in the A-4 grade at the West Vernon school and is at the head of his class. He challenges anybody to submit to oral tests with him on those subjects and is backed by his friends to carry away the honors.

SHRINE HOSTS HONOR CHIEFS.

Imperial Potentate and High Officers Much Feted.

More than Five Thousand are at Elaborate Banquet.

Bizarre Trip into Filmdom is Pilgrimage of Fun.

With a series of entertainments that began early yesterday morning and ended late last night, Imperial Potentate J. Putnam Stevens and other officers of the Imperial Council of the Order of the Mystic Shrine, who arrived in this city Friday on a three-day visit before leaving for San Francisco and Honolulu, were given a grand reception by more than 5000 nobles at Universal City and the Shrine Auditorium.

The distinguished visitors of Shrinedom declared their welcome to Los Angeles one of the most delightful features of their tour, which started in the East, January 30. An elaborate programme was given for their entertainment at a banquet at the Shrine Auditorium last night, where 4000 local and visiting Shriners participated in the festivities.

Last night sixty applicants were initiated into the Shrine by the Imperial Divan at the Spring Ceremonial of Al Malaikah Temple, A.A.O.N.M.S, at the Auditorium. This was the first time the Order of the Temple was ever conferred in a subordinate temple by the Imperial Council.

Features of the entertainment programme last night included music by the Shriners' band and exercises by the Al Malaikah patrol.

At 11 o'clock this morning the Imperial Council will visit Universal City, where they will be featured in a motion picture play. Tonight a dinner will be given in their honor at [illegible] cafe and tomorrow they will be guests at a banquet at the Alexandria.

CULINARY TRIUMPH.

Little conception of the immensity of the catering feat accomplished in the feeding of the great gathering at the Shrine Auditorium last night existed even in the minds of those present. Shriner Karl Lott, manager of the Hayward grill and for several years manager of the Jonathan Club, was in charge of the culinary arrangements.

According to his account books, the following was a part of the menu: [illegible] chickens; 8000 corn fritters; [illegible] fresh tomatoes; 4000 fancy ice cream forms; 1200 stalks of celery; [illegible] pounds of Saratoga potato chips; [illegible] pounds of butter; 10,000 rolls; [illegible] assorted cakes; 50 gallons of ripe olives; 100 gallons of cream; 200 pounds of coffee; 100 cases of soft drinks; 60 cases of champagne.

In addition to the food, 6000 feet of table cloth and 4000 napkins were necessary to supply clean and bright surroundings. A staff of more than [illegible] chefs and assistants and 200 waiters was required to prepare and serve the meal. Another feature of the banquet was that the facilities for preparing it were largely outside of the Auditorium itself and the food had to be transported miles across the city.

ROUGH RIDING.

Imperial officers of the Mystic Shrine entered Universal City yesterday in realistic style. Guided by Leo [illegible]worth, William Bush and others of Al Malaikah Temple, forty of the visiting high officers of the order went in the morning to the picture city, where at the gates they were met by a caravan of camels and elephants—real enough live ones—and quitting the motor cars in which they had made the first stage of the pilgrimage they mounted the desert beasts on which they entered the White City. [illegible] Neville, Potentate of Damascus Temple, Rochester, N. Y., chose an elephant as better suited to his requirements; but Past Imperial Potentate Dr. Fred Smith, also from Rochester, and William Brown, Imperial Treasurer, mounted camels and led the procession. J. E. Chandler, the Imperial Outer Guard, true to his duty to keep watch over the persons of his tribe, chose to lead his camel. He denied he feared seasickness from riding the tossing ship of the desert.

The caravan proceeded through the streets of the city to the tent of the Joker Comedy Company, where Director [illegible] Clements awaited, fez-capped and with signs and symbols proving him one of the elect. The Joker company's stage was set for a Shrine initiation, with lodge room fully equipped and before a camera the imperial officers, in their robes of office, performed an initiation, with [illegible] Clements as the subject. M. [illegible] and C. Conklin assisted in the ceremony, which consisted of every form of refined torture which human mind has invented. All would have gone well had not the seriousness been disturbed by the entrance of [illegible] Gale Henry, shrieking and imploring the dignitaries to "spare her husband." She ran onto the stage and throwing her arms about Mr. Clements cried she would die with him, she would not stand by and see her husband murdered. This feature was a surprise, neither imperial officers nor the audience knowing in advance that the picture people had the plot arranged.

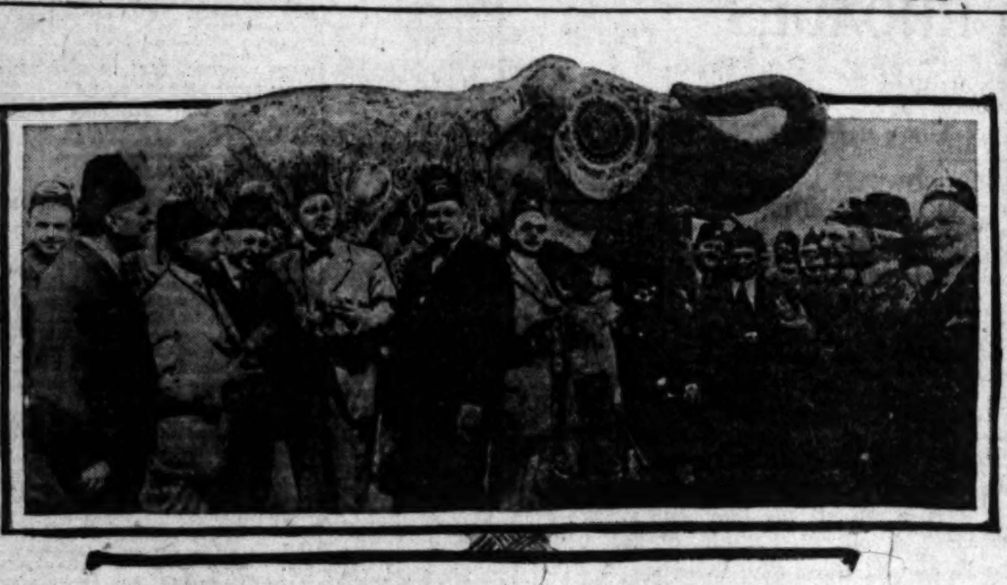
FEDERAL OFFICER KILLS AN INDIAN.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 18.—Federal Officer George W. Smith shot and killed Jack Mike, an Indian, following a struggle on East Second street where Smith overtook the Indian, who had resisted arrest and fled. Smith, when taken into custody by the police, showed signs of a struggle, the officers state. Officer Amarias [illegible] the Indian and turned him over to Smith to take to the station. While Smith was telephoning for a patrol wagon the Indian fled. Smith fired four shots from an automatic into the air without results and gave chase. As he turned around the corner the Indian grabbed him, he declared, and snatched his night stick. Smith fired three shots at the Indian, who died instantly.

ENTERTAIN THEIR FATHERS.

Gen. W. S. Rosecrans Camp, No. 2, Sons of Veterans, will entertain the [illegible] of the Grand Army of the [illegible] of this city and surrounding [illegible] Monday night, March 20, [illegible] Hall, Hall of Records. The programme starts promptly at 8 o'clock. Refreshments will be served. [illegible] is exclusively for the [illegible] and Sons of Veterans.



It was Orange Day for the Shriners and for the elephant.

This picture was made of the visiting nobles and their hosts at Universal City yesterday. The elephant's name is Charlie and his capacity for oranges is something to marvel at.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

AMSTERDAM (Netherlands) Jan. 20.—Once or twice in the past week it seemed as though an awful and immense catastrophe would inevitably overwhelm Holland. The waters of the Zuyder Zee, whipped by a nor'wester of hurricane force, rose to unprecedented heights, broke through the great dikes that have for decades protected the low-lying fertile fields from encroachment by the sea, and flooded the country for miles around, sweeping away farmhouses and villages like as many cardboard boxes, and covering the rich pastures with a layer of noisome salt mire. Inch by inch, relays of soldiers and civilians disputed the ground won by years of labor, and only retired beaten when the soil crumbled and sank beneath their feet into the roaring torrents.

A fortunate circumstance was that the great storm came a week before spring tide. Had they coincided, practically the whole of Holland would have been inundated.

It has been a narrow escape; but as it is, the death roll numbers twenty-one; over 96,000 acres of land have been wholly or partially ruined by the sea water; thousands of cattle and sheep have perished, and the damage is more than $3,000,000.

The history of the "Low Countries" abounds in flood records. One, on All Saints' Day in 1572, took a toll of 20,000 lives; but not since the last great flood of 1825, when 800 people and 46,000 head of cattle perished, has a disaster of like magnitude overtaken this country.

CURVED COAST LINE.

All along the curved coast line of the shallow, but often turbulent, Zuyder Zee, great destruction has been wrought; but the visitation was exceptionally severe in that part of the province of North Holland, which lies north of Amsterdam. This quaint corner of the Netherlands is perhaps better known to Americans than any other part of the country. Volendam, Edam, Monnickendam, and especially the waterland villages have suffered severely. The island of Marken, beloved of artists, has been swept from end to end. Fishing smacks were seized by the furious waves and hurled with terrific force upon the fishermen's homes on the shore, and only four houses in the once prosperous village are undamaged.

When the Associated Press correspondent visited part of the inundated land, the aspect of the country seemed to have gone back six centuries. Maps of that time indicate a chain of large meres, long since drained and converted into smiling fields; but now the sea has once more gained the mastery, and only the gables of farm houses and the tops of countless windmills were visible above the troubled waters, on which hayricks, dead carcasses of farm animals and pieces of furniture of all descriptions were floating about. At one point, near the pretty little town of Purmerend, further progress was barred, owing to the sudden discovery by the authorities of a weak spot in a neighboring dike, which necessitated the immediate filling up of a lock so as to reduce the pressure of the water. Here, gangs of men were working as though their lives depended upon it; but the water was still gaining and folks were beginning to evacuate their homes.

DEFENSE OF VILLAGES.

Some of the little villages on the edge of the floods now lie level with the sea, and are defended from further encroachment by hastily erected ramparts, so-called "box dams." These consist of deal planks securely clamped together, forming a breastwork a few feet high. A similar structure is erected a yard further back, and the space between filled up with sand and earth.

Holland spends $6,000,000 per year on protection from its "never resting enemy" and the necessity for this is indicated by the fact that the "polders"—the drained tracts of land wrested from the sea and converted into arable land or meadows—lie from ten to fifteen feet below sea level. The turf-covered dikes or embankments that are such a familiar feature of the Dutch landscape, are armored on the seaside with brick masonry when they are in so-called "safe" positions, i. e., running from north to south; but with basalt blocks and concrete facings at the points that are exposed to the full force of the northern and northwestern blasts. The land side slope, however, is of plain earth; the consequence being that once a polder is flooded, there is an enormous pressure upon the inner part of the seadike. Slowly, but surely the earth is eaten away until only the basalt or concrete shell remains. If storms then continue and pumping work is impossible, this shell at length collapses under the renewed onslaughts of the sea from without, and the polder is doomed.

FRENCH RED CROSS WOMEN RENDER EFFICIENT AID.

Thirty-two Million Francs Spent During First Seventeen Months of the War, Many Refuges and Infirmaries Having been Established at Different Points, as Well as Hospitals.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Jan. 31.—There are now 66,449 women in the French Red Cross volunteer army, equipping 1500 hospitals with an aggregate of 118,000 beds. The Red Cross flag now flies over 288 buildings in Paris alone.

The Society for Aid to Wounded Soldiers, the largest of the three Red Cross organizations and the originator of the work in France in 1864, spent 32,000,000 francs during the first seventeen months of the war. The society has operated 796 hospitals, consisting of 67,081 beds, and given a total of 21,000,000 days' care to wounded soldiers. Besides these hospitals, the society maintains a hospital of 500 beds at Saloniki, ninety-three refuges established in the sixth and twentieth military regions in France, seventy infirmaries in railroad stations and forty-five railroad canteens.

The cost of maintenance of hospitals varies so much that it is difficult to establish average cost per capita per diem, but as near as can be calculated this society has brought its cost down to a little over three francs a day.

UNION DES FEMMES.

The Union des Femmes de France, the second in importance of the Red Cross societies has now 28,446 nurses, equipping 355 hospitals, with 29,000 beds, while the Association des Dames Francaisses has 16,000 nurses, in 350 hospitals, with 22,000 beds.

The mortality among the Red Cross nurses has been remarkably heavy considering the character of their work and the immunity they are supposed to enjoy under the international regulations. Twenty-two members of the Society for Aid to the Wounded Soldiers have given their lives to the cause, some of them killed under shell fire, others carried off by cantagious diseases. The nurses of this society have received sixty-three epidemic medals, sixty war crosses and one cross of the Legion of Honor. The first Red Cross victim of the war was Mlle. Susanne Gilles, who fell at Luneville with her chest torn by the fragments of a shell that burst inside the hospital ward, where she was attending wounded. The next was Mlle. Cagnard at Cambrai, who is declared to have been shot point blank by a Prussian soldier firing into the hospital through the window. During the bombardment of Rheims seven women of the Red Cross became victims of the bombardment, including Mme. Fontaine-Faudier, Mlle. Causse and five sisters of charity.

Many women of the Red Cross give attention to men at the front who have no one to remember them at home. One member, Mme. Richelot, the wife of Dr. L. G. Richelot, is godmother to 900 soldiers, which constitutes a record to date.

WOUNDED NOT DEPRESSED.

Regarding the state of mind of wounded soldiers now in the hospitals after sixteen months of war, Mme. Perouse, president of the Union des Femmes de France, says: "They support their sufferings admirably and are much more anxious to return to the front than were the wounded in the hospitals last year at this time. They talk about active service with an enthusiasm that is contagious."

Monsieur Justin Godart, Undersecretary for War in charge of the sanitary department of the army, has just replaced the society women of the Red Cross serving as nurses in some of the military hospitals by paid independent nurses. The choice of nurses outside the three Red Cross organizations developed considerable comment, but there was in this no reflection on the devotion of Red Cross nurses; neither does it bring their efficiency into question. Paid, trained nurses are more adaptable to military discipline, which must prevail in all military establishments.

Most of the women who devote themselves to hospital work are from the easy classes; they are necessarily so since they are required to give not only their time and sometimes their lives, but also their money to the cause. Some of them pay largely for the privilege of serving the country as sorts of maids of all work; others pay more dearly for the privilege of working as surgeons' aids and as nurses. Few of them were, before the war, accustomed to the hard work of housekeeping, and some of them have learned its most elementary principles in the hospitals.

Uplift.

JAPANESE MISSIONS TO BE EXTENDED.

WIDESPREAD EVANGELIZATION WILL BE STARTED.

Social Betterment of the Rural Communities is Object of Movement Which has Received an Impetus at Tokio—Farmers Rely too Much on Hand Labor.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

TOKIO, Jan. 15. — The Federated Missions of Japan at their recent annual conference decided upon launching a widespread movement for the evangelization and social betterment of rural communities in Japan. It was resolved that every missionary should take it upon himself to begin work in at least one new village this year.

One of the reports to the conference pointed out the progress being made in industrial welfare in Japan. There was an encouraging increase in the number of wealthy native leaders, who were interesting themselves in such reforms. In Osaka a public-spirited man had given $500,000 for a city building for the benefit of the working classes; another man donated $2,500,000 for a hospital and laboratory for the study and treatment of tuberculosis, and some eighteen private sanatoriums, in addition to government institutions, were now engaged in fighting the disease.

PUBLIC PARKS.

There was an increasing interest in the establishment of public parks and playgrounds. The Life Boat Society, whose 77,000 members had saved 22,000 people from drowning and had prevented the loss of millions of dollars in shipping, was commended. Also there was a new factory law, which had several excellent features, but in this matter there was still need of further reform.

Referring to farm life, the report expressed the belief that the Japanese farms were altogether too small and that they were worked too fully by hand labor. Not more than one among six farmers had a horse. The indebtedness of peasant properties averaged $50 per family. The system of absentee landlordism was believed to be undesirable, because it admitted of pernicious practices among heartless agents.

MR. ROBINSON'S THEORY.

The Rev. Cooper Robinson, a member of the Canadian Episcopal Mission at Nagoya, discussed at the conference the "superhuman, if not divine" claims that were made much of in regard to the Emperor at the recent coronation ceremonies.

"That the congratulations of the conference should have been presented to the Emperor was but right and fitting," said Dr. Robinson, "but at the same time is it not true that amid all the pleasure and interest we may have felt in connection with the coronation ceremonies there was a certain amount of disappointment felt and an anxiety awakened in the hearts of many of God's people, both Japanese and foreign?

"Have we not felt that the claims to something, if not divine at least superhuman, expressed in regard to His Imperial Majesty and the nation have been a little clearer and stronger than we hoped would have been put forth in this twentieth century; and are there not grounds to fear that these claims and the attitude of mind that seems widely to have accepted them constitute a hindrance to the evangelization of Japan which hitherto many have not supposed to exist?"

WAR RELIGION.

Dr. Robinson declared that as a result of the war religion would be delivered "from the bondage of German theology." He said that bondage was both intellectual and theological and he asserted that both British and American scholars have for some time been gradually brought under it. He expressed the fear that many persons in Japan have been brought into bondage to Germany in many departments—military, educational, theological—and declared that the time had arrived to take a stand against this bondage which seemed "to pose as the very godhead of liberty." He added: "And where should the needed revolt against the bondage referred to commence if not with us missionaries, who ought to be, and I believe are still, regarded by the best of Japanese as their leaders in spiritual matters."

Dr. A. Oltmans of Tokio, a representative of the Dutch Reformed Church of America, and one of the veteran missionaries of Japan, was chosen the leader of the conference for 1916. Dr. A. D. Berry, the Methodist Episcopal Church of America, was elected vice-president, and Dr. D. R. McKinzie of the Methodist Church of Canada, secretary.

Controversy.

SHOULD THE CLERGY ENLIST IN ARMY?

QUESTION IS BEING DISCUSSED IN ENGLAND.

Open-letter Columns of the Newspapers are Filled with Views Pro and Con, While There is Considerable Agitation About Amending the Rules of the Anglican Church.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Jan. 10.—The petition which over a thousand curates in London are presenting to the Bishop of London brings to a fresh stage the question as to whether clergymen of the established church (Episcopalian) should be allowed to enlist. According to the established rule of the Anglican church, clergymen are forbidden to serve in the fighting forces except as chaplains or non-combatants. The clergymen signing the petition to the bishop are of military age and would have enlisted long ago, they say, but for violating the law of the church.

A discussion has been carried on in the open letter columns of the newspapers for some time in this regard. Opposition to enlistment by the Archbishop of Canterbury and the various bishops rests on the theory that by ordination the clergyman is dedicated forever to God's service, and that the profession of a soldier is incompatible with the priesthood. This finds some support in the church and the laiety. But the more popular point of view is that there are wars often based on righteousness, and self-sacrifice for a righteous cause is one of the ideals of the church.

"They tell their people every day," writes the rector of Stockbridge in regard to the clergy, "that every man who offers himself as a soldier saves the lives of many of his countrymen; it is therefore necessary, if more and more lives are to be saved, that more and more men must offer. We are also preaching that this is a righteous war."

He then asks:

"Should not the clergy lead in the promotion of righteousness? And if it is true that by the war the principle of righteousness will be more firmly established than ever before, is not that a work fit for a priest, or even a bishop?"

The clergymen signing the petition address the following letter to the Bishop of London:

We, the signatories of this letter, believing that the needs of our country demand the most efficient utilization of the nation's resources, respectfully request your lordship to—

(1.) Consider the possibility of so reorganizing the work of the diocese as will permit of the largest number of clergy being set free for whole or part time for work directly in connection with the war.

(2.) Invite all clergy of military age to offer themselves for those branches of national service for which your lordship deems them suitable, and to undertake whatever work may, in accordance with this action, be allotted them.

(3.) Consider if it be not possible to waive the rule which at present prohibits clergy from serving in the combatant ranks.

FEWER OFFERINGS FROM THE SOUTH.

SPOT MARKETS CONTINUE TO SHOW STUBBORN STRENGTH.

Sixty Per Cent. Increase in the Cablegram from Alexandria—Irregularity Characterized the First Hour on the Exchange—An Interpretation of the Quotations.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

NEW YORK BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 18.—Evening-up committments produced irregularity in the first hour of the cotton market but in the final dealings under the impulse of a good class of buying the market strengthened. The absence of southern offerings of consequence has encouraged the belief that but little cotton in the South remains unhedged, and this, added to the stubborn strength in southern spot markets, partly explains the independence of holders despite the bearishness of the statistical position. A cable from Alexandria, Egypt, says there will be an increase of 60 per cent. in the cotton area of Egypt during the coming season.

Liverpool cables due 2½ lower on May, 3½ lower on July and October, and 4 lower on January, came 1 better than due on May and July, and 2 better on October. Private Detective, Charged with Bribery, is Surrendered to Police.

George Bitten, a private detective, was surrendered to the police early last night by his bondsmen, A. R. Rogers and F. J. Winens. He was free on $2000 bail, pending hearing of a charge of bribery.

Bitten has been arrested by the local police on two charges of embezzlement and once in San Francisco on a charge of bribery. He is alleged to have attempted to buy over a witness in one of the embezzlement cases.

The bondsmen stated last night that they did not care to assume further liability.

AS A HOUSE OF CARDS IS MADE.

Remarkable Home of Chicago Capitalist Completed.

Great Walls Made Separately and "Stuck Together."

Whole Structure a Marvel of Space-economy, Beauty.

Have you ever, when driving [illegible] ward along Santa Monica boulevard been struck a slanting blow in the face by a sign that reads:

"Go two blocks south and [illegible] back"?

If so and you are normally [illegible] or normally obedient to peremptory orders, you can still remember [illegible] your back wheels skidded as you [illegible] the corner of King's Road to go and do as the sign says.

And you understand what happened to Walter Luther Dodge, the Chicago capitalist, when he went two blocks south and looked back—why he bought a few of those flat [illegible] hunted up an architect and began to build a home.

Mr. Dodge likes a fine view. [illegible] instead of doing the usual thing—the thing of planting a house on the hillside where it looks very fine as you go to or from it, but where, from windows and garden the hills are [illegible] and the only view is out over a [illegible] featureless plain, he set his house on the plain where forever and [illegible] he has a sweeping view of the [illegible] line of Hollywood hills.

Mr. Dodge went about the building of his house as he went about the building of the business that made him a millionaire.

More than once it took all his courage of an absolutely independent mind to face the questions and criticisms of people who like the [illegible] run of houses and ruts in general, who never dare venture to have what they want for fear of what somebody will think and say.

"Fine factory site," was the comment of an early visitor who went two blocks south and did not turn back. He did not realize that, given a bit of imagination and some work with scrapers, level land need not be main level. While plans were being drawn, scrapers were at work, and presently the site assumed contour and feature. The land was raised in the center where the house was to go, and a stepped wall on the street side today emphasizes the grade. Toward the hills the ground was cut away abruptly, leaving a sunken garden for the reflecting pool with its border of blue iris and its guard of stately cocos plumosa, across and through which one glimpses the fragment of garden wall with its gracefully arched gates, its seats and a fascinating wall fountain tiled in bright colors, its pergola whose heavy redwood beams have been left to color naturally in the sun, and over and beyond the pool and wall, the hills. The gates in the wall are a standing invitation to the hills on rare days, but into the garden always.

WALL AT A TIME.

"Looks like the San Diego fair," said one looking down from the boulevard in the early stages of building as the outline showed unusual proportions for a dwelling. The house was a seven-days' wonder to passers-by. Each wall was formed complete on a table supported by wall beams—hollow tile reinforced, rough concrete and concrete plaster finish, with all openings and even details such as window boxes and small balconies constructed on the table. When set, the wall was raised slowly into vertical position by means of a four horse power engine. When all the walls were in place, the corners were bound together by a pouring of concrete heavily reinforced. This method requires absolute nicety of calculation, but the expense of wood forms is done away with and one expert can handle the construction with common laborers to wheel the barrowloads of concrete and dump them on the table.

NO WOOD IN IT.

The extreme simplicity of the completed exterior is an earnest of the explicit understanding between Mr. Dodge and his architect and builder, Irving J. Gill. They are agreed that the time has come to glorify the twentieth century, and to quit digging around in the past and in foreign lands for something to copy more or less badly.

Save for the mahogany paneling in the hall and a wainscoting in the billiard room, there is practically no wood in the house except floors and doors. The latter are [illegible] any slabs without panels or moldings, hand finished and polished and swung on invisible hinges. Baseboards, chair rails, picture moldings, window and door frames are eliminated for the simple reason that in a concrete house they are superfluous. They belong to the day that is going, not the one that is coming.

Counted as essential to the happiness of the Dodge family is the fullest possible enjoyment of California out doors. Every window is placed where it frames a rare view of the hills. One window in an upper room has no other purpose and is [illegible] in the wall, which is beveled like a frame around the glass.

Every room on the lower floor opens directly upon the garden. Through long French windows, one steps from the breakfast room into a tiny walled garden where flowers urge one outside while the dew is still clinging to the petals. The dining-room has its own bit of garden. From hall and living-room one goes to the court with its charming [illegible] fountain with basin tiled in rare old blue, beyond which lie the pool, the garden with its reflection [illegible] yonder to one side a great patch of roses.

The gardener has been busy ever since the builder began. Trees were planted before the foundations were laid, vines and grass went in as soon as the walls were up, and flowers were blooming by the time the roof went on. These things are [illegible] essential to happiness [illegible] kitchen sinks, and form a [illegible] part of the architectural scheme.

PINE TREE STATE ASSOCIATION.

The Pine Tree State Association of Los Angeles will meet in the [illegible] Assembly Hall on the [illegible] corner of First and Broadway, [illegible] evening, March 21, when [illegible] Andrews of The Times [illegible] editor of the Lewiston [illegible] will speak on "The [illegible] Press." A choice musical program will also be presented.

Railroad Official Says Villa may Never be Caught.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

PASADENA, March 18.—If one by one the most charming Parisiennes a [illegible] artist ever painted were to step from the frames of the pictures and promenade, the scene, in point of [illegible], smartness and up-to-the-minute [illegible], could not have rivaled the fashion show given yesterday afternoon and evening at the Hotel Maryland.

It was held under the auspices of the Central Board of Charities and several local organizations will be liberally helped with funds raised by the dollar-admission fee which Pasadena and Los Angeles society folk fairly crowded each other for the opportunity of paying.

The daintiest of afternoon frocks, the most stunning costumes for golf, riding, hunting, bathing and other outdoor sports, elicited exclamations of surprise and wonder from hundreds of spectators, as living models paraded up and down before them in the court of the hotel during the afternoon. In the evening elaborate party toilettes were exhibited in the ballroom of the hotel, where a stage had been constructed.

The climax of this wonderful exhibition, a veritable magic realm which to a feminine heart overtopped Aladdin's cave and all its marvelous revelations, was a bride and four bridesmaids in finery almost beyond comprehension.

MANY MODELS.

Grover Magnin, who two days ago brought all of the costumes and sixteen professional models from San Francisco, superintended the show. But a bevy of Pasadena society girls, eager to do their share toward making the show the great success it was, donned some of the smartest costumes and paraded with the others. Among them were Mrs. S. L. Berg, Misses Frances Miller, Dorothy Melcher, Frances Lunkenheimer, Ada Reis, Helen and Julia Smith, Priscilla Marston, Irene and Florence Grosse and Florence Harrington.

The scene of the afternoon part of the programme was laid on the lawn, where a stage was constructed. The models, after appearing on the stage, stepped down to the promenade, which extended forward the distance of about half a city block. On both sides of this promenade the spectators were seated.

There were several tiers of seats for those who desired close views of the gowns worn, and back of these were the tables for others who might prefer to combine the entertainment with afternoon tea. But so great was the attendance that many were required to stand. Music and dancing contributed to make the afternoon enjoyable.

The evening programme was given in the ballroom of the hotel, where a still more elaborate stage was constructed and where electric spot-lights and other improved lighting facilities aided greatly in bringing out the beauty of the costumes, which were mostly evening gowns.

The verdict of Pasadena society is that it was the greatest fashion show Southern California has ever had and the affair, judged from a monetary point of view, is expected to be the most remunerative of all charity benefits that have been given here.

VILLA MAY ESCAPE.

Edgar Van Etten, formerly an official of the New York Central Railroad and who was at one time president of the Cuban Eastern Railway, gave it as his opinion, at the Raymond yesterday, that many months may elapse before the United States' punitive expedition into Mexico succeeds in capturing Villa. Mr. Van Etten speaks from his personal knowledge of the character of the country in which Villa will probably make his stand. He has traveled over much of Mexico and in these travels has been far from the railroads in many different parts of the country.

"Knowing the country as I do," said Mr. Van Etten yesterday, "and not taking stock in the report that Villa has 5000 men, I do not think it unlikely that he will be successful in eluding our troops for a long time. If he has only 500 men he will do it for they have to live on the country through which they pass and any one at all familiar with this war-ridden section knows what a scarcity of supplies there would naturally be. An army of 5000 men would very soon disintegrate, but I do not believe Villa will ever be taken, at least not for a long while. If he is, it may be by accident."

HEIRLOOM SOCIAL.

A unique church sociable was given at the United Presbyterian Church yesterday. It was called an heirloom social. Each person who attended brought an heirloom.

The collection of these things, many of which were of great value, sufficed to turn the church parlors for the afternoon into a museum. The affair was so enjoyable that another [illegible] one will probably be given later on.

FIND DEAD HORSE; SEEK ITS MASTER.

SANTA BARBARA, March 18.—The entire county is being searched for Frank Loustalot, Santa Barbara merchant who last Saturday night left his wife standing in the middle of Hollister avenue, at Goleta and drove away. This morning his horse and buggy were found in a gulch on the W. H. Payne ranch, Goleta, the horse dead, evidently driven to death. Loustalot was last seen ascending the Dos Pueblos Creek near Naples thirty miles from where his horse was found.

Loustalot was a wealthy business man. He became deranged a year ago. He had been brought from [illegible] on parole, steadily improving. It is believed he has perished in one of the many canyons between here and Gaviota. His family has been hunting him until today when the finding of the dead horse aroused suspicion and several posses are now making a search.

HUGGER CAPTURED.

Teacher Screams and Embracer is Caught by Irishman Rescuer after Sharp Run—Board of Trade Election—I.W.W.'s Burn Many Barns.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

OXNARD, March 18. — William Rolls, who gave his home as Ventura where he said he had a wife and three children, was caught attempting to hug a school teacher on a residence street shortly after dark. Rolls received a sentence of six months in jail. The officers say Rolls may be a man who has been annoying high school girls for some time, for whom they have been searching.

At the time of Rolls's capture, he grabbed one of two young ladies walking together. Holding one so tightly she could not scream, her companion's shouts brought James McGarry, sexton of Santa Clara Church, to her assistance. Rolls started to run but was pursued and caught by McGarry and turned over to officers.

TRADE OFFICERS.

John Steinmiller was elected president of the Oxnard Board of Trade for the coming year, succeeding Maj. J. A. Driffill, who after three years' service declined to be a candidate. Other officers elected were, Rudolph Beck, vice-president, and C. J. Elliott, re-elected secretary.

R. B. Edmondson and Sam Weill, with the officers, will constitute the executive board for the year. The board passed resolutions indorsing the bond issue for $51,000 for a new grammar school, which will be voted on tomorrow.

I.W.W.'S BURN BARNS.

That the I.W.W. campaign of incendiarism directed against ranchers, has reached Ventura county, is evidenced by the burning, within the past ten days, of a number of barns in this section. In every instance there have been indications of incendiarism.

John Laughlin, a prominent rancher, residing near Somis, lost his barn, five head of fine horses, and a large quantity of valuable property. A hay barn belonging to the Springville ranch, and containing a quantity of bean and barley straw, was burned. A barn belonging to A. Camarillo, on the Ernest Jones ranch, was destroyed with eight head of horses, seventy tons of hay and other property. A short time ago the McKee brothers suffered a heavy loss on their ranch in Las Posas.

In every instance, the fires started late at night, and were well under way when discovered. The County Mutual Fire Insurance Company, which carries much of this class of insurance, will probably offer a substantial reward for the apprehension of the fire bug.

ANGELENO SPEAKERS.

More than 200 guests, from all parts of the county and Los Angeles, attended the annual banquet of the Loyal Sons of St. Patrick, last night. An elaborate menu was provided. The speakers, with the exception of Charles F. Blackstock of Oxnard, were from Los Angeles. They were John G. Mott, Isadore B. Dockweiler, Walter J. Goldsmith, and Thomas P. White.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 18.—B. B. Lewis, millionaire sportsman of New York and member of the Aero Club of America, will arrive here April 1, the first stop in his transcontinental trip from San Diego to New York to gather data for an aero mail route for the Federal government and incidentaly to smash the cross-country flying record of Cal Rodgers.

S. I. Dekrafft, of San Diego, was here today to arrange for a place where Lewis can alight and take on twenty gallons of gasoline before continuing to Las Vegas, Nev., which will be his night control.

Lewis, who has flown on the war front in Europe with William Thaw, will carry fifty pounds of mail for New York and expects to make the trip in sixty hours flying time. He will pass Salt Lake City, Denver, St. Louis and Cincinnati. The data he gathers will be turned over to the War Department, from which he has a commission.

This week "Hotel del Coronado" expects to have some vacant rooms.—[Advertisement.

RURAL ROUTES CHANGED.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

MONROVIA, March 18. — Orders were received here today by Postmaster Frank Zimmerman announcing the consolidation of the Monrovia rural free delivery route with the San Gabriel route, effective June 1. This will make the mail headquarters for a big area of rich agricultural territory, extending from Monrovia south to El Monte, west to San Gabriel and north to Lamanda Park. Both Lamanda Park and San Gabriel postoffices will be included in the new route, which will be served by a motor vehicle. The reason given for the consolidation is economy. The two R.F.D. carriers, receiving $1200 per annum each, will be succeeded by one carrier, whose salary will be $1608.

GYPSY PRINCESS TO WED WITH GREAT CEREMONY.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

SAN BERNARDINO, March 18.—A band of about 150 gypsies traveling in big automobiles pitched camp near the city today and made preparations for the wedding tomorrow of Diana Mark, great granddaughter of the famous millionaire gypsy queen, Mary Adams, who died here a few months ago and was buried in Denver with elaborate ceremonies.

The girl, who is one of the most beautiful in the tribe, is descended from the King of the Serbian gypsies, while her youthful fiance, George Monero, has blood of the old Brazilian gypsy rulers flowing in his veins.

Alex Adams, son of Queen Mary and grandfather of the bride, is leader of the band who arrived here from the north in about thirty automobiles.

Elaborate preparations are being made for the festival tomorrow. Sixty gallons of beer, which was secured for the feast, was seized today on the the order of Dist.-Atty. T. W. Duckworth, as its transportation was contrary to the county dry ordinance.

GLENDALE IS CHOSEN AS CONVENTION CITY.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WHITTIER, March 18.—Glendale won against Venice and Long Beach as the 1917 convention city for the Los Angeles County Christian Endeavor tonight. Competition for the quarter-centennial convention was keen and the announcement of the selection of Glendale was received with vociferous applause.

Officers of the County Christian Endeavor Union were elected this afternoon. A. H. Anderson of Pasadena will head the county hosts as president; Hugh Huddleston of Eagle Rock is first vice-president; L. L. Hoskins of Long Beach, second vice-president; Mabel Galey of Glendale, secretary; C. Fred Steele of Los Angeles, treasurer, Rev. W. E. Edmunds of Glendale, pastoral counselor.

Today has been a busy one for the 1916 convention. Beginning with a "hilltop" meeting at 6:30 this morning, the day has been filled full with business, addresses and banquets. This evening three big banquets were held simultaneously, with a uniform programme given in triplicate.

Many of the local pulpits will be filled by visiting Christian Endeavor workers tomorrow, and most of the churches will unite with the convention sessions in the afternoon and evening.

Harry Denton of Sacramento, State Christian Endeavor president, is an active participant in the convention and is proving a good booster for the State convention.

The convention chorus, under the leadership of L. F. Peckham, is proving a delightful feature of the convention.

This afternoon Rev. Matt S. Hughes spoke to the convention on "California Dry."

SEAL BEACH, March 18. — For threatening to kill both Judge John C. Ord of Seal Beach and Justice of the Peace C. Bowdish of Santa Ana, a man giving the name of Joseph Smith, a Mexican fisherman living at Alamitos Bay, was sentenced yesterday to serve sixty days in the County Jail.

Following his flashing of a big revolver and his threats to kill Judge Ord, former president of the Seal Beach City Trustees, who asked the fisherman why he had not delivered an order of fish he had promised the Ord family, the Mexican was arrested by City Marshal Nueshwanger, who finally was compelled to overpower the prisoner to take him into custody.

When Justice of the Peace Bowdish sentenced Smith to serve thirty days for his alleged misconduct, the prisoner then threatened to "get" the judge when his thirty-day term expired and he was free again. Thereupon the magistrate doubled the sentence to give the Mexican time to think over the matter.

ANOTHER DOG KILLED.

Placing the lives of several bystanders in jeopardy, the second bulldog of the week was killed today by Aviator Harry Christofferson on the beach here.

Jumping high into the air in an effort to secure a grip on the whirling blade of the propeller of the biplane as the aviator was about to ascend, the big bulldog killed today was knocked twenty-five feet by the impact. His skull was found to have been cloven in half. This makes two propellers this week the aviator has had to replace because of bulldogs.

LICENSE REFUSED.

A license for the operation of a cafe wherein liquor may be served was denied Biyler & Combs, proprietors of the Seal Beach Inn, who recently purchased the hotel from P. A. Stanton, on the ground that they had not filed the necessary bond for such a license. A notice was also ordered sent to the Jewel City Amusement Company and the proprietor of the Casino at Anaheim Landing that until they also should file a like bond their licenses would be withheld.

BRYN MAWR OFFICER DISARMS MEXICANS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

BRYN MAWR, March 18.—The Mexican population here was disarmed today by Constable Hetblack and co-officers. The officers secured about two dozen revolvers, three rifles, some shotguns and other firearms. They also confiscated all of the liquor they could find in the Mexican settlement and had a wagonload of wine, beer and whisky when the raid was completed.

Constable Hetblack said that he feared something might happen tonight unless the precaution was taken as Saturday night is the time usually taken by the Mexicans to get drunk and start something. Mexican settlements throughout the county are being disarmed.

OPPOSE PREPAREDNESS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

FILLMORE, March 18. — Resolutions opposing the programme of preparedness were adopted by the Ventura County Church Federation at its meeting here. In an address on "Preparedness" Dr. J. A. Geissinger, pastor of Boyle Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, Los Angeles, he stated that the principal persons in promoting the huge proposed war programme are either directly or indirectly interested in the manufacturing of arms and ammunition for revenue only, and that those who profit by such a scheme are anxious to push the military programme now, believing that after the close of the European war the sentiment in favor of general disarmament will be so great it would then be impossible to add to our present war burdens. A representative gathering of the Protestant ministers of the county attended the meeting.

SAVED BY KNOCKOUT WHILE TAKING POISON.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

PORTERVILLE (Cal.) March 18.—W. S. Beller, a carpenter employed at a local magnesite mine, was prevented from committing suicide this evening in the Main street of the business district, when he was knocked down by a clerk from a local drug store just as he had thrown back his head preparatory to tossing into his mouth sufficient cyanide to have killed a regiment of men.

Beller bought the cyanide with the statement he was poisoning gophers. As he walked from the store he started to unwrap the parcel. The clerk became suspicious and followed him across the street, where Beller stopped in front of a cigar stand, opened the box and prepared to swallow the contents.

Beller was arrested and later turned over to friends who agreed to look after him.

ESCONDIDO MUDDLE.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

ESCONDIDO, March 18. — The municipal election is enlivened with a merry contest over the selection of City Trustees, for which there are two tickets, one known as the administration and the other as the anti-administration. The terms of two of the trustees expire with the present municipal year, W. N. Bradbury and M. L. Howell. The friends of the administration nominated Mr. Howell and Henry Nulton. Those opposed to the administration nominated Thomas Bandy, Alex Stewart and William Evans, William Clark. E. J. Loveless, one of the trustees resigning in December, decided to withdraw his resignation and the withdrawal was accepted. Now the anti-administration forces have brought suit in the courts to oust Loveless from the office. If Loveless should be eliminated the anti-administration forces hope to elect three men and thus get control of the board.

DISPUTE OVER LANDING.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

REDONDO BEACH, March 18.—That a favorable boat landing of the new pier is something worth scrapping for was made evident when two interested parties representing different views came before the Council. The location for the landing has twice been changed and Special Engineer Harding says that if the location of the landing is changed again, the city will have an added expense of $1000, as the concrete piles are in now. George Peterson, an old pilot, told Mayor Tomlinson that unless the landing location is changed boats will be able to land there about one-fourth of the time at the best. Other interested citizens stated that as the new pier is on the best fishing spot on the coast, it would be foolish to take up so much good room for a landing farther out on the pier. The Mayor turned the matter over to the Public Properties Committee.

SCHOOL AFFAIRS.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

SANTA SUSANA, March 18.—A bond issue for either $10,000 or $20,000 for a new school building will be voted on this spring. Whether or not the larger amount is called for will depend on the Simi district's coming in with Santa Susana for the formation of a union school district. The plans are now to erect a grammar school, but it is expected that the outcome will be the construction of a high school which is much needed in this district. Simi, Santa Susana and Moorpark are agreed on the need of a union high school, but so far no two districts would agree as to its location.

HOW TO SALUTE.

So Many Things Required the Tommies Sometimes Get Mixed up.

[Manchester Guardian:] One of the troubles of the new British recruit is how and when to salute. When you learn the art on the parade ground a cane stuck in the ground stands for the holder of the King's commission and the squad is marched up and down practicing the salute. Three paces in front of the cane the recruit swings his arm in a circular motion to the head, palm outward, turns his head to the cane ("looks the officer straight in the eye," as the instructor puts it.) That is all; but in practice there are problems. You salute every officer and the word includes naval officers and certain naval warrant officers. There are some men who don't know a naval officer from an anti-aircraft gunner, but there is some excuse for a man who fails to spot chief gunners, chief boatswains, chief carpenters and chief schoolmasters in the navy, who rank as second lieutenants in the army. When the new army man sees an officer in the offing he begins to get ready. He has to make up his mind which is the correct hand to use (the one farthest away from the officer,) and if he carries a service cane he must place it under his other arm and cut away the arm. A pair of gloves or a parcel may complicate these preparations, and it is not an uncommon experience for the man to be too late to catch his officer, or to find that he saluted with his gloves in the saluting hand, or bungled some other arrangement.

"Do you salute when you have a lady on your arm?" was a question put by a recruit to an instructor. "You never have a lady on your arm," was the ambiguous answer. There are special ways to be followed when riding or cycling or with the arms engaged, but if one passes along Regent street or stands on a platform it is easy to see how impossible it is to carry out the letter of the order. It is much simpler for the colonial troops. Regulation or no regulation, they salute nobody.

DESTRUCTIVENESS OF RIVERS.

Mississippi is Rapidly Changing Louisiana's Shore Line.

It is estimated that the rivers of the earth carry 6500 cubic miles of water to the sea every year. If, writes John Oliver La Gorce, in the National Geographic Magazine, the reader can imagine a column of water ten miles square and reaching sixty-five miles skyward, he will get a fair idea of the tremendous work that the sun and the winds have to do in pumping up this water out of the sea and carrying it over the earth. Perhaps a third of this is expended on the landed area of the earth.

Imagine a falls half a mile high and as large as 10,000 Niagaras tearing away at the continents every day and wresting material from them and transporting it to the sea. This represents the work of the running waters. The Mississippi River alone carries more than 1,000,000 tons of material to the Gulf of Mexico every day. It would require nearly 1700 Lidgerwood dirt trains, such as were used at Panama, to move each day's deposits that the Mississippi brings to the Gulf.

The total bulk of material removed annually from the Mississippi Valley into the Gulf through the Mississippi River is greater than the total amount of material removed from the Panama Canal, as it stands today, by the French and the Americans. In view of this fact the statement of Gen. Goethals, the builder of the Panama Canal, that the man who attacks the task of deepening the Mississippi River will have the biggest engineering job ever undertaken by man, indeed becomes significant.

How rapidly the Mississippi is carrying forward its task of changing the shore line of Louisiana is revealed by the fact that it is building a mile of Louisiana territory into the Gulf every seventeen years. Its delta, assuming that a delta begins at the first point where a break occurs and river water escapes to the sea, is now more than 200 miles long. This territory, which has been entirely built up by the river, now contains nearly 12,000 square miles, making it equal in size to the State of Maryland. For every 1500 pounds of water that the Mississippi carries to the sea it carries one pound of material, either solid or in solution. It carries down to the sea nearly eight times as much material as the Nile, whose alluvial burdens have enriched Egypt for thousands of years.

Strange Signs on Ships.

[St. Joseph News Press:] Strange signs frequently hang from ships which puzzle even dwellers in seaport towns. A basket slung from the mainmast head is a sailor's sign to notify that the cargo has been loaded or discharged, as the case may be, and that the ship is ready to start on her next trip. This she cannot do until the usual board of trade formalities have been observed, and the ship's papers which, while a ship is in port, are deposited with the board of trade, have been returned to the captain. A generally mysterious emblem is a besom lashed to a mainmast or bridge railing. This is to signify that the vessel is for sale. Occasionally a dark blue stripe may be seen running fore and aft on a vessel; as a matter of fact this is a sign of recent bereavement. Blue is the sailor's mourning, and the stripe of this color takes the place of the black margin or band used by the landsman as a notification of death.

Open Cut Not Unsightly.

LOS ANGELES, March 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] The best answer I know of to the assertion that the open cut through Bunker Hill would be an unsightly chasm is to be found in Naples, Italy, where there is a similar cut through a hill, linking the residential and commercial districts. I passed through this cut many times before I was aware the street was in a cut at all. Buildings of several stories line the street on either side. This re-grade in Naples is of sufficient width for the wide street and deep buildings on either side. Near the deepest part an elevator on the sidewalk takes one to the streets above. An immense amount of business and travel is done on this street, while the older, longer way around the hill is now used but little.

N. W. STOWELL.

Open Cut Misstatements.

LOS ANGELES, March 18.—[To the Editor of The Times:] A letter was received at our office in connection with the opposition to Bunker Hill open cut. Among ten reasons against the open cut scheme was the following:

"(2) The proposed assessment is under the 1913 act, and if you have a bond on your property you must pay cash for this assessment."

This I must say is a misstatement of the law, as Section 24 of the act of 1913, which contains the following clause, "provided, there be no other bond or bonds outstanding against said lot or parcel of land representing any special assesment," was amended by an act of the Legislature, approved June 5, 1915, and is found on Page 1222 of the Statutes and Amendments to the Codes of California for the year 1915. The above quoted proviso was eliminated entirely and the further change was made that a bond may be issued if the assessment amounts to $25 or over.

Further as to the following:

"(3) Although the bonds are supposed to run twenty-five years, you will probably have to pay them if you sell or mortgage your property, and bonds which are paid before maturity are subject to two years extra interest as a bonus."

Again I must say this is another misstatement of the law, as Section 25 of the Act of 1913, which contains this provision, "and in addition thereto, interest for two years at the rate specified in the bond upon the unpaid amount of the principal" was also amended by the same act of the Legislature above referred to, and such amendment is to be found on Page 1225 of the Statutes and Amendments to the Codes of California for 1915, and is as follows: "and in addition thereto, interest for one year at the rate specified in the bond upon the unpaid amount of the principal."

I believe these misstatements of the law affecting the proposed public improvement should be corrected, and all property owners affected thereby should have the benefit of knowing the facts and the law as they exist concerning any liability incurred should this improvement be consummated.

In addition I might say that Section 22 of the original act of 1913 was also amended and is to be found on Pages 1221 and 1222 of the abovementioned Statutes of 1915 and provides "that if the period over which said bonds are to extend exceeds ten years, one-tenth part of the principal sum thereof shall be payable by coupon on the second day of January of each of the last ten years of said period." That would have the effect of only requiring those who had bonds issued for this work to pay the interest for the first fifteen years and principal and interest the last ten years, and payments on principal would not extend over twenty-five years, nor would one twenty-fifth of the principal be due each year after the bonds were issued.

Hoping this will help to clear the somewhat clouded situation as to this important civic work, I am,

R. MORGAN GALBRETH.

Don't be deluded by the many schemes presented to induce you to have your picture taken. In the end you will pay dearly for what you get. Believe it or not, but good, honest and legitimate methods apply to the making of photographs as well as anything else, agents and solicitors expect their fees and commissions, and the photographer his profits, and it is safe to doubt that photographs of a supposed fabulous value can be had at a ridiculously low price. The Stechel Studio stands for the best and Mr. Stechel gives his personal attention to all, whether you have pictures at $5 or $60 per dozen, and it is admitted when you once have had a portrait or a beautiful child study from this noted studio. None other will please. Studio 336½ South Broadway. Main 1389; A1932.

60% of the school children between the ages of 5 and 15 years have disease germs in the mouth due to defective teeth and unhealthy gums. With adults the percentage is alarmingly increased.

Over 25% of adults are afflicted with UNSUSPECTED Deadly Pyorrhea. Pyorrhea in its first stages is easily cured and the formation of poisonous pus which gathers about the teeth, causing them to loosen, and which relentlessly contaminates the food we eat and spreads its deadly poison to every organ of the body, causing rheumatism, heart trouble, dyspepsia and a host of minor ailments, can be eliminated, leaving the mouth clean and allowing the body to recover its natural vigor. We remove diseased nerves painlessly. We crown teeth so that no lodging place is left for food to breed germs. We give you bridgework scientifically constructed for your individual case by operators of 20 years' experience in high-class work, and at moderate prices.

MRS. MASSON,

the noted palmist of London, England, may be consulted at 322 SOUTH SPRING STREET, by those desiring CAREFUL, CONSCIENTIOUS AND SCIENTIFIC HAND READINGS, FROM ONE OF THE FOREMOST PALMISTS OF THE DAY.

The earnest student and thinker will soon learn in his investigations along psychological lines that that which pertains to occult phenomena proper can readily be distinguished from crude and oft-exposed SLEIGHT-OF-HAND TRICKS, the most common of which is the telling of the subject name, age, etc., AFTER HE HIMSELF HAS WRITTEN THAT information.

PALMISTRY HONESTLY PRACTICED WILL NOT tell your name, but it WILL give you information of considerably greater value in everyday life. Your vocation, your present line of work, matters of health and domestic life, financial conditions and ways and means of climbing out of a rut of ill luck into wide paths of success and prosperity can all be told you through scientific palmistry, WITHOUT A SINGLE QUESTION, WRITTEN OR VERBAL.

MRS. MASSON DOES NOT APPEAL TO IGNORANT SUPERSTITION, BUT TO THE FINEST INTELLIGENCE.

HIGH-CLASS PATRONAGE SOLICITED.

We have been doing a mighty fine business during the past few months, and though business generally has been fine this winter, we like to think that the methods we have adopted in the conduct of our houses are responsible for our success. First, last and always our houses are operated in the interests and for the comfort of our guests. Our big aim is to give —service
—cheerful service
—efficient service.

We strive to anticipate our guests' desires and needs,—we want to realize and meet our guests' requirements before they have to ask. Anything in reason—and many things out of reason—are to be had for the asking, and in many instances the want is filled before the want has been made audible.

We spend a good deal of time and money in entertaining—"too much," many of our guests frequently say—but we feel that a happy household is ample reward for all time and money expended. Our amusement programme is the most novel and elaborate given by any similar institution in the city.

If you are not perfectly satisfied where you are, call and see what we can do for you. We are ready to quote permanent rates, payable monthly, on terms under which we are tied up for one or more years, but you are at liberty to sever the agreement at any month-end. Isn't that fair to you?

WALK ONE BLOCK.

MAKE FIVE DOLLARS.

THE HUMAN RACE ALWAYS FOLLOWS THE BEATEN PATH.

For instance, you are looking for a used car. You walk up Main and down Olive streets. That is the used car shopping district.

THE REAL BARGAINS ARE ONE BLOCK BEYOND OLIVE. But you won't walk that block unless we jar you from the beaten path, hence this offer. The Studebaker Corporation will accept this ad in lieu of five dollars cash on any used car in their stock.

You have heard of the Studebaker Used Car Department.

During the past year almost a thousand people have found the right car at the right price—and the right treatment at Studebaker's.

But a greatly increased sale of new cars means that we must increase our sale of used cars—we must get more people to investigate. Hence we pay you to go a little out of the way, knowing that if you do investigate the great bargains we offer will make you buy.

PREPAREDNESS FOR THE CUBANS.

ARMY AND NAVY INCREASE IS BEING AGITATED.

Despite the Size of the Republic, a Military Force of 10,000 Men is Maintained Which Would be Equivalent to 500,000 Men in the United States.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

HAVANA (Cuba) Jan. 10.—The question of the increase of the army and navy of Cuba continues to come up for occasional agitation in the press, but seems to excite no popular response. The few advocates of Cuban "preparedness" base their argument on the possibility of the United States being drawn into the European conflict, in which event they fear that the wealth of Cuba might excite the cupidity of some of the combatants, who might seize upon her attitude of dependency on the United States as an excuse to violate her neutrality.

That Cuba could raise an army of several hundred thousand men is obvious, but there are very few, if any, Cubans who can see the faintest necessity for it. Cuba's army as it stands is a large force for such a small country to maintain. It is somewhat over 10,000 strong, which would be about the equivalent, in proportion to population, of a standing army of half a million men in the United States. Its function is not the repelling of foreign invasion, but the maintenance of domestic order, for which it is admirably adapted, its discipline, organization and equipment leaving nothing to be desired. The only official action looking even remotely towards an increase of the national forces has been a tentative study of the question of the establishment of a national militia. It is highly improbable, however, it will ever be considered seriously.

The Cuban navy, which, up to the time of the restoration of the republic at the end of the second intervention, was known as the revenue cutter service, and was under the control of the Secretary of the Treasury, as in the United States, aspires to play a more and more important role as time goes on. The fleet now possesses two small modern cruisers, and there is talk of purchasing one or two of the older gunboats now in the United States Navy, and also of acquiring a submarine or two and some hydroplanes. Strong efforts are being made by Capt. Morales Cuello, the commanding officer of the navy, to rear up a corps of competent young officers. Hitherto the lads have had their training aboard the schoolship Patria, which makes frequent practice cruises in Caribbean waters, but plans are now being made to establish a regular naval academy, along the lines of Annapolis, on the Bay of Mariel, about thirty miles from Havana, to which will be attached the Patria and some smaller vessels to serve as practice craft for the cadets. It is probable that two Cuban officers now serving aboard ships of the United States Navy will be ordered to the academy to serve as professors.

Taxpayers are Beginning to Ask Why and Wherefore.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

LONDON, Jan. 15.—The heavy toll of the lawyers is the text for many complaints in these days when economy is being largely practiced by the rich, and urgently preached to the poor. Wherever members of the legal profession are employed by the government in positions involving professional practice their financial rewards are far beyond the scale of those received by other government officials, however difficult, dangerous or brilliant may be the service of the less fortunate branches of officialdom.

The three highest legal officials of the government, and a considerable body of judges, draw larger salaries than the Prime Minister of Great Britain. The highest officers of the navy and army, whose duties often involve physical hardships and the risk of death, are poorly paid in comparison with those who represent the government in the courts. Today the people are beginning to ask why this should be, and members of the democracy in politics as well as laboring men are asking the question insistently. It has become a burning topic with the Democratic organs of the press. Why should the Lord Chancellor, whose duties are largely ornamental, be paid more than five times the stipend Admiral Jellicoe receives, is a frequent query.

The office of Lord Chancellor is the most shining target for attack. That office is now costing the government $125,000 a year. It commands a salary of $50,000 and a pension of $25,000. Lord Buckmaster is drawing the salary, and three living predecessors, Lords Halsbury, Loreburn and Haldane are receiving pensions.

Lord Halsbury held the office for ten years and has been retired for ten years. Consequently he has drawn three quarters of a millions dollars for ten years' services. Lord Halsbury is 90 years old, and although still vigorous, cannot be expected to continue long on the pension roll. Lord Loreburn held office for seven years and has been retired a little more than three years, so that he has been paid $475,000. He is 69 years old. Lord Haldane was in office two years and has drawn pension something more than a year. He is just under 60 years of age.

ASQUITH NEXT.

Lord Buckmaster has sat on the woolsack in the House of Lords a little more than one year. Current gossip among politicians has it that he is keeping the woolsack warm for Mr. Asquith, who, according to belief will succeed thereto when the war has ended. A Prime Minister who conducts the Cabinet through a great European war, hardly could be grudged any reward entailing dignity, ease and a good income. Lord Buckmaster is 54 year old, and before his elevation (for elevation is the only world English writers consider commensurate with the process of raising a statesman to the keepership of the Great Seal and the King's conscience) he was not popularly rated as one of the greatest lights of the British bar. If the understanding for the reversion of the office to Mr. Asquith be true, Lord Buckmaster may enjoy a long life with an assured income of $25,000 for comparatively brief services.

Even more lucrative than the dignity of the Lord Chancellorship are the posts of Attorney-General and Solicitor-General. These law officers, as they are called, have been paid salaries of $35,000 and $30,000, respectively. But their duties include practice in the courts, and for court appearance they receive fees, so that the salaries have been regarded as retainers. During the fiscal year 1913-14 the Attorney-General cost the government about $90,000 for salary and fees, and the Solicitor-General about $95,000. Sir Rufus Isaacs, now Chief Justice, who visited the United States last summer as one of the committee to arrange the Anglo-French loan, was Attorney-General part of that year, and Sir John Simon, part of the year. Sir John Simon was Solicitor-General part of that year, and Sir Stanley Buckmaster (now Lord Chancellor,) part of the year.

During the year mentioned Sir John Simon's receipts from the government for his services were, in American money, just about one hundred thousand dollars. This was a record year and the average for the preceding ten years was much lower. Sir Rufus Isaacs gained a very handsome fee for appearing as counsel representing the government in the Board of Trade inquiry into the Titanic disaster.

REDUCE SALARIES.

The two present law officers, Sir F. E. Smith and Sir George Cave, have voluntarily arranged a considerable reduction of their incomes during the continuance of the war. The Attorney-General is to accept $30,000 salary and the Solicitor-General $25,000, a reduction of $5000 each. The scale of fees has been lowered so that each will suffer a loss of $20,000 from the estimated takings of their offices, and the treasury will gain those amounts. Neither one will be extremely underpaid, judged by the revenues of American officials holding similar positions with which comparisons have been made by English writers. Sir Frederick Smith is a young man and he will draw from the government about $40,000 a year, while Sir George Cave may count upon $30,000. In addition they will be rewarded by the prestige and help to their future private practices which a term of holding high legal office is supposed to insure.

The Chief Justice of England, now Lord Reading, is paid $40,000 a year, and the retired Chief Justice Lord Alverstone, who died early in December, drew a pension of $20,000. The six judges who constitute the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary in the House of Lords, and correspond to the American Supreme Court more nearly than any other British Judicial body, are salaried at $30,000 a year. The Lord Chancellor of Ireland and the Master of the Rolls are paid at that rate. The Lord Advocate for Scotland and the Attorney-General for Ireland are on the pay roll at $25,000. Of judges who receive $25,000 there is an imposing array. They include the Chief Justices of Scotland and Ireland; in England, the five Associate Justices of the Court of Appeals, who sit with the Master of the Rolls; the six judges of the Chancery Division, the fifteen judges of the King's Bench Division, the two Presidents of the Court, which by a singular combination sits in Probate, Divorce and Admiralty cases, and thirty Scotch and Irish judges—altogether sixty judicial officers in the United Kingdom salaried at $25,000.

There are nearly thirty judicial officers whose salaries range from $15,000 to $23,000, and any number of minor officials at stipends which are heavy compared with American standards. All the clerks and other important court officers are correspondingly well paid. Every one, from highest to lowest is entitled to a pension as liberal as his salary. The total disbursement in pensions to thirty-six retired judges is $600,000 per annum.

PUBLIC AWAKENING.

Apparently the impression is growing in England that the legal profession is costing the taxpayers more than it deserves, that it is securing a share of the public revenues altogether out of proportion to the number and services of its members. The roll of lawyers in Great Britain is far smaller than in the United States and there are far more handsome plums to be distributed. Admiral Jellicoe's services are bringing him a financial reward of less than $10,000 a year, and Sir John French, Field Marshal, commanding the British army in France, was on the pay sheet at $7500.

In the old-time public life of Great Britain there was a reason in theory for payments to the legal members of the Cabinet and officers of the crown higher than given their colleagues in other fields of work. Most statemen came from the old families, the traditional ruling caste. They were supposed to be men of hereditary wealth who were willing to give their service for the public welfare, while the legal officials were professional men who must sacrifice their private practice when holding office. In the later day of democracy, particularly with the Liberal party, whose leaders include a large number of lawyers, the old tradition does not apply. The Prime Minister, the Home Secretary, the Minister of Munitions, the Chancellor of the Exchequer and several lesser members of the government are lawyers, yet draw far smaller incomes than their colleagues performing no more important legal duties.

From another point of view the financial burden of the law falls less heavily upon the country, as usual. War conditions have brought great decrease of business for the courts.

"The lawyers are starving," wailed a barrister to an editor, discussing a libel suit. "Thank God," was the brutal reply.

Nonchalant.

PARISIANS GAY DESPITE GERMANS.

HOLIDAY SEASON CONDUCTED REGARDLESS OF WAR.

"Peace on Our Own Conditions and in Our Own Good Time," is Principle Enunciated by Former Premier Barthou Which Found an Echo in Hearts of Citizens.

[A. P. FOREIGN CORRESPONDENCE.]

PARIS, Jan. 15.—"The Germans are still at Noyon," as the saying goes, but Paris is undeniably more optimistic at the threshold of another new year of war than at any previous stage of the hostilities. The boulevard crowds during the holidays were bigger and there was more real cheer in the air than a year ago, notwithstanding that since last New Year's Day the allies have achieved few and only local successes.

"Peace on our conditions and in our own good time." That is the principle enunciated in a strong article by former Premier Louis Barthou, to which the French people have subscribed with practical unanimity. "If it takes only one more year of war so much the better, but if it takes two so much the worse for the Germans." That is how the Parisians look at it and their holiday attitude proved that it costs them little to adhere to that philosophy.

The German lines are only about fifty miles from the boulevards at the nearest point, yet Friday afternoon the confectionery shops were crowded as never before. Never were the traditional New Year's bonbons so high and never were the sales bigger. The boxes were delicate specimens of French art and ingenuity and they also were never so dear. A pound box of chocolates cost from 80 cents to $2.40, according to brand. From 50 cents, boxes could be had all along the scale up to $15. The most popular were aluminum boxes in form of an explosive shell with the dates 1914-1915-1916 in black on a copper band or collar. Some houses had metal boxes with busts of Joffre and other generals stamped in bas relief. Others used reproductions of famous statues of the Rheims cathedral to decorate their boxes and all of them sold freely at all kinds of prices.

Soldiers on leave swelled the Christmas week crowds, and if the restaurants suffered from the maintenance of the restrictions as to hours the theaters reaped rich harvests. There was not a vacant seat at matinee or evening performances in any theater, music hall or moving-picture show in Paris, either Christmas or New Year's Day. In front of all the cinematographs giving continuous representations on the boulevards long lines of people were seen at all hours of the afternoon and evening waiting for seats to be vacated.

A conspicuous feature of the holidays of 1915 was the revival of Christmas literature. Christmas books constituted a larger proportion of holiday gifts than usual; most of them were on military subjects and many of them related to the war in progress. Many reprints of celebrated military romances, books on Waterloo, the Marseillaise, some works on the devastation of Belgium, including one by an American author, collections of anecdotes and heroic words of combatants in the great war. Rings and other objects manufactured by the soldiers during their leisure hours at the front were the most popular of all presents, regarded as perfect treasures when the gift came direct, and bought readily by those having no one in the war zone to think of them. "Products of German exportation"—bullets and the aluminum fuses of shells—were mostly used in the making of an infinite variety of objects.

HONOR WHERE HONOR IS DUE.

Gen. John Shuler Wilcox is Center of Unique Affair.

Roast at One House, Dessert at Another, Cigars at Home.

Members of Octogenarian Club Join in Day's Observance.

Unusual in conception, occasion and appointments, a dinner of the progressive sort, with members of the Octogenarian Club as participants, was given in Hollywood yesterday in honor of the eighty-fourth birthday anniversary of Brevet Brigadier-General John Shuler Wilcox, Civil War veteran and scion of a distinguished family.

The club members first met at the home of Gen. Wilcox, No. 5357 Virginia avenue, held a general conversation, and at 1 o'clock went to the home of Gen. Wilcox's daughter, Mrs. Herbert W. Kidd, No. 5343 Virginia avenue, where the main portion of the dinner was served, after which they moved to the home of the second daughter, Mrs. R. F. Fits, No. 5353 Virginia avenue, and finished the dinner with a dessert.

After dessert the club members retraced their steps to the home of Gen. Wilcox and had coffee and cigars, and considered the possibility of the United States becoming embroiled in the present European war.

In considering the after-dinner topic, "Does the European War Necessitate an Increase of Our Naval Armament?" the club voted unanimously that the exhausting struggle is a guarantee of future peace rather than a menace, and does not create such a necessity. Yet they would increase our navy by constructing many submarines, swift cruisers, seaplanes and aeroplanes and great dreadnaughts.

Upon the question, "May Submarines Torpedo Hostile Armed Merchant Vessels without Warning?" the men agreed that future naval battles will largely be decided by forces beneath the waves and from the sky and that as no international rules for the conduct of such warfare are applicable the analogies of land warfare should largely guide.

On the question of an increase in the army strength, they unanimously voted that by moral sentiment and wise laws our people should encourage the military training of young men instead of athletic sports, and that by voluntary enlistment rather than by compulsory law our army should be increased.

UNIQUE CLUB.

Four years ago, on the eightieth birthday anniversary of Gen. Wilcox, he gave a dinner to twelve old friends, all over 80 years of age, and out of that beginning grew the Octogenarian Club, which is one of the most remarkable organizations in the country, numbering among its membership Martin L. Rogers, No. 1936 Magnolia avenue, 88 years of age; Dr. Lewis W. Beck, No. 1824 West Twelfth street, 84 years of age; Dr. Aaron M. Sherman, No. 283 Arcadia Place, Pasadena, 90 years of age; Dr. James M. Peebles, No. 5719 Fayette Square, Garvanza, 94 years of age; Maj. Marshall F. Price, No. 1702 South Bonnie Brae street, 82 years of age; Dr. Henry L. Canfield, No. 316 Kensington place, Pasadena, 88 years of age; Sturges Selleck, No. 1345 Toberman street, 93 years of age; Capt. Levi A. Ross, No. 628 South Westlake avenue, 81 years of age; A. Y. Whitmore, No. 1652 Fourth avenue, 93 years of age; Dr. Silas H. Moore, No. 4043 West Eighth street, 88 years of age, and P. E. Brown, No. 1122 West Ninth street, 83 years of age, and former United States Senator Cornelius Cole of Colegrove, 93 years of age.

THIRD GENERAL.

Gen. Wilcox is the third general in his family. His father was a general in the New York State Militia, and his grandfather fought his way to a generalship in the Revolutionary War. Gen. Wilcox was born at Fultonville, N. Y., March 18, 1832. He went to Illinois in May, 1842. On September 3, 1856, he was married to Lois A. Conger.

In 1855 Gen. Wilcox formed a military organization known as the Washington Continental Artillery. The organization became one of the best known of its kind in Illinois, and in it Gen. Wilcox started his military career. He attained the rank of first lieutenant while with that organization. At the outbreak of the Civil War he enlisted in the Fifty-second Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and was promoted from captain to lieutenant-colonel, then to colonel, and was finally brevetted brigadier-general. He fought in the battles of Shiloh, Corinth, Kenesaw Mountain, and participated in Sherman's march to the sea.

Gen. Wilcox is a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, the Society of the Army of the Tennessee, and of the Southern California Association of Companions of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion. He was a personal friend of Gen. Grant, and also knew Gen. Sherman intimately.

Gen. Wilcox was elected Mayor of Elgin in 1867 and was appointed postmaster in 1876. He was for many years a director of the First National Bank of Elgin and from 1890 to 1895 was president of the board of the Elgin Academy. In recognition of his thirty-nine years' connection with the academy Gen. Wilcox was recently elected an honorary trustee for life.

Gen. and Mrs. Wilcox came to California six years ago and in September expect to celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary. There are three children—Dwight Conger Wilcox, Mrs. Herbert W. Kidd and Mrs. R. F. Fits.

Making Warplanes Under High Pressure

WAR BIRDS ON RUSH ORDERS

Military Aeroplane Made Here Every Six Days.

Local Factory may be Forced to Double its Capacity.

Big Shipment to Mexican Line for Use of Army.

With wars and rumors of wars stimulating the demand for "fighting" aeroplanes, the plant of the Glenn L. Martin Aviation Company, No. 943 South Los Angeles street, is one of the busiest manufacturing concerns in the city, and may be compelled to double its output and greatly increase its working force, as a result of the belligerent activities along the Mexican border. Already a large shipment of aeroplane parts has been sent for repair of army machines at the San Diego aviation field, and United States Army officials have taken up the matter with Mr. Martin of filling a big order for completed machines.

One hundred and fifty skilled mechanics are working steadily in the Martin factory and they have been turning out a completed war aeroplane every six days. The rush of orders received during the last few days has made it imperative to manufacture machines at the rate of seven a month. Even this output may be increased and plans are being considered of working night and day shifts at the factory.

In addition to a number of land machines, the factory has turned out nineteen of the Martin sea aeroplanes, considered by aero military experts the "last word" in war aeronautics. Five were built for the government of Holland, and four of them have been shipped. The other will be sent to Holland as soon as it passes inspection. Two of the sea aeroplanes have been shipped to Pensacola, Fla., for the United States Army; four to the Philippines, and the remainder with repair parts to the San Diego aviation field.

MAKES WORLD RECORD.

The sea aeroplanes are duplicates of the machine used by J. Floyd Smith, the aviation expert, when he made the world's record for altitude. With a passenger he ascended 12,630 feet in one hour and thirty minutes.

The machine is especially constructed for durability, its safety factor being twelve to one, which means it is just twelve times as strong as necessary to insure safe flying. It can maintain a high speed of seventy-seven miles an hour and a low speed of forty miles, and has a gliding angle of fourteen to one. To the layman this means, if something should go wrong with the engine or other material parts of the machine while it is at high altitude, the aviator can skim along for fourteen miles before coming to terra firma.

Carrying seventy gallons of gasoline, the aeroplane is equipped with fuel sufficient to guarantee a flight of ten hours. It will climb 3000 feet in ten minutes, fully equipped for destructive service. Full equipment provides for one passenger or assistant, a machine gun and ammunition, such as bombs and other high explosives. Empty, the machine weighs 2300 pounds, and is constructed to carry 800 pounds.

DOUBLE CONTROL SYSTEM.

The planes have a spread of fifty-two feet with a gap of eight feet. The engine has 125 horse power with a six-cylinder Hall-Scott motor, built especially for aeroplanes. Every control wire is duplicated and either occupant of the machine can operate it under the dual control system. It is the only aeroplane built which can be repaired and placed in service in one hour in the event that the motor should go wrong and have to be replaced.

Huge pontoons of three-ply mahogany and absolutely water proof are carried under the main body of the machine. Mr. Martin says it is practically impossible to sink one of the aeroplanes.

"The machines we are turning out now are designed for war purposes only," said Mr. Martin. "We have received orders, however, from private parties, who want the war aeroplane, because of their wonderful durability. I suppose it is considered that these machines are safer, and that undoubtedly is true. It costs a lot of money to turn out this class of aeroplane—$12,000—but that is a second consideration when a man or a government wants a machine that can be depended upon, even against a hail of bullets.

"I am sure that I have designed the machine that means success in war aeronautics and will not be surprised if the demand become so great than I will be running my factory like the big steel mills in the East—all over time and impossible to keep a supply on hand. I have only skilled mechanics in my employment and every machine is perfect before it is shipped. When it leaves the factory, J. Floyd Smith, an expert, whose reputation is unquestioned, gives it the final test down at the harbor, and when he pronounces it O. K. I feel sure that the work has been well done."

Subterfuge?

CHANGE COLOR OF DELEGATION.

Progressive - Republicans Bid for the Iowa Vote.

Joe Scott Withdraws; Cummins Man Substituted.

Republican Enthusiasm Alarms Johnsonite Wing.

Thoroughly alarmed over the enthusiasm shown throughout the State for the Republican candidates for Presidential delegates, leaders of the Progressive-Republican element have again shattered the slate that was made at the rump convention several weeks ago. Joe Scott has withdrawn as a so-called united party delegate and the name of Joe S. Crail has been substituted on the ticket.

Before the nominating petitions are certified to the Secretary of State other withdrawals are expected. Among those frequently mentioned as being undecided in the matter is Superior Judge Paul McCormick. It is the opinion of many politicians that a Superior Court judge cannot run for another office during his incumbency and Judge McCormick's friends say he has the matter under serious consideration.

The motive behind the Scott-Crail switch is not quite clear but it is generally believed that it was for the purpose of grabbing the support of former Iowans and also to give the Progressive-Republican delegates a chance to appear on the Presidential ballot under a Cummins head instead of in the no-preference column.

POLITICAL SUBTERFUGE?

Should the delegates be instructed for Cummins it does not follow that they would support him in convention. In fact it is believed that he would be made the victim of a subterfuge. There is no question about the intention of the Progressive-Republican delegation. It will stand from the first ballot for Roosevelt, and while it might as a matter of courtesy go into the convention ostensibly for Cummins, it can be depended upon to cast its lot with the Bull Moose wing of the Republican party.

Every effort was made by friends of Joe Crail to get the Republican party of this State to indorse Cummins. The proposition was not looked upon with particular disfavor either until the attempt was made to have the Republican candidates for Presidential delegates placed under a Cummins head.

"We are determined to go into the national convention unpledged," was the answer of the Republicans. "We will go there ready to support any big, loyal Republican but we will not indorse any man. We are satisfied to have our delegates appear in the no-preference column and feel certain they will be elected. They represent the best there is in the Republican party and the Republican voters will not be fooled by a scheme of [illegible] ment."

LOOKS LIKE REVOLT.

Republican leaders locally and in the North are convinced that the voters will not stand for the "double" plan of the Progressive-Republican element. "When the voters learn the the Progressive-Republican ticket, if elected, will go to Chicago in the guise of Cummins supporters, but in reality to give all their strength to Roosevelt, there is no question [illegible] them revolting," said one of the leaders. "The voters will know where the Republican delegates stand. If Cummins is found to be the choice of the Republican delegates in the convention, the California delegation will undoubtedly be for him. It will be for any good Republican, who has the confidence of the national convention. It appears that this is a much better recommendation to the voters than an attempt to fool them into supporting the Progressive-Republican ticket in the hope that Cummins will be nominated when they know down in their hearts that the delegation will be instructed for Roosevelt and no one else."

Mr. Crail is a lifelong friend of Senator Cummins, having served on his military staff and having been closely connected with him in a political way for many years. Recently Mr. Crail started a boom for Senator Cummins in Southern California when he formed a Cummins Club. There are in the neighborhood of 200,000 former Iowans in California, and they naturally have a kindly feeling for Senator Cummins.

LEASED TO NEW FIRM.

Space in Metropolitan Building Secured by New Organization.

The W. Ross Campbell Company, through W. C. Skaggs of its sales and lease department, reports having leased space on the fourth floor of the Metropolitan Building, at the northwest corner of Broadway and Fifth, to the Associated Materials Company, now in process of incorporation, for office and display purposes. The company will be a closed corporation, all of the stock being taken by local investors. The company has the Southern California agency for the Whitney Window Company's products and has just completed arrangements for the manufacture and sale of a patented building tile on the Pacific Coast.

Mr. Skaggs has also leased space in the same building on the sixth floor to the Improved Sanitary Fixture Company, also composed of local men, for office purposes. This company has been doing business in Los Angeles for some time and manufactures and markets patent bathroom fixtures of all kinds. Each company is fitting up its new quarters in first-class shape.

Mr. Thomas, of the Campbell Company, and manager of the Metropolitan Building, reports the leasing of a store at No. 309 West Fifth street to the American Barber Shop, formerly at No. 323 West Fifth street. The premises have been newly remodeled for immediate occupation.

DRESSIEST IN THE WORLD TO BE CITY'S DISTINCTION.

DRESS UP! The call has gone forth. "Discard the old; get into the new" is the slogan which the committee on Dress-up Week hopes will convert Los Angeles into the dressiest city in the world, from March 27 to April 1.

The posters announcing Dress-up Week, which were designed by John Oshanna of Manual Arts High School, are now off the press and will be displayed in all parts of the city at once.

"Dress-up Week is not a man's fashion show week," says Sherley Hunter, chairman of the Publicity Committee. "It is an appeal to clothes-consciousness to get out of the old and into the new attire. Nor is it a mere play on the words, 'dress up.'

"We want people to see and think of their clothes as a craftsman considers the tools he uses.

"It is an appeal to woman, young and old, to have her sweetheart, husband, father, brother dress up and be in tune with her new attire. The entire city should give visiting strangers an impression of being 'dressed up new.'

"Being 'dressed up' reflects itself in the work and attitude of the individual practising it. It is a democratic idea and not to make fops of men, create affectations or class distinction."

Leading organizations of Los Angeles have realized the great advantages to be derived from the movement and among those interested in it are the Chamber of Commerce, Advertising Club, Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, Jovian Electric League, Parent-Teacher Association, Retail Dry Goods Association, Rotary Club, Associated Credit Men, Sales Managers' Association and a score of others.

Many novel events are to be staged in connection with Dress-up Week. C. M. Adler, chairman of Dress-up Week Committee, says the idea will be promoted in every possible way, and every person possible to be interested in the movement will work toward its success.

Dress-up Week this year is to go farther than mere details of personal appearance. "Dress up everything" will be made an object. It is hoped to set aside a day in which the entire city will dress up its streets, yards, buildings and vacant lots as well as its men and women.

"Dress Up!" Says Miss Los Angeles.

The SAN FRANCISCO EXAMINER, the most successful Hearst newspaper, in its issue of Sunday, March 5th, gave its readers and advertisers capital advice in the following words:

"When in doubt as to which of two mediums to use, choose the one with the greater amount of classified advertising.

"The small and mighty want ad., in dominating numbers, is the best associate for the advertiser who would be successful."

THE LOS ANGELES TIMES prints more "Want Ads" than all other local newspapers combined; and, having used in Los Angeles for many years the same argument employed by its San Francisco contemporary, it welcomes this approval of its judgment in the matter.

THE EVER-HIGH TIDE.

XXXVth YEAR. SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 19, 1916. THE MART Transactions in Houses and Lots. Bargains in Blocks and Squares.

FACT AND COMMENT.

The "Ten Reasons Against the Open-Cut Scheme," mailed by the spokesmen of the opposition to the property owners within the proposed open-cut assessment district, bids fair to prove the one big argument of all for the project. Hundreds who have been fooled by the misrepresentations of the opposition spellbinders have begun to see a great light. If ever a movement was thoroughly discredited by the tactics of its sponsors, that having for its purpose the killing of the Bunker Hill opening plan has been.

The opposition tactics culminated on Wednesday in the sending out of a paper of so raw a character as to call forth a statement from the City Attorney's office setting the property owners right on misquoted points of the law. There is no doubt whatever that the City Council will follow at once with a similar statement.

In the face of amendments put on the statute books of the State in 1915, designed to correct the patent injustices of special assessment procedures under the older 1913 act, the opposition leaders on March 15 mailed to every property owner in the open-cut assessment district a statement that he would have to pay his assessment in cash if other assessments stood in the form of bonds against his property. The thing was timed to reach the owners just as the straw vote post cards of the City Council were being mailed. The offices of the assessment bureau and the City Attorney have been besieged with worried and bewildered property owners ever since.

Henry N. James, Deputy City Attorney, in charge of street improvements, did the public a genuine service when, in response to the appeals of the property owners, he consented to make a written statement of the truth as set forth under the law. That statement, published in yesterday's Times in the form of a photographic reproduction of Mr. James's own words, blocks the efforts of the opposition propagandists as nothing else possibly could. The statement set forth what every attorney worthy of calling himself by such a name knows, namely, that assessments of $25 or over for the open cut need not, under the amended 1913 act, be paid in cash under any circumstances whatever, a twenty-five-year bond being issued automatically, irrespective of whether any other bond or bonds stand against the property, in the event the owner does not elect to pay the cash.

Votes not Lost.

Beyond any doubt, a large number of those who have already sent in their postcards have been frightened by the misstatement in the opposition letter into giving an adverse vote and thereby going against their better judgment with respect to the open-cut project. Much of the property in the open-cut assessment district now carries bonds for some public improvement or other and under the anti-[illegible] laws amended last year could not have been bonded further. Hundreds, maybe thousands, of owners who favor the open cut and who would vote for it if guaranteed twenty-five years in which to meet their assessments, would feel they had to vote against it, if they thought the project involved a payment in cash of the assessment apportioned to them.

The opposition reckoned without their host, however, when they imagined that the city officials were going to let them put anything like that over. Arrangements will be made to-

TO OPEN NEW STORE.

Ralphs Brothers Show Faith in Established Business District and in Outcome of Open Cut Project by Leasing Spring Street Building.

Firmly convinced that the business men of downtown Los Angeles north of Sixth street will win in their demand for an outlet through Bunker Hill and that this part of the retail section will continue to hold its own with all others, Ralphs Brothers yesterday concluded a lease on the store space at Nos. 317 to 321 South Spring street and will at once install at that location one of the most modern grocery establishments in the city. The deal was closed through the agency of the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company and was for a term of five years. Clarence S. and Louis D. Fay were the lessors.

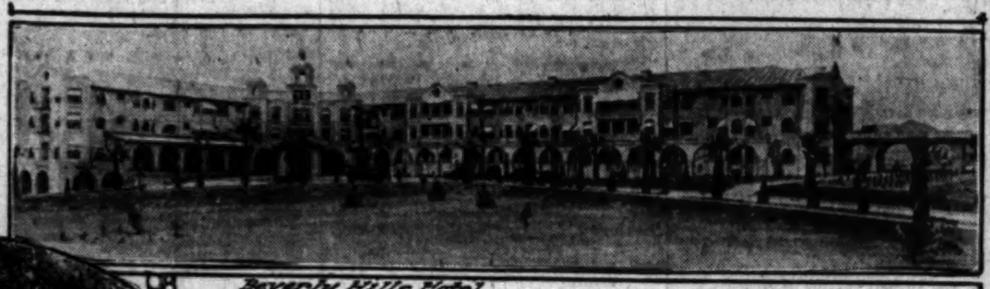
The space secured is 40 feet in width by 200 feet in depth to an alley. Extensive alterations will be started at once and the place will be ready for occupancy by the middle of May. The finish throughout will be in white enamel and the most modern fixtures and appointments are to be installed. The company intends making the store in every way as pretentious as its main place of business on Spring below Sixth.

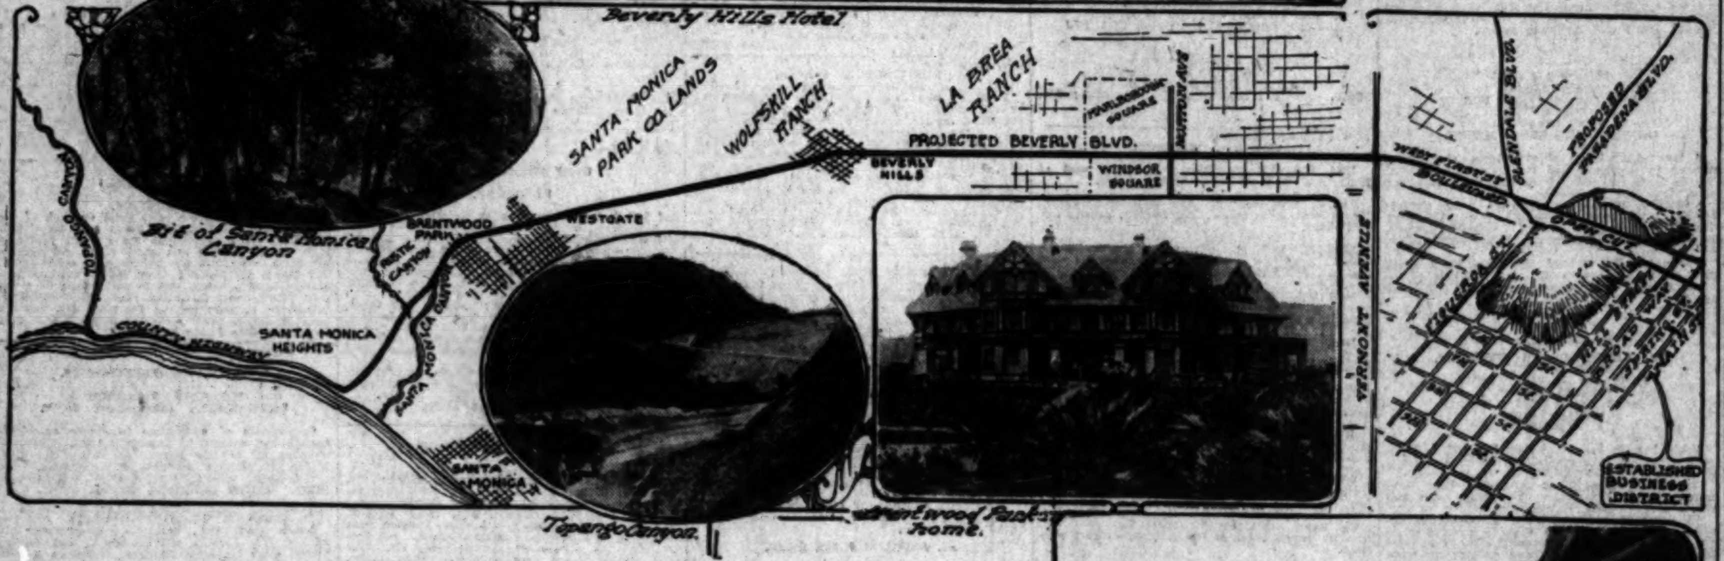
"The strong letter of the merchants and tenants on Broadway and Spring to the City Council and the open cut opponents a week ago convinced me that everything would work out all right for the established business district and northwest Los Angeles yet," said Walter Ralphs, president of the company, yesterday. "The shortsighted owners opposing the new traffic outlet cannot ignore such a movement as that. With the open cut project once put through the stability of property values and business interests both north and south of Sixth street will be insured for all time."

ACTRESS BUYS HERE.

The Janss Investment Company reports the sale of an acre of ground in its New Ramona Acres tract to Bess Olshausen, an Australian actress, who has played in this country for some years. The consideration is given at $1550. Miss Olshausen has ordered the construction of a bungalow and expects to make Southern California her future home.

Projected Los Angeles-Santa Monica Boulevard.





Along shore

New seaward route and its scenic setting.

The highway, which will be known as Beverly boulevard, will be formed by widening and paving Temple street from Vermont avenue westward to the city limits and its extension westward through Beverly Hills and Brentwood Park to the ocean. It is backed by frontage owners and land holders alike and will be rushed ahead by its projectors. It will open into the projected West First-street boulevard at Vermont avenue, adding its traffic to the enormous stream of travel flowing over that thoroughfare eastward to the edge of Bunker Hill. The open cut, if carried out, will bring the stream directly through the hill into the business section.

"Beverly Boulevard."

PLANS ARE SHAPING FOR NEW CITY-TO-SEA ROUTE

Temple Street to be Improved from Vermont Westward as Part of Scenic Air Line Highway to Santa Monica. Traffic of Thoroughfare to Swell the Stream Dammed by Bunker Hill.

A SURPASSING city-to-sea boulevard, glowingly pictured by its projectors as a "second Montecito drive,' and destined to bring the whole of the beautiful and rapidly advancing Beverly Hills, Brentwood and Santa Monica Canyon districts into more direct communication with Los Angeles, has been made a probability of the immediate future as the result of a movement quietly and successfully carried out during the past few weeks. The first public announcement of the project was made yesterday by Gilbert Wright, president of the Wright-Callender-Andrews Company, and one of the prime movers in the enterprise.

The plan is an elaboration on entirely new and independent lines of the West First-street boulevard project launched two years ago and which has since by mutual understanding among the property owners between Bunker Hill and the west city limits been divided into segments to be handled by different districts. The new plan is concerned with the improvement of that particular portion of the greater boulevard undertaking lying west of Vermont avenue along the present line of Temple street and with a newer scheme for extending the route on westward from the city limits through Beverly Hills to the ocean.

Instead of West First street boulevard, the highway from Vermont to the sea will be known as Beverly boulevard. The projectors are willing that the connecting boulevard from Vermont in to Figueroa should be named by those who build it, but express the hope that one name can be made to serve for the entire route. The name, Beverly boulevard, they point out by way of suggestion, is not only easier to say, but is more expressive of the scope of its usefulness.

The sooner a bridge is built across the Bimini ravine to link their highway with West First street at Commonwealth avenue, as contemplated in the original West First-street boulevard plan, the better they will like it. It is their hope that the West First-street frontage owners will rush the proceedings already instituted for the grading, widening and paving of their thoroughfare on to Figueroa street and that the projected open cut through Bunker Hill will go ahead, giving them a direct outlet into the business district, instead of forcing them to turn abruptly southward on Figueroa and go around the hill. Their plans will be carried out, however, independently of both these projects.

"We hope we have started something that will hasten the solution of the present traffic problems of the whole vast area between Sixth street and Sunset boulevard from Figueroa westward to the city limits," said Mr. Wright in discussing the plan. "The open cut would mean everything in the development of the great district that will be served by our boulevard through the fact that it would give us the shortest possible route into the shopping zone. It is certain, too, that the enormous traffic of the high-class and rapidly advancing regions through which our highway will pass will constitute an asset of incalculable value to the property owners and business men of the established retail district, if they will but provide us a direct way in. Meanwhile, we are going right ahead."

WELL UNDER WAY.

Temple street now extends as far west as Norton avenue, and from Vermont avenue on is of almost uniformly easy grade. Those handling the new boulevard project started in at Vermont avenue and canvassed the property owners westward to the end of Temple street, securing the indorsement of the owners of a majority of the frontage. A petition to widen and pave the entire street and to make slight changes in the grade at two or three points will go before the City Council within a few days.

Westward from Norton avenue a short distance, James V. Baldwin is now carrying the street on as a wide, serviceable thoroughfare along the south side of his new Marlborough Square subdivision. Mr. Baldwin is also performing another important service to the community by extending Vine and Gower streets, two of the important thoroughfares of Hollywood, on southward from Melrose avenue along either side of his property to this Temple-street extension. A considerable travel from Hollywood, it is therefore assured, will be directed over the new boulevard from the start.

Part of the gap of a few hundred yards between Norton avenue and Mr. Baldwin's tract will be filled in by another extension of Temple to be built by the owners of the fashionable Windsor Square subdivision, an undertaking marking the beginning of the intensive development of the northern portion of that sightly property. That will leave but a small break to be cut through and arrangements for this bit of street are now being perfected.

Acreage owners from Vine street on westward in a straight line to Beverly Hills have already agreed to provide the right of way to extend the boulevard to that exclusive residential suburb. From Beverly Hills the boulevard wil go through the Wolfskill ranch, the Santa Monica Mountain Park Company's picturesque holdings, the Westgate district, the upper part of Brentwood Park and Oakmont to the edge of the Santa Monica Canyon, skirting the foothills all the way at a commanding elevation, but always on easy grades.

Crossing the canyon, the highway will run for some distance alongside of that heavily-wooded ravine, rising then on a gentle grade on to what has long been known as the "Mesa," a broad space framed on two sides with oak-covered hills and overlooking the whole of the canyon district. Then on past Rustic Canyon the drive will lead to Santa Monica Heights, where the whole west beach shore line will break upon the view of the traveler. Most of the region between Beverly and this commanding point is held in large tracts, and the owners are declared to be enthusiastic for the plan.

At the western edge of the Santa Monica Heights holding, in which Mr. Wright is heavily interested and which is slated for early development along high-class lines, the new boulevard will run into the Topanga Canyon highway of the county's good roads system. Thence users of the boulevard can pass through Topanga Canyon into the San Fernando Valley and on up to Ventura and Santa Barbara, or continue on along the Coast to the Malibu. Each route has its own widely famous scenic beauties.

In its passage through the Westgate district the new boulevard will intersect San Vicente boulevard, which will bring to it a large volume of travel from the district between Westgate and the Palisades and which runs along the side of Brentwood Park and past the Brentwood Country Club and Brentwood Place. Much traffic of the Santa Monica district that now uses Wilshire boulevard will also go to Los Angeles over the new route.

ITS GREAT VALUE.

The value of the projected boulevard, say those backing it, lies not only in its strategic situation through the middle of the wide stretch of sightly territory between Wilshire boulevard and the foothills, but in its absolute straightness and directness. Temple street from Vermont avenue west was laid out in an old day on section lines and is without jogs or elbows. Its seaward extension will follow the same section lines, almost without swerving, to the ocean.

Maps of the Temple street portion of the project have been made for submission to the City Council and drawings and specifications for the rest will be prepared at once. The boulevard will be from 80 to 100 feet in width as far west as Beverly and nearly as wide from there on, according to its sponsors.

Its construction, say those back of the enterprise, will result in the solid and substantial development of all the

VALUATION WORK NOW UNDER WAY.

REALTY BOARD INNOVATION IS ESTABLISHED.

First Contract of New Appraisal Committee Performed in Harbor District — Organization is Now Seeking Commission to Perform Government Service.

The Los Angeles Realty Board Appraisal Committee, which was recently created by amending the by-laws of that organization, is now an established institution. Several applications for the services of the committee, it is announced, have already been received and work along the lines planned has actually been done.

The first appraisal attempted by the new committee was one taking in a piece of valuable property near the harbor front at Wilmington. The valuations placed upon the holding, say members of the board, will constitute a future basis for harbor appraisements in the vicinity.

The Realty Board is now seeking a commission from the United States government to appraise the real estate holdings of all the railroads in Los Angeles. The National Association of Real Estate Exchanges, of which the local board is a member, is urging the Interstate Commerce Commission to assign such work in all cities to the appraisement committees of the realty organizations. Prominent business men and bankers of Los Angeles have already pointed out to the commission the advantages to be realized by offering the work in this city to the local board.

The committee of the Los Angeles board has already perfected its various subcommittee organizations. These include committees for the appraisal of business, residence, industrial, harbor, subdivision, suburban acreage and agricultural property.

FINE HOMES SOLD.

Victoria Drive and Serrano Avenue Mansions Transferred for Cash.

Two important sales of residence property are reported by Mr. Norwood, manager of the house and lot department of Robert Marsh and Company.

The larger transfer involved the sale by Lorne D. Oliver and J. H. Hillock to John P. Kennedy, of this city, of a handsome fourteen-room residence of the English type at No. 1818 Victoria drive. The house is finished in mahogany, oak and white enamel. A unique feature is a ballroom on the third story. The consideration is given at $17,500. Mr. Kennedy also purchased at the same time from the Crenshaw Security Company thirty-five feet adjoining the property on the south, paying for the frontage a given consideration of $1750.

The other residence sale was the transfer for N. F. Stokes to Miss Mary A. Rainey of a two-story house of white plastered exterior at No. 308 Serrano avenue. The place is attractively finished throughout. The cosideration is given at $10,000.

In fair Los Angeles city,
There's a tract that's more than pretty,
In a SQUARE that's named for honored
LAFAYETTE;
And a residence so charming—
At a price that's not alarming,
That a purchaser it's bound to quickly get!

And if wise buyers knew it
They would quickly look all through it,
From the cellar to the tightly-builded roof,
Through the sun room, bright and smiling,
To the bathrooms, done in tiling,
At the stucco, steel-lathed outside, waterproof.

At the living-room, entrancing,
Big and beautiful for dancing;
Dining-room and breakfast-room, both beauties, too;
Library, kitchen—
Sewing-room for mother's stitchin'—
The HOME that SMILES thought out and built for YOU!

Simply dazzled by its beauty—
They would buy it as a duty,
For material and workmanship excel;
Mahogany, the lumber,
Hand art, bedrooms, where you slumber,
Make a home where cultured people like to dwell.

'Tis the finest kind of dwelling!
Simple words fail in the telling—
And SIXTEEN THOUSAND DOLLARS isn't high.
Awaiting your inspection—
Is this HOME that's just perfection,
And it's HOME SWEET HOME that YOU should really buy!

FOR SALE — WHY NOT COME TO VENTURA county, where the returns on your money are such that it is a rarity to find acreage for sale. We offer our land adjoining the city limits of Oxnard that is producing from $50 to $100 per acre in lima beans and sugar beets without irrigation. From one-third to one-half less than is being asked for other similar lands in Southern California. We are enabled to do this because you buy direct from the owners. We do not have any real estate company's commissions to pay. Buy now and get this year's crops, they will go a long way toward paying for the land. We also have land suitable for alfalfa and hog raising at very low prices. Write for full particulars, maps, booklet, etc. THE PATTERSON RANCH COMPANY, SALES DEPARTMENT, OXNARD, CAL.

FOR SALE—
100 ACRES CITRUS OR WALNUT LAND.

It is accessible to two paved boulevards and is only about two miles from a live town. Will show property by auto any day. See Russell or Maple with EDWIN G. HART, 917-923 Union Oil Bldg., Los Angeles. Phone 10421, Main 2606.

A PIKER WILL NOT BE INTERESTED IN THIS opportunity. Here is an opportunity for one man or one woman. One person can buy in but no person can butt in. I am what the natives up in the north call "a-real-old-sour dough-Alaskan." I have moccasin-footed east and west and zig-zagged north and south the length and breadth of Alaska. For years I foot-printed the moss and snows of Alaska as few white men have. I know Alaska, its resources, possibilities and how to take advantage of them. There I found the breeding ground of old Mother Bird Opportunity and plucked her for a fortune. Then I came out here, to be shoveled in, sluiced out, and cleaned up, by the other fellow. They did not get it all, but they did put a big dent in my poke. You see it happened this way: A flock of real estate dealers slipped up from behind and kicked my feet out from under me for a bumping. So I am on my way back to Alaska for more dust and some real excitement. I know where it is and I'll get it. I expect to clean up gobs of gold and a million dollars' worth of thrills in the next two years. Also, I expected to rake in a certain jack-pot when I held four aces against "Slap Jack Louie" up in the Koyukuk country one day—but I didn't. A person can never tell for certain, you know. For a person with five thousand dollars cash I am a big package on the Christmas tree Opportunity. I am selling absolutely nothing but a chance to cut in Fifty-Fifty, and the worth while right to hob-nob with and call me pal. I am a dead-square, clean-sort of a man and your money don't count if you cannot mark up to that standard also. Address E, box 50, TIMES OFFICE.

BUY THE OATMAN STOCKS.

The Gold Range compressor plant has been installed and will be in full operation early this coming week.

The Gold Range shaft has attained a depth of 130 feet, from now on this new equipment will enable them to make 5 feet per day and it will not be long before the required depth is reached, to cross-cut to the big main vein which is exposed for over 5000 feet on the Gold Range property. This main vein is the major vein of the Gold Roads, Tom Reed District. The assays taken in the shaft this week show $8.20 values. This is exceptional considering the shaft is sunk in the country rock adjacent to the big main vein.

This stock is listed on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange. I advise the purchase at once.

Fact and Comment.

whereby all who have been misled by the opposition's letter into voting against their better judgment will be permitted to change their vote. Already there has been placed in the City Clerk's office a special ballot box in which may be deposited the letters of those who wish to make a change. City Clerk Wilde will turn all such letters over to the City Council when the final count is made of the cards. The steps necessary to have a vote changed will be the writing of a letter specifically stating that the adverse vote was made under a misapprehension of the facts and the giving of the owner's assessment number as written on the Council's letter accompanying the postcards. If this number has been lost, it may be obtained from the assessment bureau.

Council Is Fair.

The City Council has been fair in its handling of the open-cut proceedings. The preceding Council had acted upon the frontage petitions of those advocating the plan and the protests of those against it. Everything has been carried out according to law, and the present Council would have had every legal justification for passing the ordinance of intention and going ahead with the work. Instead, however, they took into consideration the poor business conditions and the present burdens already borne by the property owners and decided to take a final straw vote among those affected to help them in making their decision. This vote is intended to be advisory and not official, but it shows the sincere desire of the officials to do what the people who would be called upon to pay the assessments want done. The carrying out of the project under the amended plan was suggested because it offers the easiest possible way of financing the cut and of lightening the burden on the property owners. But the Council wanted and wants an advisory vote that is based on an intelligent understanding of the project in all its aspects. The leading opponents of the cut, apparently fearing a decision based on such an understanding, have from the first attempted to defeat the purposes of the straw ballot. In their frantic efforts to induce the property owners of the assessment district to vote against their own interests, they have gone to such extremes as to make their own friends ask "why." The blunder has brought them more trouble than they probably will be able to handle. The city authorities, who have been interested in the open-cut project only as agents following the legally-expressed wishes of the property owners and taxpayers, have resolved that the proceedings from now on shall be carried out on a business basis even if they have to lend a hand in bringing this about.

Misstatements.

The misstatement about the payment of assessments is not the only one made in the so-called "Reasons" advanced by the opposition, and that fact has led to the charge that the mistakes made are attributable to an even more culpable cause than mere ignorance of the law and the facts. The opposition letter declares that redemption of bonds before maturity would necessitate the payment of a year's extra interest as a bonus. Of course, the law providing that a bonus of one year's interest be paid for this purpose. The letter also makes the statement that the bonds would have to be paid off before any sales or loans could be made by the owner. Sales subject to mortgages and bonds are made every day in the year, and it hardly seems conceivable that the authors of the letter could have so underestimated the intelligence of the recipients thereof. Modern improvement bond liens on desirable property do not prevent the making of loans on a fair basis. So far as that is concerned, every piece of property in the assessment district will be sufficiently increased in value as the result of the improvement to make possible the securing of loans of sufficient size to discharge the liens and at the same time net the owner more than he could possibly get under present conditions.

The further one gets into that opposition letter the worse the offense of its author appears. The letter informs the owners in the regrade district that the damages to be paid will be on the basis of 50 per cent. of the cost, avowing that this plan has already been determined upon. No such proceedings in the history of the city ever took such a course and it is nonsense to suppose that it ever will.

The owner is also informed that the cost estimate given by the City Engineer as the total necessary for the entire project does not include the cost of cutting down the individual lots. This is a plain contradiction of the statement printed in the City Council's own letter to the property owners. The City Engineer figured the cost of excavating every cubic yard of earth in the hill at the rate of 35 cents a yard, having been instructed to make all his estimates purposely high. His figures totaled $3,730,695, including excavation and everything. The Council raised it to $4,000,000 for good measure, and that was the estimated sum upon which the various assessments were based.

Despite the wild assertions of the opposition crusaders that the cost per cubic yard for the regrading would be greatly in excess of the City Engineer's high estimate, J. A. Hill, a well-known excavation contractor of this city, in an open letter to the Council offered to take the job of cutting and removing the dirt at 25 cents a cubic yard and to give a suitable bond for performance. He further declared that the man who got the job would have to do it for lower than 20 cents. The work, he declared, "could be finished in six months and a cut put through the hill, opening travel within ninety days. The opponents say it would take years to do the work. No one among the opponents has, so far as is known, had the temerity to question Mr. Hill's ability either to estimate the cost or to make good his offer with a bond.

It can now be stated with positiveness that the total cost of the open cut would not be as much as estimated and that every assessment against the property owners would be cut by at least 25 per cent. in the proceedings. It is also probable that the assessment district can be extended at either end, probably to Alameda on the east and Union avenue on the west. This opinion is held by many of the members of the Council, as well as by many property owners who have gone into the matter.

Tunnels.

Advocates of the open cut plan give property owners little credit for judgment when they propose that better results could be obtained at the cost and in one-tenth the time by a system of tunnels."

Two years ago the same crowd was fighting the project to put tunnnels through the hill at First and Second streets. Tunnels would not serve the broader purposes of the open cut and most persons are convinced of it. If the tunnel plan were to be substituted for the open cut tomorrow, however, the same busy opponents, bent on the same purpose, would be out trying to fool the people of northwest Los Angeles into holding out against it.

The most outrageous statement of all in the letter, is the assertion that the promoters of the scheme are "property owners who have investments on Hill street or on Figueroa and Fremont streets, the east and west ends of the cut, or property owners who have holes in the ground out toward Bimini Baths that they wish filled up at public expense."

The open cut proceedings were instituted in the first place by a frontage petition prepared and filed in the manner provided by law and taking in the whole of the downtown district north of Sixth street and a vast area west of the hill to Vermont avenue. The open cut has heavy support in every part of the tentative assessment district and especially in the portion bounded on the east by Alameda and on the west by Union avenue. Its heaviest support is on Broadway and Spring streets. In an open letter to the City Council a week ago, more than 100 merchants on these two streets alone, making an almost solid representation, condemned the opposition to this needed public improvement and appealed for action. In the canvass made for that petition, Hill and Main streets were not even touched.

Northwest Los Angeles needs a direct outlet into the downtown district. It can never go ahead as it ought until it has such an outlet. Once such a route is provided, there will be genuine encouragement for capital to get into the district now isolated by the hill and develop it along modern, high-class lines. Once Bunker Hill is opened, every foot of ground in the open cut assessment district becomes close-in property. With the great obstacle to progress removed, once and for all, there should be no limit to the advancement of the whole area. As things are now, this part of Los Angeles drags, while other parts go ahead.

PEACE REPORTS AFFECT WHEAT.

NEW DOWNWARD TREND TO THE MARKET.

Quotations in Chicago Close Nervous, with Corn and Oats Also Off. Provisions Wind up Unchanged. Rumors from Europe Felt in All Dealings.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

CHICAGO, March 18.—Possibilities of peace gave a fresh downward swing today to the wheat market. Quotations closed nervous 1 to 1⅛@1⅜ net lower, with May at 1.06⅜@1.06½ and July at 1.05⅜. Corn finished ⅝@1 to 1⅛ down and oats off ⅝ to ⅝@¾. Provisions wound up unchanged to 15 higher. From start to finish, wheat prices were ruled chiefly by selling which resulted from European suggestions that the end of hostilities was perhaps not altogether remote. Corn was bearishly affected by the decline in wheat. Oats weakened with other grain. Higher prices on hogs tended to lift provisions.

City-to-Sea Route.

territory between Sixth street and Sunset boulevard from Vermont avenue westward to Vine street or beyond and the immediate opening and upbuilding of several fine subdivisions in the acreage west of the city. It is the one thing needed, it is declared, to cause the wonderful foothill district west of Beverly to be dotted with fine country estates clear to the sea.

All the traffic resulting from this development, together with that pouring into the West First street boulevard proper east of Vermont avenue, will go straight east to Figueroa, joining there the heavy travel over the now assured new Los Angeles-Glendale air line boulevard and that of the projected new scenic route to Pasadena. The early carrying out of the Bunker Hill open cut project, insuring the continuation of all this inestimable volume of present and future traffic straight on eastward through the hill into Broadway, Hill, Spring and Main streets, would, Mr. Wright declares, insure the stability of the present business district, from First to Ninth streets, for all time to come. The open cut, he also affirms, would spare the city serious new traffic problems in the form of an ever-increasing congestion on Sixth and Seventh streets, such as would arise from forcing so large a volume of travel clear around the hill and into these thoroughfares.

TUNGSTEN STRIKE STIRS COLORADO.

DEGREE OF FEVER IN STATE IS UNAPPROACHED.

Finds are Reported in Number of Other Cities, Including Salida and Grand Junction—University Students Quit School to Join in the Universal Hunt.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

DENVER, March 18.—With tungsten now selling at $90 a unit, the entire State has a mining fever of a degree unapproached since the days of Creede and Cripple Creek early strikes. Excitement still centers in Boulder county, where the chief tungsten camp is located, but rich strikes around Silverton have promised that when the snow is off the San Juan will rival Boulder. Tungsten finds have also been reported close to the cities of Salida and Grand Junction.

Fortunes are being made in a short time in the Boulder field. Twenty State university students at Boulder, it was learned today, have quit the institution this month to join the tungsten hunt. Two former football players of the university, Virgil Sells and Charles Bessee, have made a rich strike in Bummer Gulch, above Boulder. Ore tests yesterday showed 10 and 15 per cent. values in their claims.

The Grand Junction tungsten is reported on three new claims just located by Sam Grady and A. L. Gossett, in Nothorofare Canyon five miles south of the city. Values in lead, gold, silver and tungsten are reported. The Salida find was anounced yesterday. A negro working a manganese claim at Wellsville, four and a half miles south of Salida became suspicious at an offer for his property and had his ore assayed. High tungsten values were shown and the Wellsville district is rapidly being staked by prospectors. Similar ore has been found by farmers four and a half miles north of the city and it is believed there that Salida is the center of a tungsten belt ten or more miles long.

In spite of the snow, large shipments of rich tungsten ore have already been received in Denver from Silverton.

COMMERCIAL.

LOCAL PRODUCE MARKET.

In the East spot canned tomatoes have eased off a trifle, now being available at about 2½ cents a dozen below the price three weeks ago. This is due to the fact that the spring season is coming on early, with a resultant desire on the part of the small canners to clean up what stocks they have on hand. California tomatoes continue to sell at firm prices, and in the opinion of a majority of the trade values will more than likely advance somewhat before the season is over. Asparagus canning has already started in a small way in central California, and the market for all grades of canned asparagus is firm. Jobbers stocks of the 1915 pack are reported low and it is stated that when the season is on in full swing there will be practically no carry-over from last year.

Although local flour prices have not been altered for some time, a reduction in values is expected the first part of this week. The continued slump of the primary wheat market is bound to be felt here in lower prices for all mill goods. Lack of trans-Atlantic transportation facilities is the factor that is causing the weakness of grain.

There were not many changes on the produce market yesterday, asparagus selling for less money, and peas, cabbage and celery showing a little more strength. Tomatoes are easier, and northern strawberry rhubarb is expected to be reduced Tuesday as the result of a large shipment which is due to arrive on that day. Strawberries have also become common and as a result quotations were lowered Saturday to 12½ and 17 cents a basket.

Eggs were very active on the Produce Exchange yesterday, some 95 cases changing hands at prices half a cent lower. Butter was quiet, and cheese offerings went begging. Receipts were 507 cases of eggs, 53,300 pounds of butter, 3050 pounds of cheese, 3647 sacks of potatoes, 50 sacks of onions and 630 boxes of apples.

WAR SHARES HEAVY IN NEW YORK MARKET.

Rumors Inspired by Significant Utterances on the Part of the Leaders of Allied Cause Affect Trading — Gains are Shown in Some Inactive Specialties, Such as Fertilizing and Distilling Issues.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—Rumors inspired in part by significant utterances attributed to leaders of the entente allies cause, contributed to the heaviness of war shares in today's market, the issues receding from 1 to 3 points and affecting kindred stocks to a like degree. These rumors were heightened by a new low record for German exchange which fell to 71⅝.

Declines in specialties were neutralized in part by the further strength of shares of the coal-carrying roads, Norfolk and Western rising 2⅝ to the new record of 124⅝.

There were gains in some of the inactive specialties, such as fertilizing and distilling issues and General Chemical was distinguished among the high-priced industrials for its advance of 20 points to 250 on one sale. Final prices showed some recovery from lowest levels but the undertone was irregular.

Total sales amounted to 318,000 shares.

Reflection of the week's activity in the stock market was furnished by the bank statement which showed an actual loan expansion of almost $23,000,000 with a corresponding gain in cash while reserves decreased $2,832,000.

Bonds ruled steady with nominal dealings in today's market. Total sales, par value, were $1,625,000. United States bonds were unchanged on call during the week.

STEADY PRICES ON LOCAL EXCHANGE.

FEVERISH TRADING IN BIG JIM SUBSIDES.

Activity Assumes a Normal Aspect—Boundary Cone and Ivanhoe Lead Advances in the Oatman List, Home Telephone Preferred is Stronger—Bank Stocks Inactive.

Trading was quieter on the Los Angeles Stock Exchange Saturday morning, after the exciting sessions of the previous two days. Big Jim, which has lent so much color to the activity on the local board the past week, was very dull, but a few shares changing hands. Prices, however, were stronger and the stock closed firm at 1.50 bid, 1.51 asked, which was about 6 points above Friday's close. Boundary Cone and Ivanhoe advanced during the meeting, and Gold Dust and Arizona Tom Reed must also be reckoned among the rising stocks. Oil issues continued in poor call, a few shares of Union selling at 70.75 and 6000 shares of Globe bringing 2. Home Telephone preferred was in demand at 67.62½, evidently the result of the dividend announcement. Bonds and bank stocks did not interest buyers and the industrial list was dull. Practically all the activity on the Los Angeles Exchange during the past four months has been distributed among the various Oatman mining issues. Speculative stocks are what the buyers seem to crave, and it is the tremendous amount of trading that has gone over the local board in the Oatmans that has packed the callroom each day.

Arizona Tom Reed

This security, long inactive at about 17c, has now moved upward and is active at about 25c.

Development in Boundary Cone, Gold Dust, Gilt Edge, Pioneer, Carter and other near-by properties has attracted attention to this part of the district, which is now reflected by a rising market.

Extensive Development is now under way and the operators believe that drifting operations at 400 feet depth will reach an important ore body within a few hundred feet.

Important Information

recently received causes us to believe that this security warrants and will enjoy a better market. This was the first stock to be listed representing this part of the Oatman gold mining district.

Further Advances

in its price are therefore expected by us, these advances merited by physical conditions of the property and financial condition of the company, according to our belief.

Prompt and Efficient Service

This information is in line with our policy of giving our patrons unbiased information from sources which we believe reliable and which may be of value to followers of the market. We welcome requests for information or orders to buy or sell any security.

Why We Recommend You To Buy Arizona-Tom Reed Because

It is listed on Los Angeles and San Francisco exchanges, and has an open market.

We have been on the ground all over this property.

There are seven patented mines and two unpatented mines.

There are five separate veins within patented area of Arizona-Tom Reed, the great Pioneer vein being in the center; the Dewey and Lilah veins being on the east and the Ben Hur-Snowball-Eleanor veins being on the west side of the center Pioneer.

There is over 5000 feet in length of actual vein outcrop on the surface within the 140-acre area of Arizona-Tom Reed.

The Arizona-Tom Reed is in the very best part of the district. On a great parallel vein fissure west of United Eastern and Tom Reed, lying in between property of Big Jim and Oatman Pioneer.

Arizona-Tom Reed end lines with Oatman Pioneer near the big ore bodies already opened on the Pioneer mine.

Arizona-Tom Reed's new 500-foot shaft is located within 300 feet of Pioneer.

We examined this property personally. We own no interest in it whatever. We go over the district from time to time for the purpose of advising our clients of the facts as they exist on the ground.

Compared with other stocks, the price of Arizona-Tom Reed should be 50c today. It is ranging around 24c to 27c, we believe. It is sure to advance on its merit.

Write us and we will advise you on any mine in the district. Our personal representative goes out again next week.

We solicit your business for any Oatman stock. We will either buy or sell for you.

We are not in the promotion business. Our transactions are all on a commission basis at Board rates.

Send Us Your Orders for Arizona-Tom Reed or any other stock, and we will fill it at the market.

To People of Substantial Mind

TO YOU people who can appreciate a clean, solid and substantial business proposition, we have a message.

We have a thoroughly established and successful business, in which no one has an unfair advantage and which shows good, substantial profits and earnings for the year of Nineteen Fifteen. And with our record of fair and efficient management we can safely say:

"It can't help but stay that way."

In fact, we have started, carried forward and been thoroughly successful with a business enterprise, at a time when the average business has suffered to a certain extent from a seeming financial depression.

On the strength of the above facts and the enormous demand for our products, we feel called upon to enlarge our field, and to do so must have additional capital.

In the furtherance of that idea we have asked for and been granted permission to issue additional stock and our plans have passed and been approved by the State Corporation Commissioner and public accountants in a very gratifying and satisfactory manner.

This is not the ordinary stock-selling, market-flooding proposition, but a safe, sound, strong and reliable investment, the merit of which should safely justify us in offering you 15 per cent. on your money.

To preferred and conservative investors, to that class who are familiar with and understand the investment of money in reliable business enterprises, we offer and request fair and impartial investigation of any nature.

MIGHTY JACK NEVILLE IS WALLOPED IN GOLF FINALS AT MIDWICK.

HAROLD LAMB TAKES HONOR.

Leigh Guyer Captures Second Flight Cup.

Midwick Nearly Loses Match to San Gabriel.

BY ALMA WHITAKER.

Harold B. Lamb of the Midwick Country Club has added still another [illegible] to his diadem. He defeated Jack Neville of San Francisco, 2 up and 1 in the 36-hole finals of the Midwick invitation golf tournament yesterday.

It was a wonderful match, both playing under par, and, although Lamb was never down, he was never more than [illegible] up and that at the 31st hole. They were paid the compliment of a gallery that would have done credit to an international championship, and included most of the scratch golfers [illegible].

Neville occasionally hooked his drive, but it only served to show with what consummate skill he could recover from rough lies. Lamb was 1 up at the end of the morning round with a medal score of 73, against Neville's 74. Both went out in 36, Neville in 38, and Lamb 37.

They started out in the afternoon in [illegible] style, Neville winning the first by 3 to Lamb's par 4, squaring the match. Lamb made 34 for the first nine to Neville's 35. The afternoon scores were 71 and 72 respectively. Here are the cards:

KisselKar Mars' car.

Seven-passenger KisselKar with the all-year top removed, being used to illustrate the efficiency of the modern motor car in warfare. Two Benet-Mercer machine guns and eleven men are transported in this car, covering more ground in an hour than a column of infantry will in two days of forced marching. Before going into service this car would be stripped of top and windshield and the shiny black enamel would give way to a coat of dull gray or wartime drab.

Track.

PADDOCK TAKES TWO SPRINTS.

AND PASADENA CAPTURES THE COUNTY TITLE.

Jerry and "Tight" Moore Shine in the High Jump, While Cooper Runs Nice Mile—Mattox Manages to Beat Paddock to the Tape in the Fifty-yard Dash.

Three track teams rode into Pasadena yesterday noon to lick the stuffing out of the Pasadena High wonders. In the evening three track teams betook themselves toward home, much sadder, wiser and a great deal stiffer for their little experience. Neither of them had even had a smell of the county championship. The score was: Pasadena High, 62; Long Beach, 47½; Santa Monica, 21½, and Whittier High, 0.

There were tall and short athletes, lean and fat ones; athletes with a bit of manly fuzz adorning their upper lip and still others barely graduated from the knee-pants stage of evolution. Some of the performers arrived in the old farm wagon and others sailed up in millionaire's gas buggies. From the bleachers rose a hospitable cloud of Crown City Havana mixed with the perfume of small-town stogies. Everybody had a particular favorite from the pudgy millionaire to the band, which was very partial to "I Wore a Tulip."

By far the biggest feature of the day was the performance of Jerry and Titus Moore in the high jump. These colored gentlemen showed enough form to make a Broadway belle jealous. Like the famous Gold Dust Twins they were right there with the goods. When the bar went to 5ft. 8in. Jerry withdrew in favor of Brother Titus. "Tight" then announced he was going after the prep record. Everybody dashed down from the bleachers and crowded about the pit. Titus tried 5ft. 10in. twice and failed. The third time he went over with inches to spare. But no amount of persuasion would make him continue leaping and he walked to the dressing-room with an entreating crowd following behind.

The time was very good in most of the races. Duffy Seay and his efficient corps of second splitters caught the hundred at 10:1 and the high hurdles at 17 flat, as well as mile at 4m. 49s. In the hundred Paddock of Pasadena won from Mattox of Long Beach by the bare breadth of a hand. In the 220 Paddock was again pressed by the same gent, but showed winning pep at the finish.

The mile came very near to being sensational. On the second curve of the first lap Strickfadden of Santa Monica uncorked a sprint that put him at least fifteen yards ahead of the field. Despite the fact that he was running in tennis shoes the beach lad kept his lead until the last half-lap when his legs became leaden and unwieldly and he was passed by Cooper of the Crown City bunch.

Jerry Moore galloped around the course far ahead of everyone else in the 880. His ivory-studded grin could be seen clear across the field and when the time of 2m. 8 4-5s. was announced he nearly swallowed the landscape.

Before the meet began Pete Bagnard, former Pasadena High star, wagered somebody a cigar that he could hurl the discus a record distance. Anxious for a smoke Pete heaved the discus 145ft. 4in. by accurate measurement. Then, just to prove that he was enjoying life, he put the shot over forty-five feet. During the meet Pete proved himself to be a big-league official.

FASTER ASCOT SPEEDWAY TO BE DEDICATED TODAY.

Burman, Pullen, Hill, O'Donnell and Durant to Meet in Fifty-mile Special Event—Light-car Race Promises to be a Wonder — Oldfield Expects to Lower World's Record for One Mile.

BY AL G. WADDELL.

MANY miles per hour faster than when the last speed meet was held, the Ascot Speedway is to be officially dedicated this afternoon.

With four speedy events, the new one-mile course is to be christened. The name Ascot track will be erased from all the official stationery.

Last night at the meeting of drivers, entrants and officials the license from the American Automobile Association was turned over to George R. Bentel, manager of the speedway. This license proclams that in Los Angeles there is a Class B, one-mile speedway and the official number is B-1.

As at the time of the last race, the course was not completed, the A.A.A. did not officially recognize the course as a speedway. With the new surfacing, the course is now a specially constructed speedway in every sense of the word.

The four events scheudled for this afternoon are a fifty-mile free for all, a ten-mile Class C race, an Australian pursuit race and speed trials for the speedway record by Barney Oldfield on the famous front drive Christie.

Starters in the fifty-mile free for all are limited to five. The men were picked from the field of entrants on the basis of speed shown in the elimination trials. The five starters and their time officially recorded are: Bob Burman, Peugeot, 47 4-5s.; Eddie Pullen, Mercer, 48s.; George Hill, Cyclone, 49s.; Eddie O'Donnell, Duesenberg, 49 1-5s.; Cliff Durant, Durant Special, 49 4-5s.

The next four men in the point of speed are to start in the Australian pursuit event. These starters are: Rea Lentz, Romano, 50s.; Teddy Tetzlaff, Milac, 51 1-5s.; Jim Parsons, Stutz, 52s.; Frank Elliott, Gordon Special, 52s.

STERN CHASE.

In this race the drivers are to start at each quarter-mile post on the speedway and as soon as a driver is overtaken, he is flagged off the course. This is one of the most interesting of all sprint races and being the first time that it has been staged here it should be exceedingly popular with race followers.

There is the ten-mile Class C race in which more than a dozen small cars are entered. Bert Lloyd on the little Oakland, semistock racer has been showing the best speed in this class. Cliff Durant is entered in this race with a semistock Chevrolet and Teddy Tetzlaff is eligible with the fast little Milac. It is quite probable that the technical committee will order some of these little cars out of the contest, but at that, there will be enough to make a great race.

The race matinee today is the last until after the Corona Grand Prize, April 8, and may be the last race staged on the Ascot course this season. The speedway has been entirely resurfaced and the increased speed is attributed to the smoothed out running board. A two-inch coat of asphalt and rolled sand has been put on the course and in the elimination trials both ullen and Burman showed better than 100 miles per hour on the stretches, a speed mark that was believed impossible on the local course.

The official sanction of the contest board of the American Automobile Association was received from New York by wire and assigned yesterday. It was decided at the driver's meeting last night that there would be a rolling start for both the fifty-mile free for all and the ten-mile Class C race.

CARRY EXTRAS.

The management requested the drivers in the light car race to carry mechanics as it will help in the matter of speed by holding the little speedsters to the course; but in the fifty-mile event it is optional with the drivers whether or not they carry their mechanicians. The Australian pursuit race being a special event, the management is allowed to make its own rules and the drivers in this number have been asked to carry mechanics.

The speedway association has built a standing platform along the north straightaway below the grandstand which will acommodate several thousand spectators. The same parking privileges will be allowed in the infield and the grandstand is included in the price of admission with the exception of the boxes.

"PA'S" TIGERS COME HOME.

The Vernon baseball club returned from Santa Susana ranch late last night. All of the players will spend today loafing around home. The real work of the season begins tomorrow.

The Yannigans defeated the Simi All-Stars 21 to 0. Fairbanks pitched five innings and allowed only one hit. Hitt did not allow any.

The regulars went to Burro flats, a nine-mile hike.

Manager "Pa" Patterson is entirely satisfied with the trip to the ranch. He figures that it not only put the men in fine condition and fettle, but got them really acquainted.

TRACK COACH WILL SHINE IN MOVIES.

Track Coach Goddard of L. A. High has secured a job in the movies for the summer vacation. He will be employed by the Selig company, but has not yet been notified whether he will be a leading man or merely crank the camera.

Not to be outdone by their lively rival, Coaches Featherstone and Lyons of the same institution are frantically seeking jobs before the clicking camera. Featherstone has the figure of an Apollo and believes he could pull off "strong-man" stuff.

That Track Meet.

THOMSON WINS BOTH HURDLES.

Preble Lights on His Nose in High Sticks.

Bear Two-milers Outsprint Reid Crippen.

California Wins Meet by Big Margin.

BY HOWARD ANGUS.

The track fan who is interested only in final scores and likes meets to hinge on the outcome of the relay race, spent most of the afternoon squirming in his seat at Bovard Field yesterday. The big intercollegiate track and field meet was a one-sided walkaway for the Bears and the outcome never in doubt. By the time the relay was run, every California runner could have dropped dead and the meet was still California's. The final score was California 82 4-5 U.S.C. 18 1-5.

CLOSE RACES.

However, the track enthusiast who likes races that are hot and close affairs and run prettily, had plenty of room for excitement. The upsetting of dope also helped him out.

Most of the U.S.C. rooters started out as fans of Class 1 and all ended up by joining the ranks of Class 2. One overzealous U.S.C. supporter said before the meet, "U.S.C. stands a dandy chance if she can only break even in the field events." He was right. The trouble was U.S.C. didn't. All the Trojans could pull out of the fire were 3 1-5 points in those events. This same Trojan rooter toward the end lost all interest in the outcome and fell to extolling the individual prowess of certain Trojans.

THE BIG EVENT.

The 120-yard high hurdle race was down on the books as the main event for Preble, who had beaten Kelly of Olympic fame and Murray of Stanford, was to run against the long-legged Trojan phenom from Long Beach. The race was spoiled by Preble landing on his nose in midfield.

Everybody stood up before that race and the policemen were very careful to clear away all spectators on the field in front of the bleachers. Thomson and Preble jumped out in front from the first gun and were hitting the ground after clearing the first hurdle as the others were sailing over.

Packard TWIN-SIX

Harry Owens of Owens Bros. & Wells has this to say regarding their fleet of Packard "Twin Six" cars:

"The four Packard Twin-Six cars which we purchased of you in December and January are very popular with both our local patrons and tourists.

"The number of calls for them has steadily increased since the date of their installation, until at the present time it is wholly impossible for us to take care of the demand.

"Since December these cars have been used by more than 500 of our patrons, every one of whom has made favorable comment upon the smooth-running and easy-riding qualities of the cars.

"Personally we heartily and unqualifiedly indorse all the good things that have been said about the Packard Twin-Six."

Well Done.

REPORT SHOWS CLUB ACTIVE.

President Fred L. Baker has Excellent Record.

Year Most Successful Known to Organization.

Local Institution Largest in America.

President Fred L. Baker of the Automobile Club of Southern California has issued his annual report for 1915, in which it is shown that the Southern California organization has grown to be the largest of its kind in America, and that during the past year it was the most active.

Motorists who wish to know why they should support the work of a club such as this would do well to read President Baker's full statement, if they are fortunate enough to have a friend who "belongs" and who has one—if not, there may be some left at the club headquarters.

However, the following vital excerpts from the report will show, at little more than a glance, what the club accomplished to win its place in the sun during 1915:

MUCH BUSINESS.

The main touring information bureau, during the year, answered 50,784 inquiries in regard to roads, while the branch offices were responsible for solving 25,445 motoring difficulties. This makes an average of about 146 a day.

In one day alone, during a January rainy spell, 1200 information calls were answered, or more than two a minute.

The club acted as official host to approximately 36,000 visiting motor parties from the East and North.

Serving in this capacity, and also serving its members, more than 380,000 maps were distributed which logged the entire road system of Southern California.

All of these maps were printed by the club's own printing department located in the club building on Figueroa street.

GREAT SERVICE.

In 1915 was completed the enormous task of erecting the sign posts on the National Old Trails road leading from Kansas City into Southern California, the result of which was to increase motor travel from the East to this State 1000 per cent., according to actual statistics.

REAL WORK.

Locally, the organization signed 5000 miles of Southern California highways.

Its road cars inspected 6000 miles and charted 1500 miles for new maps and signs.

Touring facilities were increased with the 1915 addition of 1304 new signs and 700 "temporary" route signs where detours due to road repairs were necessary.

Portions of two other transcontinental roads were sign-posted—the Ocean-to-Ocean highway from Banning to Yuma, and the Midland trail from Los Angeles to Ely, Nev., connecting with the main route of the Lincoln highway.

The signing of the Midland trail resulted in over 85 per cent of all Lincoln highway travelers choosing Southern California as the first terminus.

The legal department devoted its continuous services to members and to efforts in the behalf of fair legislation and traffic ordinances for motorists in general.

THE MOUNTAINEERS.

Officials of the club accompanied the party which climbed Mt. Whitney in the interests of securing a road to its summit.

The theft bureau, maintained for the purpose of recovering stolen automobiles, and inaugurated on January 8, 1915, played an active part in the recovery of 922 motor cars out of the total of 1024 stolen during the year.

Members of the club were saved $110,500 by the work of this bureau.

The interinsurance exchange saved club members $212,000 in premiums during 1915.

In November the Ridge Route to Bakersfield was open, and the first car over the road found the club's warning and direction signs in place.

The club was largely concerned in the raising of $150,000 for the continuation of the exposition at San Diego.

President Baker points out that it is obviously unfair that the scheduled activities of the organization for the coming year, as well as those of the past, should be supported by only 7000 automobile owners out of the 65,000 in Southern California enjoying the sunshine.

Cliff's Recruits.

DURANT SPRINGS SCOUT PLATOON FOR RESERVES.

ANOTHER branch of the Automobile Reserve Corps was organized last week by Cliff Durant, of the Chevrolet Sales Company, to be known as the "Chevrolet scout platoon" and will be commanded by Cliff Durant in person.

It has been found necessary to form some sort of scouting company, other than that composed of the motorcycles, the latter being more efficient in the dispatch service.

The idea of the scout platoon is for outpost duty, determining the best routes and covering the country. Because of lightness the Chevrolet is well adapted to this branch of the service.

There will be about twenty cars in this organization.

After the completion of this scout organization, a regulation company, composed of touring cars, is to be formed, for the purpose of transporting troops, in marching order.

Cliff Durant is now planning several very severe test trips for his outfit.

MOTOR INDUSTRY MAKES MINDS.

MORE great minds in the engineering world have been concentrated on the motor car than on any one piece of machinery or commodity requiring great engineering skill, declares Froman Speers of the Bekins-Speers Company, Southern California distributors for the Haynes and Grant six-cylinder cars.

The motor car long ago passed the experimental stage, but today there probably are more engineering experts working to bring some new feature into its manufacture than in any other line of endeavor. For the field of research is limitless and the improvements which add a little to the success of a motor car are unlimited.

That is why, according to Mr. Speers, the Haynes has had such a remarkable success. A corps of engineering experts are constantly guiding the destinies of the car. In the new series six, which is the finest product of the Haynes factory, the new principles of light-weight motor construction, which are the latest contributions of science to the building of the motor car, are carried out in a highly-successful manner. With a small motor, the horse power delivered at the rear wheels has been greatly increased through the adoption of light-weight reciprocating parts.

To that end, the pistons are built of aluminum, greatly reducing their weight, and requiring much less of the potential strength of the gas to turn over the motor. Light weight, scientific balance and sturdy construction are the aims of the Haynes engineers.

SUNBEAM PILOT IS NOW ITALIAN MOTOR SOLDIER.

JEAN PORPORATO, who brought the Sunbeam into second place at Chicago last year and who is a well-known figure on American race tracks, has had to obey the martial call and now is wearing the uniform of an Italian soldier. Although Porporato became mechanically interested in automobiles as soon as he left school, and has been race driver and tester for Minerva, Gregoire, Berliet, Sunbeam, F.R.P. and other firms, the military authorities have placed him in the ambulance corps, in which capacity he is now serving on the Italian front.

After eighteen months of service as a motor-car driver on the French front, during which period he has had numerous miraculous escapes, Albert Guyot has just been transferred to the aviation section of the French army. Guyot learned to fly years ago, being one of the first men to mount a Bleriot monoplane, but nevertheless did not find it an easy matter to get a transfer from one branch of the army to another. He is now pilot of a Nieuport scout machine, capable of 120 miles an hour, his dangerous and exciting job being the bringing down of German machines which venture over the French lines.

Another.

GRANT SPEED CAR COMING.

FAST MOUNT FOR AN UNKNOWN DRIVER ON WAY.

Car is Semi-stock Throughout, but Stripped Down for Fast Work. Motor is Same as that Carried in Regular Marketed Machine—The Wheelbase Shortened for Track.

The Grant racer, which was built for a campaign on the Pacific Coast this summer, will arrive in Los Angeles in the near future. W. M. Jenkins, the Pacific Coast factory representative, has received word from the Grant factory that the racer has been shipped and that it will reach here about Friday or Saturday of this week.

The speed car is practically a stock model, the chief changes having been to shorten the wheel base six inches, to use a Bosch magneto for ignition in place of the generator which on the stock car also supplies the starter and lights, and the use of two Master carburetors in place of a single Rayfield.

The motor dimensions are identical was those of the stock model and the valve action is the same overhead type. In place of the regular cam shaft, which is constructed to give the most quiet action possible, a special racing cam has been installed. The wheels are the demountable Houck wire type.

A CLOVERLEAF.

The Willys-Overland Company has announced a new Cloverleaf model roadster body for the model 86. The body is the product of the Ohio Electric Car Company, Toledo, and is made in limited numbers. Four options are given as to color scheme, these being battleship gray with the wheels light gray, bright green with the wheels straw color, vermilion red with the wheels the same, or Yale blue with the wheels light gray. With any of these the fenders and trimmings are black enamel.

Ladies and Gentlemen

In greeting you, permit me to take this opportunity of thanking the hundreds of California owners for their confidence and praise.

Permit me also to express my acknowledgment of the lavish manner in which competitors have aided to more firmly establish my leadership.

Their actions of late in so effectively acknowledging—even if unconsciously done—our firm hold on the quality supremacy in the motor world pleases our vanity.

I am proud of my position in the world of success—all honor to my creators, who have furnished a new standard by which motor cars are judged.

The Cadillac Motor Car Company has produced the quality car of the world, and there is a source of pride in realizing that the world knows it. I thank you.

HUPMOBILE

Five Passenger—$1195 Los Angeles

Since the advent of the first little model "Twenty," the Hupmobile has never changed in fundamentals.

The designer of the pioneer Hupmobile studied his case as cautiously as a watchmaker. He acknowledged the best points of some cars—he eliminated all the weak spots of others.

This varied assortment of motor ideas moulded into one graceful object and tempered with the originality and characteristics of inventive genius—is found today in the greater and later Hupmobile.

A four-cylinder motor—the type used by 90 per cent. of the world's speed kings, whose demand is reliability and endurance; by the majority of foreign car makers, notable for their severe exactions, and by the majority of American-made cars—is the same type designed in the beginning and found today in the Hupmobile.

"First Make Sure You're Right, Then Go Ahead."

Hupmobile engineers boldly pushed aside profits and precedents that their motor would be right. And that it has gone ahead is proven by the vaulting success of each succeeding model.

Right here in Los Angeles today—the latest Hupmobile is making friends for us faster even than the famous "Thirty-two." It is bigger, better and beautiful to an enviable degree.

Its long stroke four-cylinder motor has a good, strong, masculine punch to it that every American admires. The toughest trip gives little worry. The toughest old grade to a Hupmobile—is simply an invitation to go to work.

When you step on the throttle—it's like giving the lash to a thoroughbred—and it slips along into high speed as gently as old Dobbin.

Generous leg and body room is provided front and rear without the slightest cramping—you never "squeeze in" when riding in a Hupmobile—but recline and rest in the soft, thick, resilient upholstery.

The Hupmobile is plenty large—plenty long—plenty lively and a pretty looker. It has all the high scores of the ideal car—and more than many of them. Except expenses—there the Hupmobile is "low man" every shot.

TEAMS ARRANGE A TRIANGLE CONTEST.

A triangle track meet between the Los Angeles Junior College, the Hollywood Junior College and the Hollywood High School has been arranged for next Tuesday afternoon on the Hollywood High field.

Indications would give Hollywood High the victory with a big margin, but Coach Ralph Noble is quite enthusiastic over the local collegers and expects them to spring some surprises. The star of his team is no other than Sampson Siebert, the sensational high school high jumper of several years ago.

TO INCREASE SPEED LIMIT AT CAPITAL.

Declaring that the traffic laws of the District of Columbia should expire on account of age, Congressman Thomas W. Miller of Delaware has introduced a bill in the house to increase the speed limit within the fire limits from twelve to eighteen miles an hour. Outside the fire limits the speed is to be increased from twenty to twenty-five miles an hour.

Congressman Miller, who is a motorist, says that before offering his bill he made a complete tour of all the streets of the city and found that hardly any of the motorists were obeying the law literally. It would be impossible for them to do so, he explained, because nobody wants to travel as slow as twelve miles an hour. Besides, with the thousands of motor vehicles daily upon the streets the result would be a congestion of traffic that would actually handicap business. The bill seems to stand a good chance of becoming a law.

PERSONAL DELIVERY.

L. B. Spencer, sales manager for the Moline-Knight Automobile Company, returned last week from a trip to San Diego and Imperial Valley. The trip was made to deliver a Moline-Knight 40, which was sold out of the salesroom here to a San Diego party and Spencer delivered it himself, as he wanted to keep in touch with the owners in that territory.

FACTORY ADDITIONS TO AID LOCAL DEAL

As AN indication of present prosperous business conditions on the Pacific Coast, M. S. Bulkley announced last week that he was completely sold out of Autocars. This is the first time in four years that Bulkley has not had from ten to twenty trucks in the warehouse. He always endeavors to have at least ten trucks on hand so no buyer will be required to wait for delivery, but the spring rush proved too great and the supply was completely exhausted.

Word has been received from the Autocar factory that ground was broken last week for another addition to the already large plant. Last October, work was started on a new five-story building and last week a large force started a night and day rush to erect a new two-story building. The new building will be known as the "lower plant" and is being arranged to take care of the building and painting of Autocar bodies and the final assembly of body and chassis. This will centralize all the finishing work in one building and will greatly facilitate the work of the finishing department. The new building will provide 85,000 feet of additional floor space. There will be a main building and two L extensions.

GOODRICH SAFETY TREAD

Why pay Tire Bills for Others——
——i. e., for RECKLESS Drivers

THIS to the American who hates to be "the Goat"!

Tires CAN be sold on a "BUSINESS" basis, with sufficient profit to both Manufacturer and Dealer, as Goodrich experience proves.

But, they can also be sold on a PREMIUM basis, whereby the "Safe and Sane" Car-Owner pays for the Speeding Propensities, and Careless Driving, of Others who, leaning upon an extravagant "Guarantee," knowingly burn up Tires in half their natural Life and Mileage.

Speed-Maniacs and Careless-Drivers may very PROPERLY pay the Premium over normal Value (which is really an Insurance Premium), on fancy-priced Tires.

Because, the Premium they pay may be less than half what other Careful Car-Owners indirectly contribute for them, when buying the same brand of Premium-priced Tires, and using them so reasonably that practically no "adjustments" are, in their case, demanded, though paid for in the Premiumed Price.

AMERICANS who want their money's worth,—who dislike to pay for the Reckless-driving extravagance of Others,—in the price of their own Tires, should sit up and take notice of following FACTS:—

The current Goodrich "Fair-List" price on Tires, is based upon what it costs the largest, and best equipped, Rubber Factory in America to produce them.

No "Insurance" Premium added to the NORMAL retail price of Goodrich Tires, in order to protect the Reckless Driver at the expense of the Careful Driver, through a fancy List Price which is high enough to absorb that Premium.

The excess Mileage each Goodrich Tire is reasonably certain to deliver, when given reasonable care in driving, thus becomes clear "Velvet" to the Owner of GOODRICH Tires.

Money can't make, and can't buy, better Tires of Fabric construction, than Goodrich Safety-Tread Tires, as Test will prove.

And, money can't buy the B. F. Goodrich Co. to produce Tires which would discredit the 269 other lines of Rubber Goods made by the B. F. Goodrich Co., for which its name stands Sponsor.

COMPARE prices on Goodrich "Fair-List" Tires with present prices on any other responsible Tires in the field bearing in mind that NO "LARGER-SIZED" Tires (type for type and size for size) than Goodrich Black-Treads, are made in America.

Then, Test out at least ONE pair of Goodrich black-tread Tires, on their per-DELIVERED-Mile cost to you, against any other Tires in the field, at any price, and,—abide by the Result.

Why (if YOU are not a Reckless Driver) should YOU pay MORE than the "BUSINESS" price of the Goodrich Tire, for ANY Fabric Tire in the field?

New Era.

GYPSY BAND MOTORS NOW.

DAY OF THE SLOW MOVING VAN IS NO MORE.

Fleet of Touring Cars Brings Nomads to Los Angeles from San Francisco—Cars Washed and Polished at Local Agency—Road Dust no Longer Found on Wanderers.

The man who loves romance is impressed more and more every day by the growing spirit of commercialism which seems to be the real spirit of the age.

Who is there who, as a child, or even a youth, did not envy the free life of the gypsy, with his gaily painted van drawn by a pair of "crowbaits," or even by one poor, old, rawboned wreck of the pasture? Who is there who does not associate with the gypsy life the freedom of the open fields and of the broad highway—and the ramshackle conveyance?

But the day of the van is done. Today the gypsy scorns such a poor method of conveyance. He rides in his own motor car, and a very up-to-date motor car at that. He must have electric lights and starter. He must have power to climb the steeps of mountain roads. Indeed, the romance of his method of conveyance is dead.

Such a gypsy caravan visited Los Angeles last week. It arrived in Los Angeles Tuesday from San Francisco, and the cars immediately were driven to the Los Angeles Don Lee shops, there to be washed of the road grime which had gathered on the trip. Ah, yes, the dirt, too, has gone. The cars in which they are traveling are 1913, 1914 and 1915 Cadillac, all with electric lights and starter, and some of the eight-cylinder type.

Mingled with savory odor of stew and garlic is the scent of gasoline. The dirt and grime on the gypsy's hands no longer is plain road dust. Motor grease and oil help blacken the swarthy hands and face.

MILLER NAME CARRIED EAST.

The Miller Carburetor Sales Corporation has closed a deal with Fred McCarthy to handle the Miller carburetor in Western Pennsylvania, with headquarters at Pittsburgh.

The company reports that McCarthy heard about the carburetor and wired for one.

McCarthy writes to the company that he put a 1¾-inch Miller carburetor on a Mercer and did sixty-five miles an hour in five inches of snow, and that he is anxious to see what it will do on a dry road.

THE NEW ONE.

The new six-cylinder ambulance which the Pioneer Commercial Auto Company, Southern California distributors of White products, has just delivered to the city for the exclusive use of the Receiving Hospital certainly presents a beautiful appearance on the streets and is a credit to the manufacturer. The finish is gray with gold stripes. The body was designed by Frank Shriner, chief mechanical engineer of the department, and was built in the shops of the Krebs Body Works of this city. The chassis is of the standard White ambulance type with long wheel base, insuring easy riding qualities. The new White ambulance replaces the old equipment, which has been in the city's service for the past several years.

Having among its objects "safety first" at all times, the improvement of roads and protection of car drivers from unjust legislation, a union has been formed by chauffeurs at Quebec.

Record Shipment.

[illegible]LID TRAINLOAD OF TRUCKS COMES ACROSS.

[illegible] White Company of Cleveland, O., manufacturers of White trucks and touring cars, does not [illegible] neglecting its domestic [illegible] in order to meet the increasing demands made by foreign countries for motor trucks. The fact that [illegible] company received the largest [illegible] order ever placed by representatives of a European government, [illegible] for delivery of 600 White [illegible] does not interfere with taking [illegible] of the unlimited requirements [illegible] in the United States.

[illegible] rapidly-increasing demand on [illegible] Coast for White trucks and [illegible] is really amazing, said J. [illegible], sales manager of the [illegible] Commercial Auto Company, [illegible] California distributors. Our [illegible] O. R. Fuller, was obliged [illegible] a hurried trip to the White [illegible] several weeks ago in an effort [illegible] shipments. The results of his [illegible] very satisfactory, as we [illegible] received a solid trainload [illegible] entirely of trucks, and from [illegible] we will be in a position to [illegible] delivery on our orders.

[illegible] was made up at the factory [illegible] Cleveland, O., and routed over [illegible] Four," Rock Island and [illegible] Pacific railroads. Having the right of way over all first-class freights it made close connections at terminal points and came through on record time.

In eastern cities the congestion of thousands of freight cars loaded with all classes of merchandise and warehouses filled to the doors with outgoing ocean-bound freight, accounts for the general shortage of freight cars. Rolling stock of any description is at a premium. The train of White automobiles and trucks was made up of various kinds of freight cars, "double deckers," box cars, etc., all loaded to double capacity. These were secured in a territory hundreds of miles adjacent to Cleveland. As quickly as a car could be located it was dispatched to the factory and placed in a private yard out of the way until the train was made up. The trainload consisted of twenty-one box cars and created quite a little interest as it crossed the continent on its way to the Pacific Coast.

TOPOCK HAS ENTERED THE FREIGHT FIELD.

Until recently practically all the hauling into Oatman and Gold Roads was from Kingman. However, another shipping point, and one sixty miles nearer Los Angeles and San Francisco, is making a bid for the service. It is Topock, the little shipping station on the Arizona side of the Santa Fe bridge over the Colorado River.

The Topock Transportation Company, which is operating from this point, last Tuesday accepted delivery on its second two-ton G.M.C. truck, which at once began the overland trip, and yesterday made its first two journeys from Topock to the mines.

Something like 2500 trucks are in use on the Pacific Coast burning distillate, which is only a little better grade of fuel than kerosene, having a gravity test of 49 to 51. These have been in operation for three to four years, using a stock type of motor and carburetor, and their success is beyond question of a doubt.

3400 r. p. m. Subdued, Controlled and Converted Into Thrifty Energy

There is more meaning wrapped up in the term "3400 r. p. m. Chalmers" than in any phrase in the history of motor building.

It means, first of all, performance.

It means might fused with mileage, and brute force tamed into silken flexibility.

It means supreme engine speed attained with absolute safety, and big horse-power that you and I dare drive.

It means that every drop of gasoline that is inhaled into the aluminum lungs of this wonderful beast's engine is compelled to deliver every available gram of its dynamic energy.

It means the subordination of superfluous might into the golden boon of imperishable pick-up, obedience, and a smooth running, uninterrupted, throbless stream of might.

It means glorious going from every gallon of gas, and a saving of $150 to $200 per year in gasoline that an engine of useless might would require.

If you want speed you get it, without a whisper of the roar of racing motors.

It means performance plus, and cost of upkeep minus.

It means incomparable ability "on high" beyond any car in its price-class—anything from two miles an hour to twenty-five in less than ten seconds.

It means everything that the name Chalmers stands for at a lower price than any other Chalmers car has ever borne.

It means a competition-cleaving car, built under new conditions of quantity production under the Chalmers' roof, at a time when the whole of California and the West is able to buy cars on a scale never equalled before.

It means that we are prepared to make prompt deliveries in the order of sales.

It means that this is the car you'll feel you must own, once you have seen and felt it perform.

No man is sage enough to foretell the condition of the market for materials a few weeks hence. It will be the part of wisdom and may save many a regret if you record your order now.

Plans and specifications are being prepared by T. Beverly Keim, Jr., for a building to be erected by A. Haas on sixty feet of frontage adjoining the northeast corner of Grand avenue and Tenth street for the Los Angeles Special Package Delivery Company. This concern is controlled by the Barmore family, who own the business of the Los Angeles Transfer Company. A deal was recently consummated whereby the Los Angeles Special Package Delivery Company absorbed the business of the Pioneer City and Suburban Delivery Company, thereby making it necessary to secure larger quarters in order to accommodate its rapidly-expanding business. The lessees were represented by W. H. Harris, manager of the leasing department of Thomas C. Bundy & Co., and the lessor by William C. Keim, manager of the Haas Realty Company.

The athletic directorate of Queen's University, Kingston, Ont., propose to devote the legacy left by the late Capt. George Richardson, who was recently killed in France, to the establishment of an athletic field. The donor of the money was one of the best football and hockey players who ever wore Queen's colors. The field may be named Richardson Field.

CHANCE IS LOOKING FOR RIGHT-HANDED HITTERS.

May Play First Himself and Send Beef Koerner to the Outfield to Break up His Left-hand Combination—Peerless Leader is Out of Luck with Injuries — Players Take Joy Ride to Deserted Hotel.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

ELSINORE, March 18.—How to inject more right-hand hitting into the Los Angeles club is a [illegible] now agitating the managerial [illegible] of the Peerless Leader. The [illegible] hitters are vastly in the [illegible], while the right-handers poll a comparatively light vote.

Chance is not prejudiced against [illegible] who lose the lobe from the lar[illegible] side of the oyster, but realizes [illegible] a club with six or seven left-hand [illegible] would in all probability be [illegible] tapioca against a good [illegible].

However, the situation is not really [illegible] as it looks on the surface, for [illegible] Maggert and Wolter, while off-[illegible] hitters, seem to be about as [illegible] against southpaws as the other [illegible]. In fact, one at times is prone to think that Maggert likes them a little bit better, if anything.

But Chance is of the opinion that the outfield would be a trifle stronger with a right-hand batter in his outer [illegible], and that is one of his reasons for considering the advisability of [illegible] Koerner out there to play and [illegible] in at first base himself. Frank is a right-hander at the bat. His reason for the contemplated change, however, is twofold, as by playing himself he will be able to carry seven instead of [illegible] pitchers, which is no small item in the league of Marathon pennant [illegible].

Personally we have serious doubts [illegible] Chance getting in shape to start the season as a regular. Indications are that he began work a bit too vigorously, while since he arrived here [illegible] has been just one accident after another. In fact, his career of hard [illegible] started before his arrival on the [illegible]. In going up the stairs to the [illegible] at Washington Park three steps at a time he rammed his head into the [illegible] of the low door, temporarily jamming it down between his shoulder [illegible]. This is believed to have been the beginning of the trouble with his [illegible]. Since then he has had a number of reverses. Every time Doc Finley seems to be on the verge of getting him fixed up, Frank wanders [illegible] in the cool of the evening in [illegible] shirt sleeves or sleeps by an open [illegible], contracting another cold in [illegible] backbone. Finley is getting desperate. He is planning to nail down the windows in Frank's room and [illegible] an "Oregon boot" or a ball and [illegible] on the Peerless Leader's leg to [illegible] him from straying out of doors [illegible] and catching cold.

There are two reasons why the proposed change may not take place—[illegible] uncertainty about Chance being [illegible] to get in condition in time, and [illegible] that Koerner is not at home in the outfield.

But with all his ball players Chance [illegible] up against it for right-[illegible] at the plate, and he is [illegible] to consider the advisability [illegible] any possible combination that [illegible] strengthen the club in that respect.

[illegible] Ware is the "Three-Fingered" [illegible] of the Angels. There is about [illegible] difference between them, and [illegible] Brown lost two of his fingers [illegible] fodder chopper, while Ware, according to his own testimony, had two [illegible] cut off while throwing a rail-[illegible] for a steamboat on the [illegible] River while working as a [illegible] in Texas. Andy does not [illegible] as soft as the average ball [illegible]. Not only does he have to get [illegible], but he is compelled in [illegible] to this to wear a couple of [illegible] on the stumps to which his [illegible] were formerly fastened. Not only are these stumps natural-[illegible], but they sometimes get [illegible] in the winter. Therefore, [illegible] necessary for him to put [illegible] weeks producing a new [illegible] of calli on the ends of them [illegible] he can stand to grip the ball [illegible] enough to give it the necessary [illegible]. It is a long and painstaking [illegible], and Andy wishes there was [illegible] way in which he could keep his calli all the year around. Not only is Ware a master of the spitball, but because of the peculiar shape of his mangled fist he can throw a ball without the use of saliva which has the same break as a spitter, only greater. Clarence Brooks was the first to make this discovery. He was catching Ware and believed that he was throwing spitters until he noticed that there was no moisture on the pill. Although Ware had a poor season last year, due, it is said, to bum catching, his record prior to that was excellent, and it is believed that he may prove to be effective in this league. Control is said to be one of his aces, and this would seem to be borne out by his work with Houston two years ago, when he went eighty-nine innings without walking or hitting a batter on the head or elsewhere.

The Social Function.

The social function which the athletes attended at Hotel Lucerne was the most unique in the history of Elsinore, and is being discussed widely in the society columns of the Elsinore Valley Free Press. Given under the auspices of the Girls' Glee Club of Elsinore, an organization which existed only in the invitations, it was the most exclusive affair ever given here. being attended only by ball players. It was so exclusive that even the hostess was not present. Also, it was quiet and well conducted, there being no music or other noise to puncture the silence of the everlasting hills in which the old ruin is located.

The truck in which the players made the trip could climb to within only 300 feet of the vacant building, which stared ghost-like through its vacant windows. The fact that there were no lights, or other signs of life, aroused the suspicions of the athletes and they dispatched a committee consisting of Howard Ehmke and Frank Groeling to reconnoiter. The report of the committee was not encouraging, they saying that the house seemed to be inhabited for the night by two cholos, who were sleeping so soundly as to give the impression that they might be dead drunk. Some of the boys felt sure that they had not found the right place, and seeing a light about three miles away insisted on being taken to it. On arrival this light was found to be the camp fire of a Basque sheep herder. The athletes then organized themselves into a vigilance committee and returned to the bright lights of Elsinore by a back street. The athletes quietly dropped off the rear end of the truck one by one just outside the city limits, and when the driver finally drew up on the main street and turned around he found to his amazement that all of his paid patrons had vanished without settling.

Jack Ryan took a load of the boys out to the dance in his own machine, but got wise when he met the others coming back and drove into town through an obscure street. He says now that he simply went out to kid the others. You know that old self-protection stuff. And then there was Polly McLarry and Pete Standridge, who claim they knew what was up, but simply went out for the ride. You know it is a regular picnic to ride ten miles in a truck over a rough road on a dark night.

Not since the club arrived here has there been such a cleaning up of the athletes as between the hours of 6 and 7 p.m. Everybody shaved, some of them for the first time since arriving. Ralph Works emerged from the hotel for the party with a hard, white armor-plate shirt, a high, hard-boiled collar and a black suit, looking as much dressed up as a pall-bearer. Rube Ellis could easily have been mistaken for the original McCoy, and kept tapping his foot to a one-step tune which he happily hummed all the way out. Rube, however, didn't do any happy humming on the way home.

Harl Maggert, however, was the most seriously injured of the guests. This accident happened to his pocketbook. He bought a new shirt especially for the occasion. He would like to return it, as he has plenty of shirts at home, but the storekeeper won't take it back.

To make matters worse, one of the unmarried ball players asked a young lady if she would like to accompany him to the Hotel Lucerne for the evening. Naturally, she was indignant. "I wouldn't go to that nasty old place with anybody," she snapped, and turning up her nose, went away.

Even then the player could't get wise to why she had "cut him," and made the trip with the others.

Chance received an invitation along with the rest, and freely admits that the only reason he didn't attend was because his neck was in such bad shape that he had to stay in the hotel and take a treatment from Dr. Finley. This made Finley pretty sore, as he had made all arrangements himself to attend.

Hunting snipes in the dark is out of date, but there are other harmless forms of amusements, such as that of Friday night, in which the ball players will enter enthusiastically if given a printed invitation. All are agreed, even the victims, that this affair was a real work of art.

[illegible]ADIANS ARE LOSERS.

POMONA HORSE-SHOERS FIRST.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH]

RIVERSIDE, March 18.—A combination of the best Riverside and Redlands could produce failed to be good enough for the Pomona team of horseshoe pitchers which came over this afternoon and won from the Riverside - Redlands aggregation on the city playground by a score of 28 to 21. Ten men on a team were matched for the contest and the locals led at the half-way mark with fifteen games to Pomona's ten. The "boys" from the neighboring city proved the best-winded, however, and won by seven games, with one a tie. Pomona sent a delegation of twenty-one, and interest ran high in the play, which was the best ever seen in this city.

A GREAT DAY FOR THE BALL PLAYERS.

LAY IN A STOCK OF CLOTHES AT SPECIAL SALE.

Goldie Rapps, Club Musician, Buys a Harmonica, Which will be Sent After the Nonstop Record with the Able Assistance of J. Lynn Scoggins.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ELSINORE (Cal.) March 18.—This was a big day in the young lives of the ball players. They did their shopping in the morning and in the afternoon met the Elsinore mud turtles on a fair field with no favors.

Herbelin's place, on the corner, closed out its entire stock at reduced prices and will now close its well-known doors. Many of the athletes took advantage of the great opportunity presented. The doors of this great store did not open until 9 o'clock, but most of the boys were lined up as early as 6 a.m. so as to get the first crack at the unprecedented bargains offered and save a few cents on the dollar. This statement is made advisedly although it is believed that they had fully a dollar between them. Having saved a few cents on it they are that much better off.

THE LUCKY GUYS.

Jim Galloway bought a couple of work shirts and Joe Jackson, Jr., a pair of comfortable cotton socks to be worn exclusively at social functions. Johnny Butler, who is getting to be a regular dude, invested his savings in two celluloid collars and Frank Groeling, not to be outdone, bought a box of tan shoe paste. As shoe paste is not an absolute necessity Groeling is now regarded as the team's greatest spendthrift.

Herbelin's is a department store, or was until sold out, and carried almost everything. This made it possible for Goldie Rapps, the club musician, to buy a harmonica at greatly reduced rates. His harmonica is to work both day and night shifts. Rapps will play it constantly between the hours of sunrise and sunset and then at night time it will be laid on the mouth of J. Lynn Scoggins, who snores in his sleep.

A GREAT IDEA.

Scoggy has been wasting so much energy through his mouth that it is felt that it should be conserved and used to make the world a better place in which to sleep. By filtering Scoggy's snores through a harmonica he will be unconsciously lulling the other athletes to sleep instead of keeping them awake as heretofore.

In order to get more hitting at third base, Frank Chance is strenuously thinking of making Jim Galloway the regular guy in that position. In case that is done it would crowd Butler, Rapps, Larson and Groeling to the side lines or possibly clear out of the park. With either Chance or Koerner at first, McLarry at second, Galloway at third and Fisher at short, we would have some .300-hitting infield. Whoever heard of the like? The more we see of Fisher we wonder how the report preceded him West that he isn't an air-tight fielder. In practice he looks like the goods in all departments.

RAH FOR "MKE."

Howard Ehmke is making a strong bid for a meal ticket and he seems to stand a fine chance of landing the same. Chance says that the young human crane from Tropico has one of the best and finest deliveries that he has ever seen. He does not waste an atom of energy in delivering the pill.

Dr. Finley and some of the scribes attended the masquerade ball at Murrieta as the guests of T. Jacobs and C. H. Fitzpatrick, prominent citizens of Los Angeles. The occasion was under the auspices of the justly-celebrated Guenther brothers and one long to be remembered by Dr. Finley. The doctor doesn't seem to be feeling very well today. He caught cold on the way home and appeared at breakfast with a catch in his neck. He is now right in style. Sore necks are all the rage here.

DOC'S JOY.

Finley simply dotes of lame necks. He takes the victim by the head and twists the same back and forth until the neck is well. It is to be hoped now that somebody will twist his neck. A report preceded Mayor Sebastian here to the effect that he also had a bum neck which he contracted during the siege with the grip. Finley brightened up wonderfully when he heard of this because he has never yet been able to number among his victims the chief executive of a great city. He broached the subject of the Mayor's neck to Mr. Sebastian immediately on arrival, but the latter gave him no encouragement. It is believed that he had been warned by kind friends on the way down. The Mayor avoided the issue diplomatically by informing Finley that all his vertebrae seemed to be in their rightful positions.

Martin Longo, the demon landlord, took a delegation consisting of W. F. Rickenbach, Ernest Vincent, some scribes and a few athletes for a spin down to Murrieta late yesterday afternoon. Being a rapid driver he blew a rear tire at considerable expense to himself. There is talk of getting up a benefit ball game, the entire proceeds to be devoted to the purchase of a new hind tire for Mr. Longo.

The party also had another narrow escape from being killed when Mr. Longo stalled his machine right on the railroad tracks. The only thing that saved them was the fact that the next train was not due for five hours.

The day was brightened by the receipt of two boxes of navel oranges by Chance from S. J. Lewis, a loyal and enthusiastic supporter of the great national game. As Frank was not able to eat two boxes of oranges single handed, he distributed several among the baseball boys and other star boarders.

Several athletes went up the creek and angled for catfish early this morning. They made such a large catch that it was necessary to haul the catfish back in a truck. This was the same Ford truck which hauled the suckers out to Hotel Lucerne the other night. It is getting to be a regular fish wagon.

Enthusiastic responses to the State-wide road-marking movement recently inaugurated by the Omaha Automobile Club are being received at the club headquarters in Omaha, Neb. Already over thirty-five cities and towns have been heard from, either through the local organizations or through individuals who assume the responsibility of forwarding the movement themselves.

"CACTUS KATE" IS CHRISTENED.

After a swift trip to Bakersfield and return as a sort of a tryout, "Cactus Kate II" officially commenced her "checkered" career on Friday when she left for San Diego, carrying Fred L. Baker, president of the Automobile Club, to take part in the formal opening exercises at the Panama-California International Exposition yesterday.

Louis Nikrent, who handles the wheel of "Kate," reported after the Bakersfield trip that the twelve-cylinder Packard proved the greatest performer in sand of any car he had ever driven. Nikrent returned from Bakersfield by way of Tehachepi, Mojave and Boquet Canyon. "Kate" covered the 100 miles from Mojave to Los Angeles in just three and one-half hours, which is fairly fast time in view of the road conditions. The smooth flow of power from the twelve cylinders is particularly evident in the sandy going, according to Nikrent, who is highly pleased with "Kate's" ability as a rough-road car.

The latter part of this week "Kate" will leave on a fast run to Needles, carrying representatives from the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce and the Auto Club, to the desert town to take part in the dedication ceremonies over the new bridge over the Colorado River which has just been thrown open for travel. This bridge is of particular interest to Los Angeles just now, as it greatly facilitates motor travel to the flourishing gold camp of Oatman. After the dedication of the bridge, the plans of the Needles boosters include a trip to Oatman, which lies some thirty miles east of Needles.

BUSINESS MEN MOTOR.

[LOCAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

COLTON, March 11.—Overland and Oakland automobiles seem the popular cars among local business men, within the past two weeks A. E. Copeland of the Crescent Theater and J. H. Andrews of the Hub City Bakery becoming owners of handsome Overland machines, while Oakland "Sixes" were delivered to C. E. Mead of the Mission Pharmacy and Henry DeArmond of DeArmond's Clothing store. The three former cars were those used for exhibition purposes at the San Bernardino National Orange Show.

THE ONLY ONE.

Only one make of automobile is represented at the third annual pure food exposition which is being held at the old Boston Store building, and that is the Maxwell. The Maxwell is there by invitation, being approved by the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association.

What do you know about the GRANT-SIX?

Now in its SECOND successful season

Do you know that the Grant Six is the pioneer low-priced SIX—the first SIX to sell below one thousand dollars?

Do you know that Grant Six has established itself as one of the most remarkable cars of the year?

That in spite of our best efforts and constantly increasing production, at no time has it been possible to keep pace with the demand?

That the new Grant Six—which we are now showing—has the largest, handsomest body of any car below a thousand dollars?

Do you know that the Grant Six has a valve-in-the-head motor of exclusive design—not a stock motor—that is one of the quietest, smoothest, most powerful motors built.

Throttles down to 1½ miles per hour. Speeds up over 50.

This motor has established wonderful economy records. Owners everywhere average over 20 miles to the gallon of gasoline—many get over 25.

Do you know that Grant true cantilever spring suspension makes Grant Six one of the easiest riding cars in the world?

That the Grant Six has achieved leadership solely by giving excess VALUE—in the motor—in the chassis—in the body—in the equipment.

All the flexibility, all the smoothness, all the virtues of the SIX at its best are conspicuous in the Grant Six.

When you know these facts you will be eager to own a Grant Six.

SCARCITY OF SHIPS FOR SHIPPING OIL.

Austin, Bryant & Carter, local distributors for the A.B.C. line of oils, received word this week from representatives in the Pennsylvania oil fields that the delay in the shipments were due to the inability to get tank cars in which to ship the oil. Luckily the A.B.C. people keep a large storage supply and will not be inconvenienced.

This condition has become a serious one because there is such a tremendous lot of freight being rushed to the Atlantic seaports for shipment to Europe and the railroad people say there are 12,000 cars loaded with goods for Europe sidetracked between here and Pennsylvania waiting for ships to carry the traffic across the Atlantic, and the eastern people find it extremely hard to get the empty cars back from the Pacific Coast points.

Reminders of Romance.

CALIFORNIA MISSIONS ARE FAST FALLING INTO DECA

English Suggests that All Motorists Help to Preserve the Crumbling Ruins of Spanish Days—Natives of this State Fail to Appreciate the Value of the Links in [illegible] Chain of Civilization.

WITH the exceptions of Santa Barbara, Ventura, Los Angeles, San Francisco de Asis and San Francisco Solano, the missions of California, both north and south, are "dependents"—dependent upon the [illegible] communities near which or in which they are located.

Very often they stand isolated at the side of a smooth, paved [illegible] over which hundreds of motorists flash each day. Natives of the State seldom accord them a glance, while eastern motorists usually stop and [illegible] journey out of their way to see a ruin, and it is these "ruins," which [illegible] situated in deserted spots, the Landmark Club is endeavoring to [illegible] points out a local automobile dealer, Clarence A. English, who is a "[illegible]mark" enthusiast.

Besides climate, Southern California has its missions as an [illegible] tion to easterners, he points out, yet the support accorded the [illegible] endeavoring to preserve them is not sufficient to put a new roof on the [illegible] Capistrano Mission.

He stated yesterday that of the numbers of King "8" owners who [illegible] tored to California last spring and summer, almost all of them [illegible] information on the location of certain missions, and the majority, [illegible] returned to their homes, expressed sorrow that America's relics [illegible] present "hustle" to the sleepy romance of the Latin races were [illegible] falling to dust, literally, from neglect.

"If the motorists of Southern California alone would [illegible] mite as they tour to the small boxes usually found at mission [illegible] sum would go far to keep them in repair," stated the King [illegible] terday.

"Eastern automobile owners usually purchase souvenirs of the [illegible] if there are any, and this is a help, but people living here [illegible] consider that. So long as it is the motorists who are able to get to [illegible] distant and out-of-the-way places, it must rest largely with them [illegible] amount of direct contributions.

"San Juan Capistrano is an excellent example of the need of [illegible] sions. Hundreds, almost thousands, of cars pass there each week, [illegible] or 10 cents, to get down to cases, from them would stop the walls [illegible] ing in and the roof from crumbling off. Think of it some time, [illegible] member what is happening to the San Diego Mission, situated in one of [illegible] most beautiful of California valleys.

"San Gabriel Mission could never continue to exist upon the [illegible] in which it is situated were it not for the tourists, not motorists, who [illegible] ronize its little store. Stop some time and have a little talk with the [illegible] of Capistrano. It'll be an eye-opener."

MOTOR CARS IN FIRST OF GASOLINE REVIEWS

THE first review of the local division of the Automobile Reserve Corps was held last Thursday afternoon, when the first platoon of the Oldsmobile company went through a few maneuvers under the eyes of Lieuts. Wier and Hicks, late U.S. army.

This company is getting ready for active service this summer in the field operations which are slated to take place here. In about two weeks, cars of this type, together with several of the larger limited type, are to be put through a severe test at San Francisco. Gen. Sibert, commander of the Coast Artillery Corps, is going to stage a test run from Fort Miley to Half Moon Bay, carrying a full company of men, five machine guns, two field pieces and five smaller guns. Read what BOB BURMAN, the famous speed king, holder of most of the world's speed records, has to say about the BUICK and the VALVE-IN-THE-HEAD motor.

"I maintain that there is no question but that the VALVE-IN-THE-HEAD type of motor is superior to any other, and the best performance of all kinds of cars equipped with them will bear me out. For racing machines must be built to stand extreme stress and abuse; they must be quick to get away, and when once the throttle is open the motor is required to keep working at a terrific rate of speed, and surely such a motor must be durable—hence the VALVE-IN-THE-HEAD idea, which is an engineering principle. So nearly every racing car, American or foreign, is equipped with the VALVE-IN-THE-HEAD type of motor. Six of the ten leading automobile manufacturers have changed their design from the L and T head motor to the OVERHEAD-VALVE during the past two years.

"FOR EFFICIENCY AND ECONOMY, THE NEW BUICK MOTORS ARE AS FINE AN EXAMPLE OF ENGINEERING SKILL AS I HAVE EVER SEEN."

Old-line Class.

TRADITION BASED ON FOURTEEN-YEAR LIFE.

MUCH has been heard this season of the term "Pierce-Arrow tradition."

Just about this time fourteen years ago in the infancy of the automobile industry, the first twenty-five Pierce-Arrow cars were built. The first model was a 2 3-4 horse-power motorette, seating two passengers and equipped with a single cylinder imported motor. Since that modest start the company has turned out thirty-eight different models, ranging from the single-cylinder already named through the two-cylinder, 15 horse-power, the four-cylinder, 45 horse-power, and the six-cylinder, 66 horse-power.

Every one of these models was a complete success, each marked a steady advance. The men who designed and built the little motorette designed and built the "66." Control of the company has always been maintained from within.

These ideals involve a policy of building the best regardless of cost and selling it for a profit.

It is nothing unusual for people to buy Pierce-Arrow cars without looking at the motor, without considering one mechanical feature. The name is enough. They believe that "Pierce-Arrow" means a car built on trust.

Progress Has Placed Worm Drives In Front

NEARLY half of all the motor trucks manufactured today are equipped with Worm Drives. Three years ago there were less than four per cent. The rest of the trucks are divided between four other types of drive. There is no part of truck construction that has made so great an advance toward absolute predominance in so short a time as the Worm Drive. The MORELAND truck is equipped with the Timken-David Brown Worm Drive which is good for 100,000 miles of travel and extends the life of truck tires 20%.

Midwick Finals.

Third Flight, beaten eight, I. H. Sample from W. M. Orr, 2 up.

Fourth Flight, beaten eight, C. G. Twist from L. H. Wallace, 1 up in 19.

Fifth Flight, beaten eight, H. L. Harrison from A. M. Clark, 6 and 5.

Team Matches, Midwick from San Gabriel, 3 to 2 on scratch. San Gabriel from Midwick, 4 to 1 on handicap. Los Angeles from Altadena, 4 to 1 on scratch. Altadena from Los Angeles 3 to 2 on handicap.

Leigh Guyer who wins the second flight is one of those "coming" young men with a golfing future who has made remarkable strides in his game during the last few months. He is a member at Midwick and also plays on the Altadena team for which he has not yet lost a match.

W. J. McDonald who was chagrined to win the third flight by default, is a member of several eastern clubs who has now permanently made his home in Pasadena.

E. R. Campbell, winner of the fourth flight, is likewise an eastern visitor.

C. G. Twist, winner of the fourth beaten eight, is another Orange county member to take home a cup, stylishly adding to the trophies which the Orangemen annexed with such eclat at Santa Barbara.

H. L. Harrison, winner of the fifth beaten eight, is president of the Virginia Country Club.

THE TEAM MATCHES.

San Gabriel gave Midwick an uncomfortable quatre d'heure for there were anxious minutes when Midwick's proud reputation was in jeopardy on the scratch count. Two of the matches went past the 18th, Clyde M. Graves making a superlative effort to save his match at the 19th from Norman Kerr, who won the handicap 1 up. Vosburg of San Gabriel also took J. V. Eliot to the 20th hole—and beat him on both counts, handicap 4up and 3.

Elmer Ralphs lost the scratch to Robert E. Huner 4 and 3, but saved the handicap 1 up. Bill Bacon restored his self-respect by beating J. C. Niven on both counts, 2 and 1 and 1 up. George Cline lost to Hugo Johnstone both counts, 3 and 2.

The Altadena team managed to rescue their handicap laurels in their team match against Los Angeles, notwithstanding they were two good men short, Leigh Guyer being busy winning things at Midwick and A. C. Volk holding down fame at Annandale. Judge Frederickson did awful things to Capt. Bud Story, who had all his clubs stolen and was compelled to play with knives and forks or something like that. The Judge won 7 and 6 and 3 and 2. John W. Wilson played Clark Smith and won the scratch 2 and 1, losing the handicap, 3 and 2. Laurence Cowing played Reid Wold and beat him 4 and 2 on scratch and 1 up at the 19th on handicap. George Girouard won the handicap from Dr. Spinks 4 and 3, but last the scratch 1 up. N. M. Hamilton of Altadena won both counts against P. H. Smith—3 and 2 and 6 and 5.

The Annandale team goes to Midwick today.

FOOLISH FOURSOMES.

The Altadena Country Club has subtly arranged to have mixed foursomes on April 1 as being the most suitable date on which to fluff with their masculine dginity. They will be of the two-ball variety and sixteen couples have already entered.

L. A. SWEEPSTAKE.

Carl Knappe won the Class A sweepstake at the Los Angeles Country Club with 1 up on 4 handicap, and A. B. Barrett won Class B with 1 down on 7 handicap.

ANAHEIM HIGH WINS ORANGE COUNTY MEET

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

FULLERTON, March 18.—Anaheim High School today won the annual track meet of the high schools of the county here by a lead of five and one-half points. The points of the competing teams follow:

Anaheim 42, Fullerton 36 1-2; Santa Ana 24 2-3; Orange 18 2-3; Huntington Beach 9 1-8.

Santa Ana played in hard luck and early in the game strained tendons drove several of their best men out of the meet. Only one county record was broken. A. B. Smith of Fullerton hurled the discus 116 feet 6 1-2 inches breaking the county record of 109 feet 7 inches established by Emery of Santa Ana two years ago.

Dean of Fullerton, although finishing third in the mile, was disqualified because a Fullerton track man dropped into stride beside him on the inside of the track as a coach.

SEEKING MORE EFFICIENCY.

Ingenious Instrument that will Analyze a Workman's Motions.

[Washington Star:] The elimination of waste effort and the increase of individual efficiency in all lines of industry are being carried to lengths that seem almost fabulous. The latest device for getting the maximum product out of a worker with a minimum of effort is called the chronocyclegraph. This apparatus analyzes every movement made by a machine operator or a hand workman, and shows him where he is wasting work.

To get a chronocyclegraphic record the workman is put through his paces before a special screen. Every part of his body that makes a movement is fitted with a tiny electric light. A photographic plate is focused, and every move he makes is shown on the plate as a white line of light. To get a record of the time element, the lamps on his body flash, instead of burning steadily. Thus, in place of a continuous line, the record is a broken dotted line, and the spaces between the dots show the speed of his movements. To determine the direction of the movement at every point the light flashes quickly and goes out slowly, resulting in wedge-shaped dashes on the plate which point in the direction of motion.

An expert study of the resulting plate shows just which motions are efficient and which ones are wasted.

How Exciting.

COMMISSION APPROVES BOUT IN NEW YORK.

Willard Takes a Brisk Walk and Usual Gymnasium Workout. Moran Celebrates His Twenty-ninth Birthday—All Seats Thrown Open are Gone.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

NEW YORK, March 18.—Chairman Wenck of the New York State Athletic Commission stated today that the arrangements made by the management of Madison Square Garden and the promoters of the Willard-Moran bout, which is to be fought here next Saturday night, are satisfactory in every detail to himself and the other two commissioners.

Every seat has been disposed of with the exception of the gallery reserves, which will be put on sale next Thursday. No tickets will be sold at the box office on the day of the bout.

Willard took a brisk walk and a couple of short runs in Central Park this morning. Later he went through about ten minutes with the pulleys, punching the bag and shadow boxing. He boxed three rounds each with Hemple, Monahan and Rodel and then wrestled with Rodel for three minutes. The champion worked fast all the way.

Moran celebrated his 29th birthday by taking a three-mile run over the Westchester roads early in the morning. He took only light gymnasium exercises this afternoon and boxed five rounds in all with his sparring partners. He declared today he did not think he could reach 205 pounds. He turned the scales today at 201 pounds.

Both men said they would refrain from any heavy work-outs tomorrow.

ED TRIBE TO BE TIA JUANA STARTER.

[BY A. P. NIGHT WIRE.]

SAN DIEGO, March 18.—Edward Tribe of Arlington, Va., one of the best-known starters in the country, will preside at the reopening of the Tia Juana track of the Lower California Jockey Club the week of April 10. This announcement was made today by James W. Coffroth, president of the club.

Considerable progress is being made on the Tia Juana plant and all traces of the damage wrought by the recent floods are disappearing.

PASADENA HIGH BEATS CLIFFDWELLERS

Pasadena High School decisively trimmed the L. A. High ball club yesterday in a game which was featured by the gilt edge pitching of "Lefty" Hunnicutt, the Crown City hurler. The final count was 8 to 3.

Hunnicutt held the L. A. boys to one lone hit and that was of questionable character. Outside of that, Hunnicutt had the game well in hand and but for errors behind would have had a shutout.

Pasadena's big inning was the third, when a walk, a wild pitch, two errors and a pair of doubles netted five runs. Peddicord and Getschine did the hitting in this inning.

JAVELIN EVENT MAY NOT BE INCLUDED.

Final arrangements are being made and the starter is oiling his gun for the city high school track meet that will be held on the Y.M.C.A. field next Saturday.

The first events will be started at 9 a.m. Four places will be given and the points count 5, 3, 2 and 1, respectively. There is still some discussion over the javelin throw. Some of the schools entered have not participated in this pastime and it is probable that no javelin event will be held.

NO ARGUMENT MADE ON GAMBLING LAW.

[BY A. P. DAY WIRE.]

PHOENIX (Ariz.) March 18.—No argument was presented by the State in the Arizona Supreme Court today to enforce the anti-gambling law against pari-mutuel betting machines, in the appeal of Charles S. W. McCall, convicted in the Maricopa county court. Wiley Jones, Attorney-General, said he believed the pari-mutuel machine technically was not a gambling device.

U.S.C.-California.

The long legs of Thomson began to glide out further in front.

By the fourth hurdle he was at least a yard ahead of Preble. This excited the Californian and he began stretching. In his wild dive for the next hurdle his heel caught in the top of it and he fell to the ground. He gamely picked himself up and started again, but hadn't a chance.

DISQUALIFIED.

It developed later that Gasner of U.S.C. who finished second, knocked over three hurdles. So Wolongiewitz, who finished third, took second and Adair also finished among the points, with Preble last.

Those present, however, were convinced that Thomson was much faster in the high hurdles than Preble yesterday.

Bradley turned out to be the king pin among the sprinters. He won both the 100 and 220-yard dashes. The finishes were close in both, Nelson of California, Murray of U.S.C. and he crossing the line almost simultaneously in both instances. The finish in the 100 was so close that the judges debated long and deliberately away off in one corner of the field before giving their verdict. When it came—Bradley first, Murray second, and Nelson third—it met with popular approval.

VERY CLOSE.

In the 220 Nelson reached out with his hands and grabbed the tape while Bradley was trying to bust it with his chest. The judges, however, were quick to catch the distinction between the chest and extended arms and gave the race to Bradley.

The prettiest and most exciting of races was the two-mile. Coach Cromwell had held Crippen out of the mile so that the Trojan could win the longer event. Swaim and Lloyd, the Bears, were small, insignificant looking little runts wearing glasses, but how those boys could run.

Crippen set the pace the entire way until the last lap with these two little beings tagging on behind like a couple of dogs on the heels of their master. Loud were the shouts that the Trojans hollered.

LAST LAP.

Weaver shot the gun for the last lap and Crippen dove into the hole in the U.S.C. College of Arts, still followed by the two midgets with specs. After several breathless and anxious hours the runners emerged again on the other side of the field. Crippen was still leading, but his legs were moving spasmodically as if he were jerking them along. The two little midgets were running smooth and easy.

Swaim, the first of these, suddenly began to spurt down the back stretch, he passed Crippen while the latter bobbed his head and gritted his teeth and ran straight up and down. The three runners rounded the curve that way and turned into the straightaway for the tape. Then it was that Lloyd, the second midget, began to sprint. He passed Crippen as if the latter were running backwards. He caught the flying Swaim and went into the tape with his arms flung high, his chest extended and a big hearty laugh on his lips.

George, the Trojan half-miler, ran his best race of the year against the two Californians, Vedder and Searby. His best, however, was not quite enough.

GEORGE LEADS.

George, the Trojan, had the pole and he dashed into the tunnel in the lead on the last lap. He emerged again still in the lead with the stocky little Vedder on his heels and the lean and lanky Searby trailing on behind. Down the back stretch all three sprinted, but Searby glided by the other two as if he were on stilts. George pulled his cork trying to stick with him and his head began to roll back. On the turn Vedder passed George and set out after daddy-long-legs. He passed Searby ten yards from the tape.

Thomson won the low hurdles wthout effort from two other Trojans, Gasner and Wilcox. Wright, the only Bear anywhere near him, obligingly landed on his nose while clearing the last hurdle.

In the 440 Woodruff and Gibbons had little trouble winning for the Bears in 53 2-5s. Had they been pressed their time would have been much faster.

In the field events California had a grand walkaway. The best U.S.C. could do was tie for second place. All their other points were two third places.

Lockhardt, the former Occidental broad jumper, and pole vaulter, was performing for the Bears. He won the broad jump and tied for first with two other of his team mates for first in the pole vault. His leap in the broad was 22 ft., 3 1-4 in.

The Bears won the hammer throwing and put the shot out a fraction of a foot farther than Leo Livernash could heave it.

The relay left an ever-expanding gap between the California and U.S.C. runners, until Woodruff crossed the tape. The last Trojan runner, Martin, was lost in the gathering darkness and the incoming fog.

TRACK EVENTS.

One mile run: Davis (C.) first, Miller (S.C.) second, Sullivan (C.) third; time 4m. 41 1-5s.

OCCIDENTAL BALL TEAM LOSES AGAIN.

The Knox College Alumni defeated the Occidental baseball varsity yesterday at Baer Field by the score of 6 to 4. The Tigers got up an improvised battery for the occasion. Coach Jess Orendorff, who used to catch for the Angels, was the pitcher, and Sid Foster, the catcher and pitcher, was behind the bat. Orendorff was congratulating himself last night on only allowing ten hits. He is thinking of offering his pitching arm to Frank Chance. The score:

Willison, the Class B man of the Lankershim, established a new high run for the tourney Thursday night when he had an unfinished run of 38 against Lewis and Doane of Ball's. Schallabarger of Hill's also showed excellent form last week, practically winning one match for his team.

BEACHMEN LOSE TO SAINTS, SCORE 9-4.

St. Vincent's baseball aggregation met the Long Beach High School on Baer Field yesterday afternoon and trounced them to the tune of 9 to 4. It was an easy victory for the Saints, who pounded "Buckwheat" Buckley, the Long Beach twirler, around the lot for twelve juicy bingles, while the Long Beach sand diggers helped their pitcher along by making six errors behind him. The St. Vincent boys played a fast, errorless game, featured by the sensational work of H. Polk in the outfield and Clemens and Hickson in the infield. Ed Keenan, on the mound for St. Vincent, was not working up to his usual form, as he walked men at inopportune moments, though he kept the seven hits well scattered.

Hickson, the star catcher of St. Vincent, retained his batting eye and, true to form, obtained three hits out of five times at bat, one of which was a two-bagger. E. Keenan, the pitcher, likewise slammed the ball to deep center for two bases.

Now the Long Beach team has ceased to wonder how St. Vincent defeated Occidental. The score:

TROJAN TENNIS MEN HAVE NO TROUBLE.

U.C. had the better track team of the two, but U.S.C. sure cleaned them up at tennis. In the singles Warren of U.S.C. defeated Godshall of Berkeley, 6-4, 6-3, while McCormick of the southern institution walloped "Bud" Clark, who hails from the north, 7-5, 6-1.

The U.S.C. doubles team, Warren and McCormick, trimmed Godshall and Clark of U.C., 6-1, 6-1, 4-6, 3-6, 7-5, and then called it a good day's work and quit.

The matches were played in the morning on the Los Angeles Country Club courts.

STROUD HAS QUEER IDEAS OF AN "ALL-STAR" SQUAD.

AN ALLEGED All-Star Southern California track team will meet the University of California a week from next Wednesday. The U.S.C. varsity will be in the north meeting the California freshmen on Saturday and will remain over until Wednesday.

To this team will be added Pete Bagnard, Fred Kelly, Bonnett, Tuffy Conn, Det Sturges, "Curley" Cookman, Ken Johnson and Clarence Beebe. The last three gentlemen comprise the now-famous Trojan ineligible squad. The team is being picked by Johnny Stroud.

While it will be a fairly strong team, it is far from representative and is not the strongest Southern California team that could be picked, not by a jugful. California seems to have gotten the idea that unless a man attends U.S.C. he is not a Southern California athlete and never bothers its head to look any farther.

Just by way of suggestion to Mr. Stroud it might be hinted that Ray Adkinson of Pomona can probably run the legs off any runner in Southern California in the 440 and Stroud's quarter-milers also, and both Bonnett and Beebe will have to be in at least 50 per cent. better condition than they are now to win from him in the half.

Walt Sturges of Pomona is a stronger miler than Crippen has shown himself to be this season.

Verle Murray of Whittier is probably the best low hurdler in the south, although Kelly may beat him. Both Murray and Kirkpatrick are supposed to be much better low hurdlers than Thomson.

Verle Murray, to date, has shown himself to be the best sprinter in the south, while Lupher and Webster of Occidental are faster than Bradley and Ken Johnson in the 100 and 220. Johnson has made good time, but not this year.

McLain of Occidental can pole vault rings around anybody that Stroud's famous all-star team contains.

The Occidental relay team composed of Ohl, Webster, Cook and Lupher, made much faster time yesterday than the U.S.C. or California teams and is able to defeat the relay team that will run in the north for the all-stars.

What Stroud is taking north is the U.S.C. varsity plus the U.S.C. ineligibles plus a few L.A.A.C. athletes. How does he mean—Southern California All-Stars?

As Usual.

REDLANDS TRACK MEN WIN AGAIN.

Lott and Davis, Two Mechanic Jumpers, Create Quite a Sensation, but are About the Only Heroes. Loveland Forces Frost to Step off a Speedy Half Mile.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

REDLANDS, March 18.—The winning streak of the High School track team was not broken today for the cinder path artits of the local school defeated Poly of Los Angeles by a score of 81 2-3 to 31 1-3. The time in some of the events was the best ever made on University Field where the meet was held. It was the big event of the Orange Day celebration here and a large crowd was out for the meet.

Lott, the dark town lad, and Davis were the sensations of the Poly team. Lott won the high jump at five feet six inches without half trying and Davis jumped 21 ft. 2 in. in the broad jump. This is the record of his school and he was given an opportunity to beat it but failed in three trials.

An increase of more than 100 per cent. in the number of licenses issued to private owners of Wisconsin is noted for January, 1916, compared with the corresponding month of 1915. Up to January 31, 28,500 licenses were issued, against 13,100 in January a year ago. On February 15 the number of licenses issued was 32,500, which figure maintains the 100 per cent. increase. Applications are coming into the Secretary of State's office at Madison at the rate of 275 a day, and as the season advances it is expected that more than 500 requests will be filed daily. The 1915 registration of private owners was 79,791, and it is figured that the total for 1916 will be at least 110,000.

A movement has been started to draw the Denver Motor Club, Denver, Colo., into a commercial and civic consolidated body, to be composed of the Chamber of Commerce and similar organizations, wherein the club would lose its individuality and become merely a bureau of the merged association, but the club refuses to consider any such limiting of its purposes or scope of activity as a distinctive organization for the welfare of motorists.

Elgin and Chicago will be connected by an all-concrete highway within two years. This was announced at a conference of highway officials between the two cities. The issuance of $2,000,000 in bonds for the improvement of the highways of Cook county has been legalized by the Legislature after a fight lasting two years and work on the construction of the roads will begin without delay.

"A REGULAR JOYRIDE."

IT WAS "Willys-Knight" out. Meeting "Mitchell" and "Mercer" they had a "Chase" around "Detroit. They met "Allen," who had just arrived "Overland," but looked as if he had been hit in the "Buick" with a shell from the "Monitor." He, too, being a "Detroiter," made the quartette complete.

They all felt "Royal" and did not have to resort to old "Crow" to make them so. Neither of them wanted to be a "King," a "Premier" or some "Monarch." They were out for a time. They had seen the "Sphinx," the great "White" way, and had even been to "Paterson," so, boarding their "Cadillac" they went to "Lexington," stopping a few days at the "Franklin." To their surprise the "Stewart" was old "Jeffery," a friend of theirs, but was as stiff as if he had been placed in a tub of "Argo" starch. He had been to a dance the night before learning a new tango "Glide."

But the "Great Western" country was their goal, so they proceeded on their way, the "National" highway their "Pilot," and soon arrived at "Oakland." It started "Touraine" the early part of the day, but that night the "Moon" shone bright. They met the "Auburn" haired "Dorris," who happened to "Brush" by, although they tried to "Dodge" her. One of the party had a "Case" on her, but found out he could not a "Ford" to follow a "Rambler" like her, going like a "Blitzen Benz," and still feel as spry as an "Apperson" jackrabbit.

Next morning the "Fiat" was given; southward they came, having heard of the orange "Empire" trolley trip, the hotel "Grant," and knowing that L. A. had set a "New Era" for good roads, and that the "Peerless" climate for the "Tourist" was always up to the "Standard."

MANY REASONS GIVEN FOR GREATER MILEAGE.

J. B. MAGEE, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the United States Rubber Company, is one of the men who has grown up with the tire business and has watched it expand and develop until now it is one of the most important phases of the motor-car industry. Last Thursday he was reminiscing with J. B. Brady, general manager of the company, and the question of the great increase in tire mileage came up for discussion.

According to Magee, several elements enter into this, the chief of which are better roads, lighter and better cars, more experienced drivers and better methods of manufacture. By far the most important of these is the improved manufacturing facilities and methods of construction. The United States Rubber Company keeps an expert staff of chemists busy experimenting with new processes and methods, in an effort to improve the structure of the tires. This has had the effect of bringing out better rubber and finer methods of construction.

Then, too, the machinery used in making tires has been greatly improved, and the effect of better machinery and workmanship is found in the service the modern tire gives.

Better roads also provide much easier work for the tires. California's wonderful boulevard system, which is nearing completion, is a fine example of this sort of road building.

Another important factor is that the great American public is learning how to drive. More and more owners are learning how to save their tires and cars on the roads, and this has had much to do with the increased mileage.

This Helps Some

A Los Angeles man's Marmon used to go nine miles to the gallon of gasoline. An Ensign carburetor was installed and the mileage jumped to 14 miles to the gallon.

The test was over a distance of 1200 miles and means a saving of 49 gallons of 18c gasoline.

Ensigns have passed the experimental stage. We guarantee to give you more power on less fuel.

HOLIDAYS UNCONGENIAL.

Friends Quarrel Over Orange and Green and Shot is Fired.

A friendship of many years was disrupted late yesterday afternoon when an argument over the proximity of Orange Day to St. Patrick's Day precipitated a quarrel between Edward Doyle and Timothy Sullivan at the former's residence, No. 4060 West Washington street, which ended only when Doyle fired a shot at his friend. Fortunately the revolver was of inferior grade, the bullet flattening itself against Mr. Sullivan's breast.

The trouble started when Doyle said it was a shame to have Orange Day so near St. Patrick's Day. Mr. Sullivan declared there was nothing wrong with the idea. Words, followed by blows, ended with the shot. Doyle is held charged for assault with a deadly weapon.

ALL TO SHARE BENEFIT.

French war orphans, Belgian homeless and Serbian refugees will share equally in all moneys secured from a grand allied concert to be given next Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock in Trinity Auditorium. The concert will be under the auspices of the Caledonian Club, with the patronage of thirty kindred clubs and Red Cross societies. A rare musical programme has been prepared under the direction of Jaroslaw de Zielinski.

ANGELS DEFEAT ELSINORE TEAM.

MUD TURTLES WORK IN REAL PERRIS RINGER.

Three Mayors at Lake Elsinore Resort—Each to Throw a Strike in Tomorrow's Game with the Visiting Chocolate Drops—Boots Weber Puts in His Appearance.

BY HARRY A. WILLIAMS.

[BY DIRECT WIRE—EXCLUSIVE DISPATCH.]

ELSINORE, March 18.—The afternoon was featured by a number of important arrivals. Among the distinguished Los Angeles citizens arriving either by rail, automobile or boat were the following: Johnny Powers, president of the Angels; Boots Weber, the scrappy southpaw secretary, and James F. Morley, all-around sporting man.

Thus, we have three mayors in our midst. Powers, in addition to being president of the Angels, is Mayor of Rowansburg, a community made famous by its great irrigation system. The others are Mayor Sebastian of Los Angeles, and Mayor Keck, the regular home guy. In fact we have almost more mayors than we know what to do with. Because of this we will endeavor to work them into tomorrow's ball game between the Angels and the Chocolate Drops of Los Angeles. It is planned to have each of them throw a strike to the first batter, thereby fanning him. However, in case a fourth mayor should arrive in town prior to tomorrow afternoon's game it will be necessary to have each of the four mayors throw one ball each to the first batter, thereby walking him. Should a fifth mayor arrive there will be nothing for him to do but to buy the beer for the crowd.

Powers had no interviews to issue regarding his ball team. Johnny is talkative only with his money and this has been talking rather loud of late, judging by the large number of high-class athletes on the field.

As a result of today's great ball game the Elsinore Mud Turtles went to bed a humbled and defeated ball team. Before an impressive gathering the Angels defeated them 9 to 0, a score which made a snug fit for the nine innings.

This serves them right. They brought down Danny Bernasconi from Perris to play second base for them, which wasn't fair, as the Angels supposed that they were playing a team composed strictly of Elsinore boys when the game was originally arranged. The Elsinore boys serve both as ball players and bill boards. On the back of each athlete was an advertisement for some business house. Each business house donating a suit, it seems, insisted on a free ad, thus the team serves as a business directory, also, for by looking at the backs of the players the fans can find where to buy the best groceries, creamery butter, fresh eggs, hardware etc.

It is indeed sad to see commercialism entering so largely into baseball. The Mud Turtles borrowed R. W. Smith and Thompson for the occasion. Thompson played right field and Smith pitched three innings. He then gave way to E. Root, the local phenom. Root pitched shutout ball in the last three innings, fanning three. He has a dandy curve ball and a good delivery.

The Elsinore boys played good ball in spots, and especially did Root, Berry, Lilly, Kirkpatrick and Sosson show to advantage. Stewart made two of the four hits made off Horstman, Graham and Arkenburg. Oscar held a field day in the three innings in which he work, fanning six and lamming a triple with two on. Later he got a single. Graham contributed a double with men on. Levi Arkenburg wound up the affair with three innings of no-hit ball. What to do with all our good pitchers is the question of the hour.

Frank Groeling held a field day with the bat, getting three singles. Numerous others, including Walter Boles, who was playing his first game, contributed two safe licks. Galloway was much in evidence, both at bat and in the field. Looks like a regular job for this bird. The score:

CELEBRATION A SUCCESS.

Observe St. Patrick's Day at Church of Divine Savior.

One of the most successful St. Patrick's Day celebrations held in Los Angeles was that given in the social hall of the Church of the Divine Savior, under the direction of the Rev. William Power.

The hall was artistically decorated by the ladies of the parish and was entirely too small to accommodate the crowd who, attracted by the all-star programme, thronged from all parts of the city in spite of the rain, to enjoy the music and dance, the wit and oratory, which welled forth from the soul of genius. It were vain to discriminate or try to decide on the merits of the several artists. All were excellent, each in his or her line.

W. J. Ford upheld the best traditions of his name and race as the orator of the evening. "Billy" Fay, whose services were secured by the courtesy of the Robin Film Company, was called upon again and again. The little dancing girls, Miss Helen Virgil and Miss Alice Logan, made a decided hit. The Tynan three-piece orchestra measured up to its usual standard. The Kearney family, Mr. Lynch and Mr. Tutty were very well received.

Father Power takes this occasion to publicly thank all who worked with him to make the St. Patrick's Day celebration such an unlooked for success. He most warmly thanks his many friends from all over the city who in spite of the many counter-attractions flocked to his standard.

THIEF LOOTS HOME.

Porch Climber Enters During Absence of the Family.

A porch climber, little more active than the usual run of this class of thieves, worked his way up the side of the residence of Harry T. Thomson, No. 1023 West Twenty-first street, by holding to the trellis vines. The burglar entered through a second-story window, and before he left collected a small sealskin bag containing nine valuable stickpins, some cash and a quantity of smaller articles.

The burglary was committed some time Friday night, Mr. Thomson said yesterday, as he and his family had spent the evening with friends. Discovery of the loss was made after their return.

Entertain Writer.

Miss Zona Gale, the writer, was guest of honor yesterday at a meeting of the Channel Club, held at Hotel Clark. Mrs. Lillian Burkhart Goldsmith was chairman. Mrs. L. B. McClure and Miss Sarah Truax read from Miss Gale's writings. Mrs. Clara Bryant Heywood, president of the Browning Club of Pasadena, took part in the programme. After the literary exercises the members of the club attended a luncheon in a private dining-room of the hotel.

OILING SYSTEM NEAR PERFECT.

ENGINE ON NEW MODEL FILLED SELF-LUBRICATING.

Large Oil Supply Makes Refilling Unnecessary Except at Long Intervals—No Grease in Transmission or Rear Axle—Driving System Supplied from One Pouring Point.

The Nordyke & Marmon Co., builders of Marmon cars, has long been famed for the success of its oiling systems. This feature is even better on the new Marmon "34" than on any car ever built by the Marmon.

The engine holds three and one-half gallons of oil, and consequently requires filling only at long intervals, and when necessary oil is easily supplied through a filler cap on the top of the motor. The engine's oiling system is of the improved force-feed type, oil being supplied through the hollow crank shaft and the rocker arms of the overhead-valve mechanism operate on a hollow shaft, so that oil is fed to each bearing surface. This gives a most efficient engine-oiling system.

The transmission is mounted on the forward end of the torque tube and runs in oil. This oil when poured into the transmission runs back to the rear axle. There is no grease in either the transmission or the rear axle, and the whole driving system is supplied with oil poured in at one point. There are only four grease cups on one car and these are on the steering connections.

Spring shackles are fitted with oil-less bearings which tests have shown will last longer than the ordinary bronze bushing. It is a well-known fact that very little attention is given by even the most careful owner to the oiling of his spring shackle. Even if he does try to oil them he generally has a hard time and ineffectual oiling results. This new oilless bearing has for lubricating surface a piece of asbestos fabric. Even when this fabric bushing wears down it does not rattle, for it acts as a cushion, and when it is worn out it can be replaced at a small charge.

MARMONS ARE COMING OUT.

Two shipments of the new Marmon "34" are on the way to Los Angeles for the Al G. Faulkner Company, Southern California distributors for the "aluminum" car. One will arrive early this week and the second will follow it in the near future. The first shipment includes touring cars for Terrey Everitt of Pasadena, W. F. Bullen of the Grand Trunk Railway and Mrs. Morgan F. Adams.

In the second shipment are touring cars for T. J. Fleming and J. M. Danziger and a four-passenger roadster for Miss Mildred Landreth of Pasadena. Miss Landreth is one of California's best-known feminine motoring enthusiasts. She has been driving cars since her early high school days and is a keen sportswoman and motorist.

Theodore Butz, broker, bond and investment man from Chicago, has shipped his Marmon "34" to Los Angeles and will follow it immediately. He will spend three weeks in Southern California touring, and then will drive north to San Francisco.

Eddie Pullen, Mercer pilot,

Two times winner at Ascot Speedway and entered at Corona, where he set up a new world's mark in the last Circle City classic. Photo shows Eddie's face in a frame of Oilzum cans, furnished for the freak picture by the Western Rubber and Supply Company, Southern California distributors. Eddie will use Oilzum today, as usual.

Strenuous Trip.

FIRST MOTOR CAR OVER THE PACIFIC HIGHWAY.

BATTLING mud, sand and water for the greater part of the 325 miles between Medford and Portland, Craig Redmond, driving a 1916 KisselKar, won a decisive victory over the elements.

In commenting upon this wonderful feat, considering that it was not until April, last year, that the first car went through, O. B. Henderson of the local KisselKar branch gives an account of the trip as related by Redmond.

"I reckon I had a good deal of luck to get through, but I feel that the KisselKar is entitled to full credit for its wonderful performance. It certainly was a 'bear' for pulling and it didn't miss a stroke on the entire trip. Even in the face of all road handicaps the car used up only twenty-eight gallons of gasoline, and it positively did not boil once.

"My worst experience was at Comstock, a little station in the Pass Creek Canyon, nine miles the other side of Cottage Grove and four miles beyond Divide, which veteran motorists will recall as the entrance to the famous canyon.

ROAD WASHED.

"Here a section of highway about eight feet wide and from six to twelve feet deep had been washed out and it was necessary to build a bridge. I placed two 4x12-inch boards over the gap and managed to keep the car on this improvised track.

"By leaving my camera at home I missed a chance to make myself famous by the production of a lively lot of "mud" as well as animal pictures. In the Cow Creek Canyon, for instances, two deer stood looking at the unusual spectacle of an automobile in February, and on the Wolf Creek Hill a porcupine refused for nearly fifteen minutes to step aside. I had a dread of possible puncture on the quills along the spine of the stubborn little animal."

Scene Shifted.

WEAK HEART IS TEST FOR STRONG MACHINE.

Switchboard Stenographer has Exciting Joy Ride — Not Knowing Mechanism of Car, When Driver Fainted, Girl Steers Machine Through Barbed Wire Fence into Farmyard.

"DID I ever have an exciting automobile trip?" asked the girl at the hotel switchboard, as she deftly touched the blond Tower of Pisa on her head to see if it was leaning in the right direction.

"Just listen to me, if you wish to hear of a ride that put it over on Paul Revere.

"Funny thing, I used to dream every other night of going to New York or Coronado all dolled up in a pair of shoes and a magazine. Now I find myself dashing madly up and down Broadway in a gasoline buggy.

"What caused this sudden shifting of my nightly visions?

"Well, a coffee salesman used to drop in here every once in a while and pester me to take a ride in his new Overland runabout. Of course it wasn't his fault that he was a head shorter than I, and had one of those funny little noses that wriggle on the end. And so, finally, feeling kinda sorry for him, I promised to go.

"The next Sunday, being bright and balmy, picture Mr. U. C. T. and myself slowly gliding our way out to the beach.

"Yes, I said slowly. The U. C. T. confided to me as we started down the street from the hotel in his Overland that he had a weak heart and couldn't stand the excitement of fast driving.

"Well, everything went along lovely for a while. We had an edifying discussion on Dame Nature's spring toggery, and, believe me, our rate of traveling gave plenty of time to see everything, including the license number of several hundred machines.

"Suddenly as I was gazing over the landscape and wondering why he hadn't started the day before if he expected to get to the beach, I felt the gentle thud of a head on my shoulder. Being strongly opposed to spooning under any circumstances—with a wriggly nose—I turned to Mr. U. C. T. and started to open my mind. But I only started. One glance told the terrible tale. He had fainted, was dead, or something as helpless.

"Was I frightened? I must have been, or I would have stepped out of the car. It would have been dead easy. Anyway I grabbed for the steering wheel and wondered what a self-stopped looked like. The first thing I touched was the horn. Then I pushed a little bar beside it. Glory! The powerful Overland gave a leap and away we went a la Billie Burke from Glasgow to Dunkirk. Mr. U. C. T. would faint all over again, thought I, if he only knew this.

"Just then a machine came from the opposite direction. I screamed for all I was worth. The driver slowed up and yelled something, too, turned around and followed us, but the Overland roadster was just getting its wind.

"Right here comes the crucial point, as the war fiend says, only this wasn't a point. It was a curve of the road. The car made up its mind to keep to the straight and narrow path and headed due course for a farm house. The only obstruction was twenty feet of barb wire and several fine poles.

"The runabout continued, gave a gasp and stopped conveniently at the front porch of the house.

"The owners came out en masse to see who their visitors were. They were surprised. So was I when Mr. U. C. T. straightened up and began searching the scenery for identification.

"'My weak heart,' he began when I got through with him.

"'Yes, and I'll have a weak mind,' said I, 'if I ever travel in your company again.'"

The Chinese baseball team of Hawaii has left Honolulu for this country and they will play against many college and club nines throughout the United States this spring and summer.

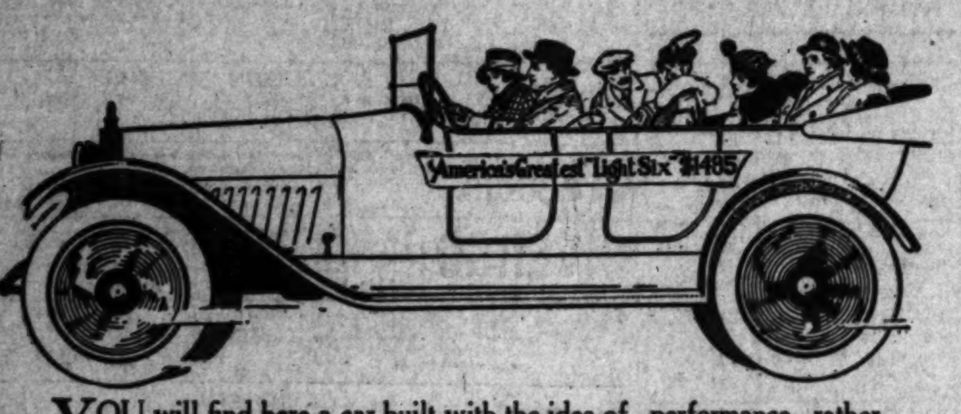
SPEED MERCHANTS NOW MOTOR CAR DEALERS

HOWARD "HOWDY" WILCOX and Don Herr, known to all followers of automobile racing, have taken over the distribution of Case cars in the State of Indiana. These two well-known automobile racing drivers for many years have had the opportunity to study the needs of motor construction; hence the opinion of Wilcox of the new Case Forty is of deep interest. In speaking of the Case car he says:

"We have never been multiple cylinder advocates, but have always been partial to the four-cylinder motor, owing to our connection with them in the contest field. In view of the fact that the gasoline and [illegible]cating oil market has been [illegible] increasing and will continue to [illegible]crease, we have been waiting [illegible] development of a four-cylinder [illegible] that would meet all the desired [illegible]quirements that our judgment [illegible] saw, and take pleasure in saying [illegible] the Case four-cylinder forty-[illegible] power automobile, we believe, [illegible] last word in automobile construction and has proven to be an economical car when fuel costs are considered.

"We have arranged for a [illegible]tive number of these cars, to [illegible] in connection with the White [illegible] which we have had for the last [illegible] and which is also a four-[illegible] car."

THE NEW AND REFINED HAYNES "LIGHT SIX"



YOU will find here a car built with the idea of performance rather than price. The popularity of last season's Haynes "Light Six" among discriminating motor buyers reflected its sterling worth. This year's car is the peer of its famous predecessor in appointment, stamina and economy.

Refinements in Motor and in Body

The pistons are made of aluminum alloy, which is durable, light and strong.

Their decreased weight has resulted in added mileage and increased power.

By the use of light weight metals the gross weight of the "Light Six" has been further reduced.

The electric system is protected by an automatic circuit breaker, which avoids the use of fuses.

The size of the body has been increased for the comfort of driver and passengers.

Gray seat covers, which protect the hand buffed leather against the inroads of dust, are part of the regular equipment.

Among the conveniences is a trouble lamp, Boyce motor meter, Waltham clock, Ammeter and Hydrometer.

The control system has been arranged for perfect control of the car and the comfort of the driver. Only one thing need be done at a time when an emergency demands quick action.

It's exhilarating to drive a car like this and know that it has the power to pull through hub deep mud, and take you up the toughest hills with full load with seldom a change from "high."

NO other cars of the same bore and stroke and gear ratio can equal "America's Greatest Light Six" in performance.

We can prove these facts. Give us the opportunity.

For LIGHT DELIVERY

The Speed, Capacity and Endurance Offered by the New PACKARD Light Service Trucks Solve All Problems

TRAFFIC'S Gordian knot has been the difficulty of joining speed, carrying capacity and endurance in effectual combination.

It has long bound light hauling to dissatisfaction and money-loss.

Summary attempts to cut through it at a stroke met with indifferent success. Mounting a delivery body on a touring car chassis gave the user a delivery car, not a light service truck.

The need for the patient unraveler was great.

Then Packard engineers took up the problem. They knew hauling conditions and hauling needs. They had at their command the resources of a mile-long factory employing 13,000 men and producing the highest class of motor vehicles in the world—51 acres of industrial activity representing the heaviest investment in the industry, $25,000,000.

They produced the Packard Light Service Truck—to meet the growing, insistent demand for a swift light carrier of Packard quality.

They were the unravelers.

The truck they built is strong, a long-time investment. It has the stamina to withstand continuous high-speed travel over any roads, the activity to perform just as effectively in traffic, with speed enough for a wide radius of action. A wide range of body styles adapts it to any service.

Built in two sizes, rated respectively at 1 to 1¼ tons and 1½ to 1¾ tons, it is the profitable solution to any light hauling problem. A telephoned request will bring one of our salesmen to discuss with you the motorizing of your traffic.

LOS ANGELES POWER PROJECT GRAVE FOR TAXPAYERS' MONEY.

Completion Now Four Years Overdue and Still Out of Sight. Original Three-million-dollar Estimate of Cost is Now Twenty-two Millions—What's the Answer?

FOLLOWING is a brief summary of the situation regarding the promises made for the Los Angeles aqueduct power project and the fulfillment of those promises. It is a situation that discloses constant delays in the work of construction, estimates that have had to be revised, startling increases in costs until original figures have been entirely lost sight of, purchase of vast quantities of materials and supplies years in advance of the time when they will be needed. The project is still uncompleted and is likely to require another bond issue before the plans can be carried out to the first preliminary stage where a cent can be earned for the city.

Chief Electrical Engineer Scattergood's estimates for the two power plants in San Francisquito Canyon totaled $4,494,000. Mr. Scattergood is constructing one power plant at a cost of $4,750,000. Figures of experts give the cost of Power Plant No. 2 as approximately $5,000,000, making the cost of the two units $9,750,000, instead of $4,494,000.

Mr. Scattergood estimated the building of a complete distributing system at $5,500,000. The State Railroad Commission's engineer estimates the cost of duplicating the local Edison system at approximately $8,000,000.

The bonds so far voted for the project total $10,000,000. The bond issues that would be required to carry through the project are $5,000,000 for Power Plant No. 2, and $3,000,000 to complete the distributing system—a total assumption of bonds to the amount of $18,000,000.

The declaration officially placed before the State Water Commission calls for a total expenditure of $22,000,000 to include the development of the upper phases of the project.

The Los Angeles aqueduct was built within the estimates of time and cost, thanks to the splendid work of Chief Engineer Mulholland. The Los Angeles aqueduct power project, first put up to the people as one to cost $3,000,000, has mounted in estimates of expense to more than $10,000,000—and it is still under construction, although it was promised by Chief Electrical Engineer E. F. Scattergood that it would be completed in April of 1912, almost four years ago. The proposal of further expenditures on this project is startling to the conservative business man and property owner. It is officially declared that the project's total cost, in the carrying out of all its ramifications, will yet require an expenditure of approximately $22,000,000, thus making the entire project cost the city nearly as much as the aqueduct itself.

BIG PURCHASES UNUSED.

One of the standing jokes of the municipal power project—a joke that has its very serious side to the taxpayers—is the fact that years before they were needed Mr. Scattergood purchased great quantities of transformer cases of high-grade oils, machinery and cables, and other materials, and sent them out into the wilds of the canyon regions, and there they lay months upon months, deteriorating, and portions of them getting out of use, because of the slowness with which the work of construction on the power project has proceeded.

FINAL COST IN DOUBT.

Time alone will tell what the aqueduct power project is to cost this city. At the constant expense of the taxpayers the work has dragged its weary way along, and Engineer Scattergood has revised his figures as to the time of completion almost as often as he has revised his estimates of cost. He has been utterly unable to make the actual work meet his figures.

So far, $10,000,000 of power bonds have been voted by the people of Los Angeles. Indications point to the requirement of another $3,000,000 bond issue for the immediate future, if the city is to build or acquire the proposed distributing system that would serve only a portion of the municipality. On top of that there are plans for the expenditure of many millions more in carrying out the enlarged plans. The stupendous proposals of expenditure are simply staggering to the careful man who keeps his own business within cautious bounds, and who has to hustle each year to meet the figures that face him on his tax bills.

In 1910 there was voted an issue of $2,500,000. This was supposed by the average citizen to be sufficient to carry on the power project to a point where it would be usable by the city. These bonds were sold in 1911. They bear interest at 4½ per cent. per year. Approximately five years' interest has been paid by the Los Angeles property owners on these bonds, or a total of 22½ per cent.—and the actual operation of the plant is some indefinite period of time ahead.

Private construction enterprises generally estimate about 6 per cent. as the amount of interest that will have to be paid during the period of construction of large enterprises.

These photographs were made by a Times staff photographer during the past week and tell better than words part of the story of expensive mismanagement which has characterized the municipal power job. Some of the apparatus shown has been lying out in the open for three years.

Compared with this stands the fact that the city has already paid 22½ per cent. on a project that is not yet in use.

LIKE OLIVER TWIST.

Then, in 1914, came a call for more money—this time to complete the plant and acquire or construct a distributing system. The people voted an issue of $6,500,000 bonds, and now this, from all appearances, will not be enough to complete the first unit of the project—power plant No. 1, in San Francisquito Canyon—and acquire or construct a distributing system that would cover only a portion of the city.

The original estimate of Mr. Scattergood for two power plants in the San Francisquito Canyon, was $4,494,000. The original bond issue for the power project was $3,500,000. When the $6,500,000 bond issue was voted it was stated that $1,250,000 of this amount would be required to complete power plant No. 1. Mr. Scattergood's original estimates were shown to be entirely inadequate.

On September 7, 1911, Mr. Scattergood laid before the Public Service Commission an estimate of the costs of "such additions as would be necessary to take care of the probable total business of the year 1913, making a total estimated cost for such complete distributing system for all street lights and all of the commercial light and power business within the city limits for the year 1913, of $5,500,000."

It now develops that before the State Railroad Commission, in the Edison condemnation case, Chief Engineer Richard Sachse for the commission filed an estimate that it would cost the city $4,800,000 to duplicate only that portion of the Edison company's distributing system that is within the city. This system covers somewhat more than one-half of the city's area. The other areas are covered by the systems of the Pacific Light and Power Company and the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation.

The recent estimate of Engineer Scattergood, laid before the Public Service Commission, for distributing systems to cover only East Los Angeles, Highland Park and Garvanza and the Hollywood districts, was $750,000. With Mr. Scattergood's tendency to revise his estimates, it is reasonable to look upon this figure with doubt and to take the figures submitted to the State Railroad Commission by its engineer. This would mean that it will cost the city, $4,800,000 to duplicate simply the distributing system of the Edison company, on a little more than one-half the city's area, and that a total distributing system for the entire city would cost not less than $8,000,000.

An interesting matter in this connection is an excerpt from the proceedings of a meeting of the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, held April 8, 1914, where Mr. Scattergood appeared to discuss the proposed power bond issue of $6,500,000. This record, which is signed by Andrew Beyrle and W. E. Bush, the latter then the president of the association, says:

POINTED QUESTIONS.

"When Mr. Scattergood was asked whether or not the $1,250,000 called for would complete the power plant he replied, 'No.'

"When asked how much it would take to complete it he replied, '$2,000,000.' When he was asked how he was going to get the other $750,000 he stated that it would come out of the $5,250,000 to be voted for the distributing system.

"When he was asked if this could be legally done he replied that the issue was being made so that the money could be used as they saw fit—either for distributing system or power plant purposes—adding, 'This is my understanding.'

"When he was asked whether or not the $4,500,000 left after the plant is completed would build a complete distributing system, he said 'No.' When asked what it would cost to build this system he replied, 'Four or five million dollars more.'"

Deducting the estimated cost of completing power plant No. 1, the city should have $5,250,000 of the 1914 power bond issue for the acquirement or construction of a distributing system. But it is possible, in the light of past experience, that the cost of the power plant construction may considerably exceed the last estimates.

But even on the above basis it would appear that at least $3,000,000 more bonds must be authorized by the voters of this city and sold before the municipal distributing system for the entire city can be secured.

The situation seems to indicate that this $3,000,000 will be required in order to complete a municipal distributing system, and that $5,000,000 will be required to build power plant No. 2 in San Francisquito Canyon. How can it be raised? Only through municipal bonds.

Mr. Scattergood's estimates of profits to the city were based on the two power plants. Power plant No. 1 will generate 37,000 horse power. Power plant No. 2 would be necessary to provide enough power to supply a general distribution system for the city.

The estimates of profits that have been made by Mr. Scattergood have likewise been subject to revision. And they are based on the assumption that the city system would get all the business. There are three concerns distributing electrical energy in Los Angeles. Each has a wide field and is thoroughly established. It is scarcely probable that they will simply quit business when the "juice" from San Francisquito Canyon is turned on.

With the long drawn out period of construction, the deterioration, or probable actual loss, of portions of materials and supplies purchased years before they were needed and allowed to lie out along the way of the power system for all this time, and the revision and increase in the figures of the general cost estimates, there must be a new basis for figuring prospective profits to the municipality in the distribution of electricity.

The original estimates were made on

WHEN WILL IT BE FINISHED?

Power Project's Completion Many Times Postponed and Four Years Overdue.

Chief Electrical Engineer E. F. Scattergood promised that the power project would be completed within three years after it was started. He declared before the City Club on April 16, 1910, that the work would be finished in April, 1912.

On May 2, 1911, he informed the Board of Public Works that the project would be completed by the end of December, 1912. In October of that year he revised this estimate and set the date for completion as April 1, 1913.

Just how many times since there have been advances in the date of completion is uncertain. What is certain, however, is that on this date, March 19, 1916, the project is not only not completed, but its date of completion is so far ahead that no one, save possibly Mr. Scattergood, will venture an estimate as to when the city will begin to reap some cash returns from its staggering investment.

NEW OPEN-CUT VOTE PLANNED.

Misrepresentation may Cancel Advisory Action's Force.

People's View Uncolored by Misstatements Wanted.

Expose of Opposition Tactics a Bomb in Their Camp.

The extensive campaign of misrepresentation on the part of the opponents of the Bunker Hill open cut improvement with reference to the time for paying assessments may call for a new canvass of the property owners, according to Chairman Topham of the Public Works Committee of the City Council.

"Since we have learned the property owners in the proposed assessment district have been told that any previous assessments against their property must be paid in cash if they are to have time payment privileges for the open cut, I believe the error should be corrected officially by the City Council," said Mr. Topham yesterday.

"As chairman of the Public Works Committee, I have stood for a square deal in the matter of the open cut, and I propose to see that there is no misrepresentation made that can be prevented or properly corrected. If it is shown that property owners have been influenced by misstatements, it will be only fair to call for a new vote on the subject. The City Attorney will be asked by the Council Monday for an official opinion on the question of liability under the Act of 1913, as amended last year."

City Attorney Stephens said yesterday that he will be glad to present officially to the Council his opinion on the case. Regarding the right of the Council to call for a new vote on the question, Mr. Stephens said that inasmuch as the vote is only advisory, the Council may at its pleasure order a new vote if it believes the one now coming in has been influenced by misstatements.

Leading property owners and business men working for the open cut are urging all who have thus far given an adverse vote on the project as a result of misapprehension of the facts, due to the opposition's misstatements, to immediately write the City Clerk informing him of the circumstances and demanding that their votes be changed. This advice will probably be sent out in the form of a special letter to all property owners, it was announced last night.

City Clerk Wilde took cognizance of this action yesterday by installing a special sealed box in which such letters of protest will be kept until the final counting of votes.

"I shall keep all such letters and

POLL TAX GOAL OF CLUBWOMEN.

Proposition for Restoration a Convention Issue.

State Federation Indorsement is Proponents' Aim.

Needs of Schools Principal Argument Advanced.

An active campaign for the restoration of the poll tax in California has been launched by several thousand members of the California Federation of Women's Clubs and will be made an issue at the Los Angeles district convention, that opens at Hollywood Tuesday. A resolution favoring such action has been passed at two club conventions already—those in the Alameda and southern districts. It is to be placed before the State convention at Del Monte in April.

If the proposition receives favorable action at the latter gathering a constitutional amendment will probably be put before the voters with the support of the 35,000 organized clubwomen of California and a widespread publicity campaign will be inaugurated.

The three arguments used by clubwomen who favor the tax are: First, the loss of approximately $800,000 from the school funds of the State; second, the greater part of the voters who paid the poll tax of $2 a year are nonproperty holders and while they enjoy the advantages and privileges of organized government and the public schools they do not contribute to their support; third, the anti-poll tax action taken at the last general election was not understood by the voters generally.

The loss of between $800,000 and $850,000 a year to the school fund by the abolition of the poll tax made it necessary to take a part of the State's corporation tax for school purposes, and this, in turn, pinched other funds. The $2 poll tax, the clubwomen declare, is just and should come from the people generally and not from a source that would make it necessary to curtail road work or other permanent improvements. The sum of $662,000 was last year taken from the corporation tax and placed to the credit of the school funds.

NO COMPENSATION.

This, however, still left a deficiency of nearly $200,000 in the school fund and prevented some road improvement and while the poll tax was abolished, no provision was put forth to supply the deficiency. In this county the entire poll tax went into the school fund while in some other counties a charge of 35 per cent. was made for collecting the money.

The clubwomen in their argument for the reinstatement of the poll tax emphasize the fact that in some districts fully 80 per cent. of the pupils are children of parents who now pay absolutely nothing toward the upkeep of the school system.

The clubwomen say that if the citizens in general had realized the effect of the loss of so large an income, the voters would have retained the tax by a large majority. They base their statement on the fact that in districts where the poll tax was made an issue of debate and lecture, the vote was 2 to 1 in favor of keeping the tax. In other districts, where little or no comment was made on the tax, the vote was the other way. The issue was so little understood, the club members say, that but few persons took the trouble to look up the matter and the nonpaying voter decided it. The burden on the property holder is so great now that the poll tax should be re-established in order to more evenly distribute the cost of public school education, it is argued.

In Los Angeles county the loss to the school fund by the doing way with the poll tax cost property owners $42,505.68. These figures are based on a school attendance of 75,903 and the local funds received from the poll tax, the sum of 56 cents a pupil.

PUBLICITY PLANS.

In the event all the six districts of the federation indorse the resolution to have the tax again become a law, the clubwomen will give their views and arguments wide publicity. They declare that while fully 95 per cent. of all school teachers voted for the tax, the bulk of the women voters either voted against it or ignored it entirely, not realizing the value of the tax to the school funds.

The resolution passed by the Alameda and southern districts, and that will be before all the federated clubs, reads:

"Whereas, we, the women of the California Federation of Women's Clubs, believe that the poll tax was a just tax, as it reached a large number of those citizens who pay taxes in no other way, yet who share in the advantages of our public schools and excellent roads maintained by the public moneys, therefore, be it Resolved, that the Federation of Women's Clubs in convention assembled, favors the reinstatement of the poll tax in California."

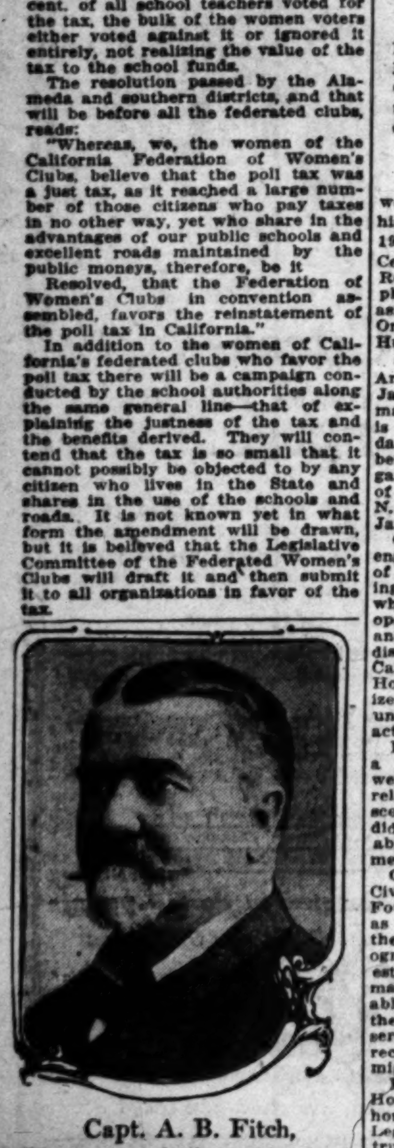
In addition to the women of California's federated clubs who favor the poll tax there will be a campaign conducted by the school authorities along the same general line—that of explaining the justness of the tax and the benefits derived. They will contend that the tax is so small that it cannot possibly be objected to by any citizen who lives in the State and shares in the use of the schools and roads. It is not known yet in what form the amendment will be drawn, but it is believed that the Legislative Committee of the Federated Women's Clubs will draft it and then submit it to all organizations in favor of the tax.



Capt. A. B. Fitch,

Whose recent death in this city is mourned by many loyal friends.

Woman Pioneer in an Old Industry.

·Mrs. Helen L. Maxwell

And two of the 150 pheasants she raised in her back yard. Mrs. Maxwell is holding Duke (left,) a perfectly marked silver pheasant, and one of the golden variety.

Unusual.

RAISES PHEASANTS IN SMALL CITY BACKYARD.

GIVEN a backyard, 50 by 30 feet, some spare time, a desire to occupy that time and you may start out with seven pheasants and in two years have 150 birds, valued at from $3 to $25 each, according to Mrs. Helen L. Maxwell of No. 1443 West Twenty-fifth street, who has proved it.

Three years Mrs. Maxwell started her industry with three silver, two ring-neck and two golden pheasants and last year she stopped raising them because her three pens contained 150 birds and she intended to leave the city. Today Mrs. Maxwell has twenty-nine pheasants. She has killed them off, sold them for table use, given them away and also disposed of them for aviary purposes.

"I didn't know what to do with my yard," said Mrs. Maxwell, "so I started raising the birds just to take up my spare time and to use them for my own table. When people discovered that I had pheasants I received telephone calls, letters and visits from hundreds of persons. They wanted me to sell my birds and because I had so many I did sell a few. I received an order from one of the big clubs of the city last week for sixteen birds to be used at a private dinner.

"Golden pheasants are worth $45 a pair if they are perfectly marked and they are harder to raise than any other kind. The silver ones do not sell so high, being worth on an average but $10. The ring-neck pheasants, which are used mostly for banquets, are worth $3 each."

Pheasants dress on an average at three pounds. The meat is much richer than chicken and the eggs command a market price of $2.40 a dozen. The eggs are about as large as a pullet egg. Those of the golden pheasants are green with spots of white. The silver pheasant lays a brown egg. One hundred pounds of specially-prepared pheasant food will feed fifty birds for three weeks if greens of some kind are also used.

The average bird lays sixty eggs in a season. They are much harder to raise than turkeys and because of their tendency to fly they are readily lost. Mrs. Maxwel used bantam hens to hatch the pheasants as mother birds are apt to leave the nest. It has been Mrs. Maxwell's experience that pens 10x10x8 feet are best for the raising of the birds. They are great hunters and live mostly, when wild, on insects.

Duke, Mrs. Maxwell's big silver pheasant, is almost as good as a watchdog. He knows the walk of every person on his street and when he hears a strange step he utters his peculiar call. Mrs. Maxwell was recently offered $150 for a pair of golden pheasants, but refused the offer because constant association with the birds has created an affection for them.

"If one wished," said Mrs. Maxwell, "one could very easily make from $150 to $400 a year by raising pheasants in a backyard."

ENGINEER-SOLDIER IS LAID AT REST.

MILITARY HONORS AT BIER OF CIVIL WAR VETERAN.

Finis is Written to Active Life that Embraced an Honorable Army Career, Building of Railways and the Operation of Mines and Smelters in Mexico.

Capt. A. B. Fitch, born near Ellsworth, O., June 17, 1840, died at his home in Hollywood March 11, 1916. Interment at the Hollywood Cemetery on Tuesday, March 14, the Rev. Arthur J. Evans of St. Stephens Episcopal Church officiating, assisted by Chaplain of the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, W. H. Hubbard (retired.)

Capt. Fitch was married to Miss Amelia Pauline Grimes, daughter of James Grimes, a prominent iron manufacturer of Portsmouth, O., and is survived by the widow, three daughters, Madeline C. Fitch, Elizabeth Fitch, and Mrs. Wm. M. Morgan and by four sons, M. B. Fitch of Corona, Albert J. Fitch of Hachita, N. M., H. G. Fitch of Tacoma, and James G. Fitch of Seattle.

Capt. Fitch was a prominent civil engineer, engaged in the construction of railways and other large undertakings in the Middle West until 1892, when he took over and successfully operated mines and a smelter at Kelly and Magdalena, N. M. In 1904 he disposed of those properties, moving to California, and since 1905 had lived in Hollywood. In later years he organized the Temescal Rock Company, and until his death was president and active manager of the company.

He loved his home, was peculiarly a home body, and only those who were so fortunate as to enjoy close relations with him knew the broad scope of his information, his splendid mental poise, his rare executive ability, his kindly management of men, and his genial nature.

Capt. Fitch served throughout the Civil War in Company H of the Fourth Iowa Cavalry, having enlisted as a private and been advanced to the captaincy of the company. In recognition of his possession in the highest degree of those qualities that make the brave, cool-headed, dependable officer, he was called to duty on the staff of Gen. Winslow, where he served much of his term, and his war record is one of which any soldier might justly be proud.

He was laid at rest in the beautiful Hollywood Cemetery with military honors, with the flag of the Loyal Legion spread over the casket and a trumpeter sounding "taps" for the long sleep of the brave soldier, true friend and loving husband and father.

GREAT FUTURE FOR UNIVERSITY SEEN.

AMBITIOUS PLANS DISCLOSED AT STUDENT RALLY.

Enthusiasm Answers Exposition of Aims of Coming Campaign to Raise Two-million Endowment Fund for Methodist Institution. Ten Millions Probable Goal.

Ambitious plans for the University of Southern California, which have been under consideration for some weeks, were made public Friday to students and faculty of the institution for the first time. At a monster rally which packed the college chapel to the doors and windows, President Bovard and Dr. Robert Tyler Smith, executive secretary of the forward movement, through whose efforts the university has been offered tentatively a great endowment, explained to the students just what the authorities hope to accomplish in the near future.

A campaign for $2,000,000 will be opened next week, with the arrival of Dr. J. W. Hancher of New York, who will aid in the work in his official capacity as assistant secretary of the general board of education of the Methodist Episcopal Church. This sum will be the first unit in the great endowment necessary if Southern California is to have a university commensurate with the intellectual and material development of the Southwest.

"Within ten years I expect to see 10,000 students at this university," said Dr. Smith. "I expect to see, also, an endowment of $10,000,000, at least eight or ten new buildings, a campus adequate for the future growth of the institution, and every equipment and facility for study and research which is found in the best institutions in the world. We have a great opportunity; all we need do is to grasp it."

Dr. Bovard stated that the coming campaign for the university will be "not a charge, but a siege." "We shall not be in a hurry," he said, "but we hope to win Southern California, and as much more of the United States as is necessary, in our campaign. Every person interested in the welfare of the university will be asked to do his part."

Enthusiasm reigned among the students. As the meeting ended Ugene Blalock, student yell leader, was placed on the platform to soothe the nerves of the students by leading them in college songs.

NATION CELEBRATES DAY OF ORANGE.

FRUIT OF GOLDEN CALIFORNIA FREE TO ALL HERE.

Pretty Girls Shower Hollywood with Luscious Yellow Spheres and Pomona Distributes Two Millions. On Trains, in Cafes and Hotels the Feast is Kept Up.

Everyone was eating oranges yesterday. The third observance of National Orange Day was greeted with more enthusiasm than either of its predecessors, in 1914 and 1915.

The opening of the San Diego exposition for another year was celebrated in conjunction with Orange Day, and a large number of Angelenos left for the southern metropolis early yesterday morning. A special train conveyed the visitors and posters, banners and bunches of oranges placed all over the coaches brought home to the mind that it was the day on which every loyal citizen of the Southland must eat, praise and talk oranges.

Leading business houses and all the banks gave away tons upon tons of the fruit, and lectures with colored slides featured the programme of many a theater. In Hollywood scores of pretty maidens drove through the streets distributing oranges to all who wanted them. The Women Westerners gave away thousands of oranges during the day, confining their activity in the most part to the downtown district. The produce houses kept open to visitors all through the day, and the curious were given an opportunity to taste and eat every conceivable kind of orange on the market, from the tiny kumquat to the massive navel.

Pasadena, Long Beach, Santa Monica, Venice, Riverside, Redlands and practically every town of any size in Southern California celebrated the day with appropriate exercises. These took the form of parades, exhibits of the fruit, open-air fetes, lectures and the giving away of quantities of oranges. Pomona alone contributed 2,000,000 luscious Sunkist oranges to tempt the appetite of the fruit lover.

In the East the day was observed almost as extensively as it was in California. A number of mayors in the large eastern cities proclaimed March 18 National Orange Day, and in every cafe, restaurant, hotel and dining car oranges played a predominant part in the menu offered the hungry. Many residents of the cold and chilly regions of the north and east were gladdened by the sight of the golden fruit from the Far West, and no doubt many made resolutions that before another year has passed they will be enrolled among the citizenry of California, the land of the orange.

That the hotels of the United States generously co-operated in making "California Orange Day" a big success in their communities was evidenced by numerous letters sent to the Pacific Coast Hotel and Apartment Record, a technical journal of this city.

Edwin H. Lee, managing director of the Menger Hotel of San Antonio, wrote that this house "is featuring California Orange Day in a particular way. The Menger heard the call of California and is glad to respond," said the letter. "Besides a 'Naranja Baile y Merienda,' which will be one of the most brilliant social events of the year, we shall serve an orange breakfast, orange luncheon and orange dinner, with menu cards indicative of the day on which the whole country takes off its hat to the 'Golden Fruit of California.'"

Other letters of similar import were received from Chicago, New York, Minneapolis, Denver and practically every community on the Pacific Coast.

EVANESCENT.

So many times a man will come within just one of doing or saying or getting the right thing. It almost looks as if a fellow has to miss the most beautiful thing on earth by a breath before he can find the ready wing of pursuit.

FOR VALUE RECEIVED.

On days like those Los Angeles is now having a man could own a rose hedge ten miles long without a bloom too many. An orange from one's own tree and a spray of lilac from the dooryard are enough to make even the contemplation of one's taxes a pleasure.

STRONG FOR THE BOATS.

Admiral Benson favors building ships at San Francisco. In California we are with him to a man as to building ships, and while we would like to have them built at San Francisco and at Long Beach, we are good enough Americans to waive the location so long as they do build them.

PURE-FOOD EXPOSITION.

The pure-food exhibition is on in Broadway and will continue until April 1. Consumers cannot pay too much attention to the way in which their food is prepared and sold. There has been a great improvement since grandfather's day. Los Angeles is well to the front in the reform.

ONLY BURROS LEFT.

Since the days when Richard would have given his kingdom for a horse the price of livestock has experienced a considerable decline. So many American horses and mules have been shipped to Europe since the war started that horse flesh may again appreciate in value, and possibly our cavalry will yet find itself mounted on burros.

SOMETHING TO SEE.

Los Angeles people, and indeed all Californians, must not make the mistake of taking the San Diego exposition for granted. You may have seen one or the other of the two fairs last year, or you may have seen both, but that is no reason why you should not give yourself the delight of a few days at this new and admirable combination of expositions.

TWO QUEEN MARYS.

The present Queen Mary on St. Patrick's Day decorated a delegation of loyal Irishmen with sprigs of Shamrock. A former Queen Mary approved of decorating a good many Irishmen with ropes. That was a long time ago when Ireland—

"Was the most distressful country that ever yet was seen,
For they're hanging men and women for the wearing of the green."

CITY OF DREAMS.

The exposition at San Diego is not only large, interesting and beautiful, but it is set like a ruby among diamonds. It is as a white house seen through branches of green leaves and golden fruit. It is an exhibit of great things, but the greatness of what it contains does not exceed the loveliness of where it is. Man has perhaps never more nearly approached the building of a city of dreams.

SOMETHING TO PROTECT.

Arizona has protected its quail and its doves in good time. Most States do not have the luck to pass and enforce game laws until there is no wild life to protect. A thirty-mile ride in Arizona in some sections will stir up more rabbits and birds than the average hunter ever saw in his life. Of course you have to get away from the railroad stations to see all this, but it is not hard to lose the railroads in Arizona.

LOOKING THE PART.

The small boy who asked if Mrs. Vanderbilt was real, never had the slightest notion of hurting that lady's feelings, providing she was a lady and not a wax figure. It must take a good deal of breeding to sit so still that a small boy could not tell the difference. The incident also implies that the managers of the department store where this happened must be artists when it comes to the preparation of complexion for lay figures.

NOT A CLINGING VINE.

A California woman had a New York Police Court sentence suspended on her promise not to make physical assaults upon her husband, who is a financial expert in the eastern metropolis. It is a pleasure to see that New York is standing up for the rights of men, and particularly for the rights of husbands. On the other hand, if this man should ever be married to a clinging vine of the coddling, sick-minded type he would gladly exchange her for his old love and beg her to thrash him every other day of his life. It isn't absolutely necessary for a wife to belong to either class.

MISFORTUNES OF IGNORANCE.

However outraged Americans ought to be over the long standing and disgraceful violation of our international boundary, no one who looks into the sad, hopeless and often pitifully-ignorant faces of the poor peons down there can fail to feel a great sorrow that a ruffian and murderer like Villa could lead them into their present peril. Shooting Villa and his immediate band could only be a pleasure, but for Americans to find themselves forced to cause suffering among the more innocent class of Mexicans is a condition for profound regret.

THE PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY.

Advance reports from the Secretary of State's office in Sacramento forecast a bumper crop of Republicans in California this year, about an average crop of Democrats, a light Socialist crop and a Progressive crop almost ruined by early frosts and adverse weather conditions generally.

Never has the early registration been so heavy and never has the preponderance of Republicans been so great. While the reports of early registration showed a somewhat mixed political state, the trend during the last thirty days has been towards the party of protection and prosperity. The State law requires county clerks to make a complete statement for registration once each month to the Secretary of State. The election month closes on the thirteenth; nearly complete reports for the last thirty days show that one-half the total registration has been Republican.

This overwhelming Republican registration has turned soldiers of fortune and camp followers of every political hue towards the Republican campfires and it will require prompt and energetic action on the part of loyal followers of Lincoln and McKinley to guard against the encroachments of these spoils-seekers. Never before have so many railbirds lined the fences of the political racecourse.

Once bellicose even in defeat the Democrats seem now to be bowing to the inevitable. Their primary delegation to the national convention has been harmoniously agreed upon and the Democratic primary will be held simply as a matter of form. An adage that has not been reversed in fifty years holds that Democratic harmony in May means disruption and defeat in November.

While there are no primary contests in the lesser parties, it now appears that there will be two sets of delegates on the Republican primary ticket. One of these was selected at a State-wide conference of Republican State and county committeemen as representatives of the loyal followers of the great party in whose tenets freedom and protection are joined, men and women who, through six years of biting adversity, have nevertheless kept the faith; that will be headed on the primary ballot by the name of Judge Bordwell of Los Angeles, an eminent jurist and independent Republican of stalwart breed. The other represents those who sail in the Republican craft only when the winds are fair; when a storm approaches or a chance for a looting expedition is offered they desert the ship. This delegation was named at a rump convention in which seventy of the seventy-five alleged delegates openly supported the Progressive ticket sixteen months ago; it will be headed on the primary ballot by Alden Anderson, who was elected Lieutenant-Governor at the time when the Southern Pacific domination in California was supreme; he is the president of a big public service corporation and is one of five officials of public service corporations regulated by the Railroad Commission on the delegation which he heads.

The Johnson rump convention passed resolutions indorsing the Johnson Progressive administration of the last fifteen months, an administration that submitted eleven propositions to the voters at a special election last summer, only to have them all beaten, an administration that assembled a special session of the Legislature in January to re-enact practically the whole of an election law that had been rejected by a decisive majority by the electors in October, against which enough adverse signatures have already been secured to force it to another referendum vote. So thoroughly Progressive was this rump convention that the first list drafted for the primary delegation contained the names of thirty delegates, the California allotment to the national Progressive convention, in place of twenty-six delegates, the Republican allotment.

Under normal conditions the result of the primary contest could not be considered as even doubtful; but, unfortunately, political conditions in California during the last six years have been abnormal. Reason has too often been displaced by hysteria, and the masses have followed those who sang "I love you, California" loudest, failing to realize that they loved her as the wolves love the sheep. Word has already been passed along the line that the "sack" of the big public service power companies, whose high officials adorn the Earl-Johnson ticket, is to be open for the campaign and that all ward and precinct bosses who can deliver will be employed for three weeks before the primaries at a rate of $5 a day and liberal expense accounts.

The Presidential primary act was amended at the special session of the Legislature in January so as to permit the conscienceless riffraff of all parties to vote in the Republican primary in May; that was the palpable object of removing the restriction requiring one to state political affiliations when registering. That act makes the way easy for the machine politicians. To this must be added the influence of the 6000 voters on the State pay roll and their immediate associates. Not one of all these will fail to register before April 1; and these are the influences that must be successfully combatted if the Republicans of California are to be represented and not misrepresented at the national convention in Chicago.

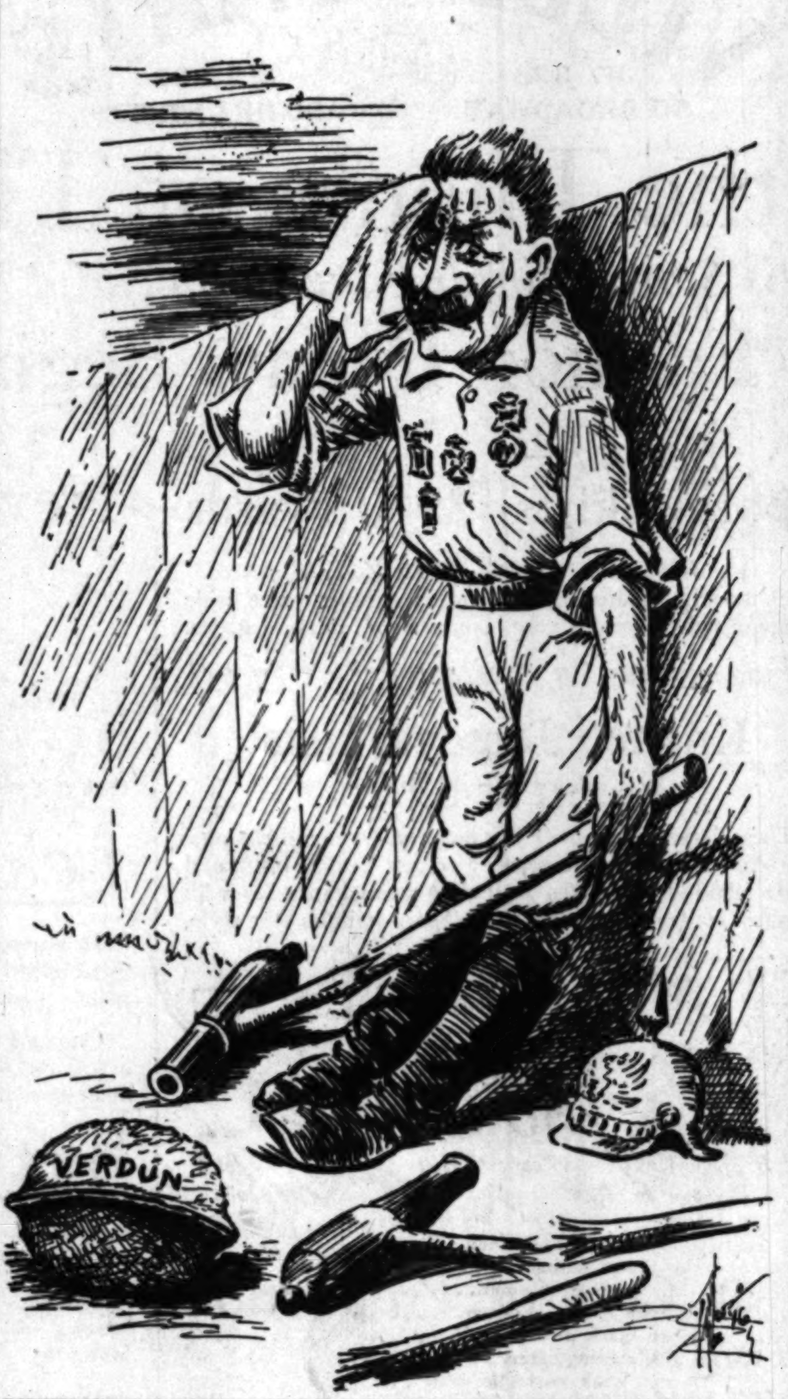
THE POWER PROJECT.

On another page of this issue The Times prints a careful and temperate review of the history of the Los Angeles aqueduct power project, of its present status and of its prospects. In so doing it has been necessary to direct attention to as lamentable an example of wastefulness and inefficiency as, to the knowledge of The Times, has ever existed in any municipality.

The Times has no personal grievance against Engineer Scattergood or his assistants. It would greatly prefer to praise than blame them in their official capacities. But when The Times beholds the sorry fruits of their mismanagement of so tremendous a responsibility as that which has been vested in them in the carrying through of this project, involving as it does many millions of the taxpayers' money, it becomes its duty to the public to put the men who foot the bills in possession of the facts.

That the conditions which have prevailed for the past three years should continue is intolerable. It is only through popular knowledge of the facts that a change may be wrought—a change, the need for which is instant and imperative.

Doesn't Crack.



OUR TWO WARS WITH MEXICO.

Our first war with Mexico, which occurred seventy years ago, was deliberately planned and precipitated by President Polk.

Reeve's American Diplomacy says:

"The Mexican War was waged for the purpose of conquest, for the fulfillment of Polk's design upon California."

Schouler, in the History of the United States, says:

> "Without a word of warning, however secret, to Congress, which was in full session, with no conference on this subject further than to hint repeatedly, as the Oregon difficulty gave him double excuse for doing without exposing his game, that it was prudent in times of peace to prepare for war, he ordered Gen. Taylor to advance and take a position on the left bank of the Rio Grande [thus invading their disputed territory;] he also assembled a strong fleet in the Gulf of Mexico. . . ."

Daniel Webster, in his arraignment of President Polk, said: "No one declared war. Mr. Polk made it."

The result of that war was the acquisition of California, to the advantage of the people living in California, and the advantage of the United States, and the advantage of civilization generally.

Our second war with Mexico occurred two years ago.

The immediate incident which caused that war was that on April 9, a boat loaded with American sailors in the uniform of the American navy landed at the wharf in Tampico, Mexico.

They were arrested by a Mexican officer in charge of a guard, but were subsequently released from arrest and returned to the boat. The Huerta government disavowed the transaction, and the officer making the arrest was himself arrested and locked up by the Mexican government. The Mexican commandant at Tampico apologized for the arrest, and acting President Huerta also apologized.

Admiral Mayo—our naval commander at Tampico—not being satisfied that sufficient amends had been made for the affront committed, demanded that the Mexican military commander at the Port of Tampico should fire a salute of twenty-one guns with special ceremony.

The government of Mexico de facto consented to fire a salute but considered that five guns would be sufficient, and declined to go through certain accompanying ceremonies such as Admiral Mayo demanded.

Thereupon President Wilson made war upon Mexico. He ordered the armed forces of the United States to capture and hold the port of Vera Cruz and plant our flag upon Mexican soil. Thereupon Mexico fired more than twenty-one guns, but she fired them at our soldiers, twenty of whom were slain in the battle.

As a result of this our second war with Mexico we captured and held Vera Cruz for a while and killed quite a lot of Mexicans, and somebody collected a lot of customs dues, and, as a result of Huerta's refusal to fire sixteen guns, added to President Wilson's personal disapproval of him, he lost his job as President de facto.

President Wilson in a message delivered in person to a joint session of both Houses of Congress sought approval of his action, saying, however:

"No doubt I could do what is necessary in the circumstances to enforce respect for our government without recourse to Congress and yet not exceed my constitutional powers as President.

The President's address was concluded at 3:12 p.m. on April 20, when he retired from the hall of the House.

That prompt action was desired by the President upon his message to Congress was made known to the House immediately by Mr. Underwood of Alabama, who said:

"Mr. Speaker, I merely wish to state to the House that the President informs me that it is of the utmost importance that action should be taken today in reference to his message just received. I wish to ask each member of the House to remain here until the resolution can be passed through the House at a later hour this afternoon."

The pie-biters in the House promptly passed the resolution and while it was under consideration in the Senate on the following day the wires brought the news from Mexico that our soldiers had been landed at Vera Cruz and that fighting was in progress in the streets of that city.

This opera bouffe campaign against Mexico operated more than any other one circumstance to increase the contempt and hatred which Mexicans entertain for the United States government and if—as is barely possible—the present advance of our army to pursue and punish Villa should result in a desertion of Carranza troops to the Villa standard, we may thank President Wilson for indirectly bringing about a third war with Mexico.

SHOW THEM!

Southern California is now full of interested visitors and The Times bespeaks for them the most cordial attentions on the part of our individual citizens. Show them! Point out the beauties and opportunities of our Land of Promise! Was it ever so beautiful? Was it ever so alluring? If every man and woman of our California lovers would take time and pains now to help the tourist observer see and know and understand, how satisfying it would be to both the giver and the recipient of the courtesy! The Times has done and is doing its share. It has sent several excursions into the Imperial Valley and is now promoting one to the San Joaquin. It invites all Californians to boost with it and to spare no effort at this time to make our thousands of visitors happy and contented here. We all want them to carry home the pleasantest impressions—or to stay with us. It is the day and the hour, right now, to make thousands of new and enthusiastic admirers of the Southland and confer the blessing upon them that was once and for all time brought to us who have long lived here.

RIPPLING RHYMES.

OLD SONGS.

Last night I heard an ancient dame hum divers songs of bygone years, and tender recollections came, which filled my old green eyes with tears. "Oh, Birdie, I am tired now, I do not care to hear you sing;" thus warbled on the withered frau, while darning socks like everything. Beneath the bright Canadian skies I used to sing that simple lay; folks heard my boyish treble rise, and wished I'd quit or go away. Where are the men who cried "Shut up!" and promptly sicked their dogs on me when I, before their wickiup, turned loose that song in ecstacy? The beldame by my fireside waits and sings old songs to you unknown, as, "Wait for me at heaven's gates, sweet Belle Mahone, sweet Bell Mahone!" I used to sing the same sweet song beneath the warm Canadian sun, and neighbors rang the chestnut song and put more buckshot in the gun. Old songs! Sweet songs! They blaze the track to bygone days and vanished scenes before I had to break my back to earn the beefsteak and the beans.

WALT MASON.

Con Cuchillo.

CHILE CON CARNAGE.

BEING THE PARTICULAR PEPPER IN SOME PERSONAL OPINIONS OF Don Yo de Chiltepin.

Aren't we the Thoughtful Things! Isn't it inevitable that the Sense of Proportion should slink around the corner when it sees us coming? And that the Attraction of Gravitation should pull itself up by its suspenders at the first sound of our approximating footfall?

We flop into ecstacies of Horror, Pity and Provender when nations the Other Side of the Salt get Human—and fight, as has been their habit since the world began. And we are Sorry as no one was ever sorry before. And we dance and dress and write checks for the Sufferers by an Incident which is all this War is; like mumps, measles and whooping cough in this youthful world. Embattled women are rewriting "The Song of the Shirt" to a rhythm that Tom Hood never dreamed—the purr of sewing machines, the whizz of chatter, and "Ohs!" and "Ahs!" and softening eyes. And it's all a heartening and worthy shift of the ordinary activities of our super-excitated Philanthropic Nerve (known to surgeons as the Pneumogastric)—that live wire which tells the stomach to feel Squeamy when the eyes see blood or squalor. We are not more altruistic than our grandfathers—simply more qualmish. We don't adopt orphans or old women or cripples as they did—we Associcharity them, Charityball them, Tagday them, Pungle for them. Adoption is dull, grey, daily, laborious responsibility. But we are Smarter. We have learned to do our charity by having our Fun out of it. It was an old-fashioned Carpenter who said: "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon." But WE can, and we do—in the selfsame Two-Step. We can Tango our Tenderness for the Afflicted, and Bazaar our Brotherhood to Humanity.

I'm not cynical. This is what we do—and it's much better than most of what we do. If God gets a Look-in, now and then, even over the shoulders of Mammon, it's certainly worth while.

And not all of us are neurotic. I know one serene and noble woman whose own hands have made near 300 shirts for the soldiers of Europe—and not under the spotlight. And there are many others, to whom such things are Convictions, not ephemeral fads. I was speaking merely of our overwhelming average—and that's no paradox, for our Average goes Overwhelmingly to some new fad as often as our nerves get Strung Up.

To the historian perhaps the clearest index of the psychological change that has come upon the American people in a half-century is this same Upsidedowning of our notions and practice of Altruism from the Personal to the Collective; from the Homely to the Swell; from the Steady to the Spasmodic. And the fact that our Pity like our Pocket nowadays thinks only in Five Figures. Like Gulliver, we can't see the millioned Lilliputs of Sorrow swarming over us. It needs an avalanche of Brobdingnags to open our emotional eyes. (If this be Mixed, unmetaphor it.)

A noiseless and invisible Bug kills more people every year than the dum-dums and the 42-centimeters. Human filthiness puts poison in the veins of the very cow—and more in the bucket to which her patient udder gives down its bounty. And so we murder, in this United States alone, ten times as many children at home as all our unprecedented Charity can remedy or alleviate abroad. Our scores of millions of good round dollars, our myriad "Benefits," our society and personal exacerbation and resoluting and sewing and orating—we beat the world's record in these. But these come only when Philanthropy is made a Noise, when our Emotions are tickled under their toes, when the individual drowsiness is wakened to rush forth to the tramp of the Meritorious Mob. It's much as such nice old persons as I can remember—when voters who hadn't smelled a polling-place in years would ramp out and sweat half the night in a torchlight procession.

I wonder if anyone ever wondered if there would be the remotest shrinkage in the net receipts of any Modern Philanthropy if it were an Australian Ballot—if the Left Hand never got authentic details of what the Right Hand was doing, and the color of the glove it wore at the time—if there were no photographers, Glad-for-Charity-Rags, half-tones, lists of donors and patronesses?

This is not in Sneerness—as I said, it's better to give God a Sniff than to put the door against Him altogether. And unless God can enjoy a Joke, I don't just guess how any of us would know there was such a thing. Certainly WE didn't invent Humor any more than we invented Life—nor do we understand it much better.

But I fancy God has a twinkle in the corner of His mouth, every now and again, over the way our Humanity hardly touches us except in occasional Tidal Waves. There is need of our sympathy in the very next house. In ten thousand houses in this town there is need not only of our sympathy, but our help. We don't see them; we don't read about them; we know them only as grey, "Uninteresting" facts. And we want to be Excited.

Now, Why the Thirteen Thunders can't Charity Begin at Home? Why can't we sew, tango, weep, contribute for the poor devils dying under our noses? And for a babe to die by slow-poison milk, or a girl to cough her lungs out by the year because she can't even have a decent chance at God's Pulmonary Cure—the fresh air of California—is just as Hideous as anything in today's Europe. ONLY—it isn't a Movie!

Do we really feel with our hearts, or only in the Society Column? Have we a genuine touch with the Other Fellow—or even with ourselves. Which is the same thing.

The beginnings and the end of Life are beyond our choice, our understanding and our control. We come unknowing from the Unknown, into the unsolved problems of the Here. And when we go, it is as little by our volition and again as much to the Unknown. First and last—from the miracle of birth to the sacrament of Death—we are the wards of Mystery. Life is even as the wind, which bloweth as it listeth, and we hear the sound thereof, but no man can tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth.

And perhaps that is the very Romance of life—for there can be no Romance without Mystery. If we knew, as by arithmetic, why we came to be born and what was before us; if we knew when we were to die, and why, and what next—it would perhaps be intolerable. But God's blessed Secrets are our safety. They keep our Imagination alive. They stir our Hope. They quicken our Desire. If we could know all, we could feel nothing.

BUILDERS' OFFICERS.

Association at Annual Meeting and Election Sends Communication to Engineers and Architects to Clear Away Confusion of Names.

At the annual meeting of the Master Builders' Association of Los Angeles, held in the offices of the association, No. 1118 Story Building, last Thursday evening, the following officers were elected for the coming year: J. F. Atkinson, president; Eric Lund, vice-president; Walter Slater, secretary; Weymouth Crowell, Treasurer; G. S. Treite was appointed assistant secretary. The meeting was preceded by a dinner at the Hayward Cafe.

In order to dispel a confusion existing in the local building industry, caused by a similarity of names of two organizations, the following letter was ordered sent to the American Institute of Architects and the Engineers' and Architects' Association.

LOS ANGELES, March 16, 1916.

Gentlemen: At the last meeting of the Master Builders' Association of Los Angeles the undersigned was instructed to advise you that an organization under the name of the "Master Builders of Los Angeles" is in no way connected with us. The Master Builders' Association of Los Angeles has been, as you know, in existence for the past sixteen years. Since 1904, at its reorganization, and up to the present time, the existence of the association has been a matter of written record, and it has been recognized by your honorable society, and by the Department of Buildings, and by others in the business life of the city, as composed of the substantial and responsible building contractors of this locality. Membership in the association is limited to building contractors only. Building contractors who draw plans are not permitted to hold membership, and this rule has been strictly adhered to.

The long-continued existence of the association and the standing of its members are matters in which a pardonable pride may be indulged, and we feel assured that no further comment from us is necessary in the present confusion of names and the personnel of the officers of both organizations.

Sincerely yours,
J. F. ATKINSON, President,
Master Builders' Association of Los Angeles.

ST. PATRICK'S JINKS.

Jonathans Hold a Merry Celebration of Ireland's Festival.

The annual St. Patrick's Day jinks of the Jonathan Club, held Friday night in the club banquet-rooms, is said to have been the biggest affair of its kind in the history of the organization. More than 400 attended. Following the elaborate dinner, twenty-six professionals from Clark's Vaudeville Exchange presented a varied programme of entertainment.

The occasion was strictly a "stag" affair, but members of the club are planning an elaborate All Fool's Day ball to be held the evening of April 1, at which ladies will be guests. J. E. Davidson, manager of the club, promises the event will be one of the features of the club's life.

SACRIFICE FOR GIRL.

Accused Boy Auto Bandit Offers to Repeat Confession if He can Free Sweetheart—Quartette Held for Robbery and Fifth Rearrested.

For the freedom of Eva Douglas, his sweetheart, John Fleming, one of the alleged boy auto bandits, yesterday offered to repeat his confession of guilt, shouldering all blame that might possibly attach to Miss Douglas, who is still under arrest. Fleming admitted to Justice Brown yesterday that he had made the confession, introduced by Detectives Jones, with the hope of seeing the young woman out of jail.

With three other youthful members of the alleged gang, including Robert Burns, Frank Shank and Frank Renwick, he was bound over to the Superior Court on bail of $2000 in each case. W. J. Shank was not held because of insufficient evidence to show he had a part in the robbery of Mrs. Ella Rosenbusch.

He did not go free, however, being immediately rearrested on another burglary charge. He was arraigned and his case set for early next week.

Mrs. Rosenbusch and the arresting officers were the principal witnesses yesterday and identified the young men positively in connection with the crime charged. The accused were all taken to the County Jail to await their trials.

JUDGE CUSHMAN RETURNS.

On account of the Mossholder and Tennant cases going over, Judge Cushman of the United States District Court will return from San Diego tomorrow night, and resume his work in Judge Bledsoe's department Tuesday morning. It was expected the San Diego term would last a month. The Mossholder trial, involving a smuggling charge, will be transferred to Los Angeles, and will probably be tried in May. On account of developments in San Diego, in which young Mossholder is being held on a robbery case, it is feared on the part of the defendant that he could not get an unbiased jury on the smuggling charge. He did not appear when the smuggling case was called, but the bail of $5000 was not forfeited.

CITY BATTLES TO EJECT RAILROAD.

NGS SUIT AGAINST ESPEE FOR AN PEDRO STRIP.

im is Made that the Company es not Need the Land, While e Defense Contends it is Required to Accommodate Increasing Harbor Business.

The legal battle of the city to el the Southern Pacific from a strip feet wide by 4000 feet long in n Pedro, problematically worth 0,000, started in Judge Taft's urt yesterday in the shape of a demurrer to the complaint. Attorney lbert contended that the city has owed no right to the property as own by its complaint. The argument will be resumed on Tuesday.

The acre value of this strip which the Southern Pacific is holding and which the city is claiming under the tideland act, is approximately $5000 $50,000. The city claims the strip is not necessary for railroad development. Deputy City Attorney Houghton and Attorney Anderson representing the city, hold that it is more land than the Southern Pacific finds necessary in the conduct of its business.

The Southern Pacific claims it does need this strip; that in order to take care of the increasing business by reason of the development of the harbor, the land is absolutely necessary for additional terminal facilities. From the trend of the argument it is obvious that the Southern Pacific will fight hard to retain the strip which is not only rapidly increasing in value, but will be a big item for and in controlling business at the harbor. The city, which has successfully won its tidelands suits, is confident that the strip will be added to its large holdings, wrested in court from the various corporations at the harbor.

PREFERS CITY.

WOULDN'T FOLLOW HUBBY.

Because, as he says, his wife refused to go to Imperial Valley where he had gone to seek employment, and insisted to live in Los Angeles, Carl Strang, defending Mrs. Strang's suit for divorce before Judge Taft yesterday, asked for the custody of two of the four minor children, and to the community property held in

Mrs. Strang is the daughter of A. Berman, a wealthy merchant. She married Mr. Strang in this city June [illegible] 1906, and four children were born, the youngest, Eugene and Josephine, being twins, 2 years old. In her suit she alleges failure to provide, and answering his charge that she refused to join him in the Imperial Valley, she testified that at that time he did not have the money for her fare or a place for her. She is represented by Attorney John Beardsley.

Attorney Chauncey Gardner, making the fight for Mr. Strang, sought to prove that Mrs. Strang deserted her husband because of her refusal to join him when he was seeking to better himself. The property Mr. Strang wants to be held in trust consists of lots in San Luis Obispo county which he says he gave to his wife. Judge Taft took the matter under submission.

DAMAGE SUIT.

INJURIES PECULIAR.

Mrs. Gertrude E. Griffith asks $25,000 damages from Charles H. er and the Metropolitan Fireproof Building Company, for alleged injuries which were received, according to her complaint filed yesterday, in an unusual manner.

Mrs. Griffith sets up that she is the wife of E. B. Griffith, but is separated from him, because of his desertion. October 25, 1915, she alleges that while walking on Fifth street, the lid doors in the pavement covering the exit for a basement elevator flew up without signal, one of the doors striking her and pushing her Alleged serious complications resulted. Negligence is charged.

CROWDED HIM.

HUSBAND'S COMPLAINT.

William D. Andrew, a piano tuner, alleged he was being crowded too much when he was compelled to cook supper for the children, wash dishes and mend clothes while his wife was out on pleasure bent. This will be one of his reasons why they did not get along well together when he gets on the stand in his wife's divorce suit before Judge Smith tomorrow.

Mrs. Pearl J. Andrew told the court yesterday that Mr. Andrew suggested to her that she get a divorce and marry some other man, the condition being that he live at their house so that he might be with the children. She also refered to the rather startling idea of her husband that it was all right for married people to have congenial companions when they did not get along with each other. Mr. Andrew denied this as well as other allegations of his wife. She charges him with desertion.

MUST ANSWER.

POMONA CASE AGAIN.

Norman Ellis, one of the quartette of young men, who, it is alleged, made [illegible] out of a Pomona bungalow, was given his preliminary hearing before Judge Reeve of the Juvenile Court yesterday. The hearing was behind closed doors at the conclusion of which Norman was held to answer and committed to the County Jail in default of bail.

The other members of the quartette are awaiting trial charged with contributing to the delinquency of two girls. They are M. A. Johnston and Baumgardner. The fourth young man is being sought by Police officers.

[illegible] FALSE ARREST. Alleging that he had been arrested without probable cause, charged with stealing a dog of the value of $40, and subsequently freed when the case was dismissed before Justice King of Santa Monica, Samuel Logan brought yesterday suit against Sam Sachse who swore to the warrant, asking $1000 damages. Damages are demanded to recompense for his pride and independence injured, reputation, character and good name damaged, for humiliation and degradation.

SLANDER SUIT. Declaring that a statement made by Frank F. King in the office room of the Los Angeles Building, June 1, 1915, regarding his reputation, was false and defamatory, Robert Barry sued Mr. King yesterday, demanding $15,000 damages. The alleged slander was uttered in the presence of B. J. Lazar and Harris. Mr. King is alleged to have said that Mr. Barry was not square in his business dealings, and that he was a crook.

TOO MUCH RED TAPE IN CITY BUYING.

COUNCIL PROPOSES TO ADOPT NEW SYSTEM.

Efficiency Commission and Purchasing Department to Introduce Ordinance Simplifying Procedure and Providing More Effective Checks on All Transactions.

The new purchasing ordinance which revises and simplifies the procedure of the city purchasing department will be introduced in the Council tomorrow by Chairman Conwell of the Supply and Efficiency Committee. This ordinance while doing away with a vast amount of red tape, is designed to provide an absolute and definite check on all purchases. This will be done through a provision that any final contract must be approved by the Supplies Committee and the Council, but in minor matters, the committee, unless otherwise instructed by the Council, may approve purchases.

One of the important provisions in the new ordinance will prevent any department or official from incurring unauthorized indebtedness. If the ordinance is adopted, every requisition or contract, before its execution, must ber certified by the City Auditor, who is instructed to refuse certification unless the fund from which the money comes will cover the amount of the purchase or contract.

The ordinance also provides for a salvage division through which the city can sell its worthless material and junk under regulations similar to those for purchasing. At the present time it takes an ordinance to sell a dollar's worth of scrap iron.

The ordinance has been prepared along lines suggested by the Efficiency Commission, and Purchasing Agent Baker.

REGULATION.

OIL MARKETING PROBLEM.

Ways and means to bring about better regulation of the sale of petroleum products in Los Angeles will be discussed at a public hearing in the Council chamber March 23 at 8 p.m. The meeting is called by City Oil Inspector Blackmar, who will discuss the problems encountered by his office in attempting to regulate the business under present ordinances. In addition to regulation of the sale of gasoline, distillate and kindred products, Mr. Blackmar wants an ordinance that will prevent misrepresentation in the sale of lubricating oils. One instance which he cites, is that in which an oil dealer sold a garage manager a quantity of lubricating oil at a cut price, representing that the oil was a certain standard brand. The garage manager spoiled a motor by using the inferior oil. Investigation showed that the oil dealer had not bought any of the brand of oil he represented for a year.

MORE LITIGATION.

TO OUST SUBSTATION.

Residents and property owners in the vicinity of Exposition boulevard and Vermont avenue, who have been demanding the removal of the Pacific Electric transformer station, called on members of the City Council yesterday to enlist their aid in bringing about further prosecution against the railway company in an effort to sustain their contention that the station is a public nuisance. Following the order of the Council that the company remove the station, suit was brought in Police Court against one of the company's employees and this case resulted in an acquittal Friday. Now the property owners propose to ask the City Prosecutor to arrest the "man higher up" and Chairman Roberts of the Public Utilities Committee agreed yesterday to appear with the property owners before the City Prosecutor and ask for complaints. If necessary, Mr. Roberts says, he will for the arrest of the president of the Pacific Electric Railway.

PREPAREDNESS.

POLICE TO HAVE RIFLES.

The Council Finance Committee yesterday approved a request from Chief of Police Snively for an appropriation for the purchase immediately of twenty-four rifles for use in the police department. Chief Snively explained that whenever rifles have been needed for posse work they have been furnished by the individual patrolmen and only a few rifles have been available for emergency use. With the two dozen rifles on hand at the station, he said, there will still be more available. The Chief prefers carbines and, if immediate delivery can be made, this type of gun will be bought.

IBSEN IN FIRST PLACE.

Local Highbrows Pick Norse Poet as Favorite, with Maeterlinck Second Choice, in Casting Vote to Decide the Subject of Cumnock Lecture.

Ibsen is the highbrow's favorite in Los Angeles, with Maeterlinck running second, according to a poll of the literati taken at Cumnock Hall, where Bertha Kunz Baker has been delivering a series of lectures. In order to decide what modern poet she should lecture on at her closing address, next Friday night, Mrs. Baker asked her audience night before last to cast a ballot.

Ibsen was almost unanimously chosen, and she decided to confine her remarks to his expression of poetry in "The Master Builder."

On Wednesday afternoon she will speak on "The Women of Maeterlinck." Mrs. Baker has delivered this lecture in practically every State university in America, and received scores of requests from Maeterlinck admirers to repeat it here.

Mrs. Baker is nationally prominent in educational circles. She has been a member of the faculty of Columbia University and the University of Chicago, and is at present on the teaching force of the Chatauqua Institute at Lake Chatauqua, New York.

She is the author of several works dealing with poetic interpretation and is personally acquainted with a large number of the better known modern poets.

Power Project.

a base rate of 6 cents per kilowatt hour. Mr. Scattergood estimated that on the basis of a cost of $6,500,000 for developing and distributing 37,000 horse power, the city's net profit would be $700,000 annually. Later he made an estimate on a 5-cent base rate and this placed the city's profit at $500,000. Here was a lopping off of $200,000 per year in one adjustment of figures. With the cost estimates increasing, and costs mounting because of procrastination and incompetent management of the construction, the figures may ultimately wipe out any possible profit.

The original proposition of Mr. Scattergood was to develop 74,000 horse power, through the two plants in San Francisquito Canyon. They were estimated to cost $4,494,000. Now the development of power plant No. 1, with a generating capacity of 37,000 horse power, is itself placed at $4,872,000, or $378,000 more than it was proposed should be the cost of the two plants that would furnish the city 74,000 horse power.

NO INCREASE OF POWER.

The situation seems to show that a project that Mr. Scattergood estimated to require an outlay of $6,500,000 now increases to more than $10,000,000, without the increase of a single kilowatt more of electrical energy.

In a statement placed before the State Water Commission of California, dated in this city on July 14, 1915, and signed by President Del Valle of the Public Service Commission and W. B. Mathews, special counsel for the commission, the entire scope of the power project is outlined. This was done in connection with the undertaking to protect the city's power rights on Rush and Levining creeks, in Mono county. The enormous expenditures contemplated in the development of this enterprise are indicated in the following paragraph:

"The plan of the transmission system embraces four three-phase circuits, two on each of two steel tower lines, and the complete power system, as outlined, would deliver at the city 200,000 horse power peak capacity of reliable hydro-electric power at a total cost approximating $22,000,000, including the full cost of the proposed diversion of the Mono Lake watershed."

In another portion of this statement to the water commission is the declaration:

"The portion of the system now being constructed conforms to the plan of the complete system as above outlined, and its actual cost to date has been $120,000 more than it would have been had the city contemplated on the use of the power opportunities along the aqueduct itself."

MATTER OF TAXES.

The matter of taxes is a vital one to the average property owner of Los Angeles. The mounting costs of the power project, and the continuous payment of interest on the two bond issues, while months and years roll along and the project is still uncompleted, can scarcely be viewed with equinimity. The news has just been made public that through the adoption of the joint appraisal figures of all city and county property it is expected there will be an increase in the assessed valuation of property for city taxes that will be at least 40 per cent. The result to the tax payer, who has to help carry the burden of the incompetency shown in handling the building of the power project, is obvious.

BENEFIT ASSOCIATION.

German-American Bank's Organization Enters its Third Year.

Among the various organizations created by corporations in Los Angeles for the benefit of their employees, the Employees' Benefit Association of the German-American Trust and Savings Bank is one of the most widely known. Any employee of the bank may become a member of this association by depositing $10 or more in the treasury, and the investment of these funds is in the care of a board of directors elected annually by the members themselves.

The Benefit Association is now entering upon its third year of work with 60 per cent. of the employees members and a combined capital of $25,000 invested in securities which are legal for trust funds under the laws of the State of California. Dividends are declared annually according to the earnings of the organization. When an employee leaves the bank his account is closed and he ceases to be a member of the association, what interest he has in the organization being returned to him.

Why Does It?

[Pittsburgh Dispatch:] "The last time I went to the theater the play was wretched and the house full. The time before the last the play was excellent and the house empty."

The speaker shrugged, smiled and added:

"Why, when you elevate the stage, does the box office always become depressed?"

Deductions.

WOMAN IN HUNT FOR POISONER.

Handwriting on Candy Box and Paper Wrapping Odd.

Return Address Scrawl Yields Secret to Experts.

Declaring she will herself turn detective and endeavor to locate the person who sent her sister-in-law a box of poisoned candy, Mrs. T. J. Royer of No. 629 North Avenue 63 yesterday pointed out the many clews existing. Mrs. Margaret Hoover, who was to have been the victim of the poison plot and to whom the package was addressed, will assist Mrs. Royer, the District Attorney and the postal authorities in tracing the box of deadly sweets.

Here are the plans Mrs. Royer gives and which she believes will lead the police to the poison fiend:

"The box of candy was addressed to Mrs. D. S. Hoover, corner Sixty-fourth and Park avenues. That address appears on two postal cards and as Mrs. Hoover has never used the address or those initials since coming West, it appears to me only one person in the world would have made use of them.

"The address is in a handwriting that I do not recognize, but in the upper left-hand corner, where the return address should appear, I found an illegible bit of writing that I at once recognized as that of the writer of the post cards and the person whom I suspect.

"The candy was mailed so at to reach Mrs. Hoover January 6 or thereabouts, and that is within a month of the nineteenth anniversary of her wedding.

"In tracing the poisoner I think pains should be taken to locate any arrivals from Ohio at or about the time the candy was mailed in Long Beach. Signatures on hotel registers would leave clews that might be valuable.

WHO SOLD IT?

"Whoever sent the candy gave some thought to the matter. The chocolates did not bear the maker's name or the name of the shop where they were sold.

"I feel this candy can be traced, however, as it is of a kind sold in shops where a Christmas supply is laid in and more attention paid to the box than the contents. The man who sold the candy as late as January would probably remember the transaction.

"Then the paper in which the box was wrapped is a valuable clew. Perhaps not a score of shops in any one State use that particular shade of paper, and it should be an easy thing to trace it from the jobber to the retailer and in this manner locate the sale.

"The person who desired to kill Mrs. Hoover did not write the address; I believe he had a close friend do the writing. It should not be difficult to get specimens of writing of close friends of the person suspected.

"The finger prints that are on the chocolates are of course valuable but a score of persons have handled the candy and it is possible the real criminal did not leave such a trace."

OFFICERS TO CONFER.

Active work in tracing the poisoner will start tomorrow when the postal inspectors and Deputy District Attorney Joos will hold their first conference.

Handwriting experts yesterday deciphered the return address on the box of poisoned candy as that of "Amos Lander." This name is unknown to Mrs. Hoover or Mrs. Royer.

Deputy District Attorney Joos stated yesterday he believed this name nothing more than a blind.

The handwriting on the box Mrs. Hoover stated did not look like that of her husband, from whom she is separated.

Finger Print Expert Minger was given a piece of the poisoned chocolate for the purpose of making a microscopic study of the finger prints on it.

GOES TO GRAND JURY.

Investigation of Alleged Wife-slaying by Former Patrolman.

The grand jury investigation of the killing of Mrs. Mollie Lewis, wife of Samuel Lewis, a former patrolman, will begin tomorrow morning. More than twenty subpoenas were reported served on witnesses yesterday.

Lewis was released from custody by Justice Brown, who held that sufficient evidence had not been introduced at the preliminary examination to hold him to answer to the Superior Court for murder. During the hearing, Deputy Dist.-Atty. Stafford endeavored to show that it was impossible for Mrs. Lewis to have inflicted the wounds on herself in a struggle, as testified to by the defendant.

He also attempted to show that Lewis had made numerous threats against his wife, but this evidence was not admitted.

AUTHORITIES DISAGREE.

Ruling of Gambling Law Will Be Sought in Superior Court.

In face of the decision of Justice King of Santa Monica, who held that "razzle-dazzle" and "26" dice games are not illegal, under the State gambling laws, Deputy Dist.-Atty. Woolwine yesterday announced that beach concessionaires using these games for the disposal of merchandise will be prosecuted. Justice King made his ruling in the case of J. O. Cook, who was arrested on a charge brought by the District Attogney's office.

The matter will be taken to the Superior Court for a ruling, before the county prosecuting officials will admit the legality of the games. A number of concessionaires expressed their intention to re-open the dice shaking schemes in order to get the business of the big crowds who are expected today.

DENIES NECESSITY.

Rival Gas Companies Reaching for Huntington Beach.

The Southern Counties Gas Company on Friday opposed before the State Railroad Commission, the application of the West Coast Gas Company in its application for a certificate of necessity and convenience to carry natural gas to Huntington Beach.

The Southern Counties Gas Company, which has been purchasing portions of the Southern California Edison company's gas properties in Southern California, intends to connect its pipe line with a municipal plant at Huntington Beach, and sell to the city at wholesale.

The West Coast Gas Company testified that it is prepared to obtain a supply of natural gas for Huntington Beach from the Southern California Gas Company's Long Beach or Fullerton line, as it can reach either pipe line.

What Some Cigarettes Contain.

[Chicago Journal:] Prof. Beal, of the University of Illinois, has analysed many brands of cigarettes and discovers them to be adulterated mostly with hay, a weed to which grasshoppers are addicted. A few samples he discovered to have been adulterated with nicotine. Those containing nicotine should obviously be suppressed in the interests of cigars and pipe tobacco, which ought to have a monopoly on the drug.

Reliable Laxative Relieved This Baby

Child was Badly Constipated Until Mother Tried Simple Remedy.

In spite of every care and attention to diet, children are very apt to become constipated, a condition responsible for many ills in after life unless promptly relieved.

Mrs. C. W. Wilson, of Shelbyville, Tenn., had trouble with her baby boy, Woodrow, until she heard of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. She writes: "I can safely say Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is the best remedy of its kind on earth. It acts so gently and yet so surely. Little Woodrow was very badly constipated and we could find nothing that gave relief until we tried your Syrup Pepsin, which gave immediate relief."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a compound of simple laxative herbs, free from opiates or narcotic drugs, mild in action, positive in effect and pleasant to the taste. It has been prescribed by Dr. Caldwell for more than a quarter of a century and can now be had for fifty cents a bottle in any well-stocked drug store. A trial bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can be obtained free of charge, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington street, Monticello, Illinois.

FOR A WOMAN DEPUTY.

Sheriff Sends Petition to Supervisors for Permission to Make Appointment to His Staff, in Response to Request Signed by Women Interested in Social Work.

Sheriff Cline yesterday filed a petition with the Board of Supervisors requesting that he be permitted to appoint a woman deputy sheriff. The action, he stated, was taken because of the insistence of a number of prominent local women, who pointed to the excellent work done by women connected with the city police department.

The petition was accompanied by the request signed by about twenty women, among them Mrs. Clara Shortridge Foltz, Mrs. O. P. Clark, Mrs. E. R. Brainerd and Mrs. Lewis R. Works. The Sheriff said he had no one in mind for the place, but there are many women able to perform the work.

WRIT IS GRANTED.

Miss Clayburgh Wins a Point in Fight Against Extradition.

The petition for a writ of habeas corpus in behalf of Isabel Clayburgh, wanted in Seattle for an alleged "badger" game, was allowed by United States District Court Judge Trippet, yesterday and was made returnable next Wednesday. Miss Clayburgh was represented by Earl Rogers and the State by Deputy District Attorney Selph.

It was claimed on the part of the petitioner that the complaint sworn to by Frank P. Brewer, in Kings county, Wash., was not sufficient to constitute a crime, and that the overt act constituting the alleged conspiracy, participated in by Louis P. Sichel, Lillian Peterson and the petitioner, on April 15, 1915, had not been fully and properly set out.

Mr. Selph opposed the technical objections, but it was agreed that the whole subject would be thoroughly gone into when the argument on the sufficiency of the petition should take place before the court this week.

DIES NEARING HOME.

Former Matron of County Hospital Expires at Point Fermin.

Taken suddenly ill on the trail between Point Fermin and White's Point, Mrs. Elizabeth Moore, aged 65 years, dropped dead Friday evening almost directly in front of the home of her daughter, Mrs. Burt Eike. Mrs. Moore, who was formerly the matron at the Los Angeles County Hospital, was walking to her home at White's Point. She felt the fatal illness, and endeavored to reach the home of her daughter, but death defeated the effort. Heart failure is given as the cause of death. The funeral arrangements have not been announced.

TREAT ALL ALIKE.

Pacific Electric Employees Ask Regulation of Auto Busses.

In a resolution passed yesterday at a meeting of the Pacific Electric Railway Agents' Association, members of that organization outlined plans for a campaign to meet the competition of motor trucks and jitney busses.

The resolution recited competition against the Pacific Electric "has become acute and the revenues of the company are being greatly decreased."

It was stated that members of the association will urge city and county officials to pass ordinances that will require motor trucks and busses to give regular service, charge uniform rates for transportation, and pay the city and county or State 5 1-4 cents on each dollar of revenue received for transportation of passengers and freight. A copy of the resolution was sent to the Pacific Electric officials.

Proved the Diagnosis.

[Washington Star:] Chancellor Von Bethmann-Hollweg's recent declaration in the Reichstag that Germany is a peaceful nation, fighting a defensive war against savage aggressors, led Capt. W. Finch of the Arabic to say:

"Germany peaceful, eh? Her war a purely defensive one! Well, that reminds me of the chap who had his bumps examined by a phrenologist.

" 'From your bumps,' the phrenologist said, 'I should say you were a very quarrelsome person.'

" 'Well, you're a liar, see?' the chap answered, 'and if you say it again I'll smash your coco.' "

Great American Desert.

[Chicago News:] "I was reading today in the newspaper of the great American desert; what is the great American desert?" asked the lady at the head of the table.

"Why, I believe the great American desert is prunes," replied the thin boarder feelingly.

Easy Way to Remove Freckles and Eruptions

Some women have skin of such texture they occasionally are annoyed by the sudden appearance of freckles, slight eruptions or fine lines. March winds usually play havoc with skins of that kind. In such cases if one will procure an ounce of common mercolized wax at any drug store, apply a little of it before retiring, like cold cream, she can easily overcome the trouble. When the wax is washed off next morning, flaky skin particles come with it. The entire outer cuticle is removed in this way in a week or so, with all its defects. No bleach could so effectually remove freckles or blemishes. The new surface is smooth, clear, fresh looking. No pain or inconvenience accompanies this simple treatment.

In case of wrinkles, which sink beneath the outer skin, a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pint witch hazel, makes a face bath which is wonderfully effective.

WOMEN'S WORK AND WOMEN'S CLUBS

BY DOROTHY B. JOHNSTON.

WITH three big conventions looming on the horizon of clubdom, to say nothing of the impending elections, interest is at a high pitch locally, in the State and General Federation.

On Tuesday morning, at the Hollywood Woman's Clubhouse, the fifteenth annual convention of the Los Angeles District, C.F.W.C. will open at 9:30 o'clock for a four-days' busy session.

The Hollywood hostesses are rapidly perfecting their plans for the entertainment of the delegates and visiting clubwomen, and, to meet the material needs of those attending the sessions, cafeteria luncheons are to be served each day in the spacious diningroom. This in itself is quite an innovation. For dinners, the committee have secured the rate of $1 at Hotel Hollywood, 50 cents at the Jack o' Lantern and 35 and 50 cents at Graham's. Cars (5 cent fare) leave the fourth street station every five minutes, those marked Gardner Junction, Laurel Canyon and Santa Monica passing the clubhouse at No. 7078 Hollywood boulevard. Tea will be served in the club diningroom at the close of the afternoon sessions, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, and an informal club banquet in honor of clubwomen and "Club Husbands" will be held at 7:30 o'clock Wednesday evening at Hotel Hollywood. Tickets for the latter are $1 and should be secured at the earliest possible date through Mrs. Cason, telephone Hollywood 78. All unpaid-for tickets are to be canceled after Tuesday noon.

The checkroom will be open for the use of guests, and each Hollywood club member stands ready to assist the Courtesy Committee in every possible way. The Hollywood ladies are past masters in the art of entertaining, and in so far as the hostess club is concerned, we are assured one of the happiest conventions in the annals of the district.

At the close of Tuesday evening's programme the Hollywood Club will give a reception in honor of the officers, delegates and visiting clubwomen. Wednesday afternoon at 4:15 o'clock a twilight musicale will be given under the direction of Mrs. Bessie Bartlett-Frankel, curator of music. Friday afternoon the Outing Committee of the hostess club will take the guests of the convention for an automobile ride which, starting from the clubhouse, will include west Hollywood, Vermont avenue, Wilshire boulevard, Beverly Hills and Laurel Canyon. The Laurel Canyon Woman's Club will keep open house and serve afternoon tea. The Hollywood Board of Trade is assisting the Outing Committee, and all women wishing to avail themselves of the opportunity to "see Hollywood first," are asked to register with Mrs. L. B. Wood, telephone 57592, not later than Thursday noon.

There will be an exhibition of books on the immigrant and the literature of Europe, arranged by Mrs. Eleanor Jones and Mrs. Anstruther Davidson. Exhibits of the Literature, Music, Forestry, and Reciprocity departments will be found upstairs as well as an exhibit of arts and crafts directed by Mrs. Peter Ferguson, Mrs. R. M. Pogson and Mrs. Maud Davis Baker. The paintings in the auditorium are by the following artists: William Swift Daniell, Henrietta Shore, Helen B. Balfour, Orin White, Annie Pogson, R. A. Kirkham, F. W. Caprien, Francisco Cornego, Maurice Braun, Auna Hills and L. Prest Ferguson.

The following women will gladly furnish any desired information: General chairman, Miss Jessica Laurence, Holly 208; platform chairman, Mrs. Bessie Bartlett-Frankel, 57660; ushers chairman, Mrs. H. W. Cushman, 579658; pages chairman, Mrs. F. L. Hemming, 59675; publicity chairman, Mrs. J. F. Redhead, 57306; timekeeper chairman, Mrs. J. W. Stoddart, 59590; decoration chairman, Mrs. George Melville, 57597; exhibits chairman, Mrs. Peter Ferguson, 57466; information and hotels, Mrs. C. H. Connard, 59454; hospitality, Mrs. George K. Patterson, Holly 274; banquet, Mrs. E. W. Cason, Holly 78; afternoon tea, Mrs. Seward Cole, 59021; courtesies, Mrs. C. H. Lippincott, 59140; registration, Mrs. J. J. Steadman, 57194; outing, Mrs. W. C. Anderson, 579684; checkroom, Mrs. A. L. Bartlett, 57675; local badge, Mrs. John P. Gardner, Holly 1895.

There is nothing new in the election contest. Every one admits the contest lies in the election of a vice-president. Mrs. Lloyd Harmer, for president, Mrs. Lloyd Harmon, for recording secretary; Mrs. W. E. Goodyear, treasurer; Mrs. Harry Slater, member of the State Nominating Committee and Mrs. Charles Wiley, member of the State Credentials Committee, will be chosen as a matter of course, their names alone being proposed on the sample ballot. But the friends of Mrs. Emma L. Reed, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones and Mrs. W. A. Galentine are sparing no time nor arguments in advancing the efficiency of their favorite candidates for vice-president. Mrs. Reed has been indorsed by the Press Club, the Friday Morning Club and others, and a large number of outside clubs are indorsing Mrs. Jones, with others working as hard for Mrs. Galentine. For corresponding secretary Mrs. A. B. Brewer and Mrs. C. S. Bateman are both strong candidates. Mrs. C. G. Robinson, for re-election, and Mrs. E. P. Foster are up for auditor.

Mrs. Reed and Mrs. Jones are both good politicians. From that standpoint the contest is being watched with genuine interest.

P.-T.A. Election.

An interesting condition exists in the Parent-Teacher Association election. Mrs. C. C. Noble and Mrs. Elizabeth McManus polled nearly an equal number of votes in the nomination strength, the latter exceeding Mrs. Noble by fifteen majority. And every member admits it possible to elect either, with hardly a vote to spare.

Hollywood Woman's Club.

Now that Mrs. Edward Winterer, the able president of the Hollywood Woman's Club, has given out her refusal to accept the office again this year, Mrs. Rollin B. Lane's election seems assured. There is an effort to place Mrs. Charles Richmond's name for the office. Mentioned with her for first vice-president is Mrs. Ingle Carpenter. Mrs. Eleanor Jones is favorably spoken of for some office, also.

On the Lane ticket are Mrs. Clyde Eastman, first vice-president; Mrs. G. Witherspoon, second vice-president; Mrs. Cushman, recording secretary; Miss Jessica Lawrence, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Cassius Smith, treasurer; for the board of directors, Mrs. J. F. Kent, a holdover; Mrs. George Melville, Mrs. Frank Baum, Mrs. Eastman, a holdover, and Mrs. J. W. Morgan.

Friday Morning Club.

In the Friday Morning Club, one constantly hears Mrs. Edward Rankin Brainerd's name mentioned for president. She is the vice-president of the club, also president of the Woman's City Club, which prohibits a second term for their officers. In this case, they seem willing to forego the rules this year and re-elect Mrs. Brainerd for the second year. She will not consent. Mrs. Frank Garrett and Mrs. Lewis Works are making the run for the presidency of the Woman's City Club. Dr. M. Evangeline Jordon as director is the only addition to the proposed officers not before mentioned. Mrs. Clarence Van Graham's election as first vice-president seems assured.

Members will return from New York as they may severally desire.

Those desiring to make the trip will please communicate with Mrs. John C. Lynch, chairman transportation for the north, No. 1845 University avenue, Berkeley, or with Mrs. M. E. Johnson, chairman transportation for the south, No. 4322 North Griffin avenue, Los Angeles. A railroad representative will be detailed to call on you, make reservations and furnish complete details.

After twenty-six years the federation returns to the city of its birth—after twenty-six years of phenomenal growth and activities.

Inasmuch as California has a president to elect in the nomination of Mrs. Josiah Evans Cowles of Los Angeles, the State is planning to send a banner delegation to the eastern metropolis. Los Angeles, itself, hopes to have the majority of women ready to go and work for our own candidate.

State Convention Call.

The California Federation of Women's Clubs has just issued the call for the fifteenth annual convention at Del Monte, as follows:

The fifteenth annual convention of the California Federation of Women's Clubs will be held at Del Monte April 25, 26, 27, 28, 29 and 30, by invitation of the federated clubs of Pacific Grove and the Hotel Del Monte.

We earnestly request all clubs to send full delegations. As the federation grows stronger with the years, its influence becomes of greater import in our community. It is eminently desirable that the entire voting strength of its membership participate in the discussion of present and future plans.

All meetings will be held in the Hotel Del Monte and are open to the public.

The Committee on Standing Rules will present a number of amendments to the constitution, which will, if adopted, serve to simplify the work of the federation.

Representation—Each club shall be entitled to representation at the annual convention by the president or her appointee, and one delegate; clubs consisting of 100 members, by the president and two delegates, and one additional delegate for each additional hundred members. No delegate shall represent more than one club. The secretary of each club shall certify one week before the annual meeting the names of the delegates and alternates from the club to the chairman of credentials, Mrs. J. H. Andresen, No. 227 Church street, Salinas. The delegates from clubs failing to pay their annual dues shall not be seated at the convention.

Credential Committee—The credential cards inclosed must be presented to the Credential Committee, which will be in session at the Hotel Del Monte at 9 o'clock Tuesday, April 25; Mrs. J. H. Andresen, chairman.

Resolutions—All resolutions offered for the consideration of the federation must be presented in writing with the indorsement of the delegates of at least one federated club. Resolutions must be in the hands of the committee not later than the second day of the convention. Mrs. A. J. Lawton, No. 1104 French street, Santa Ana, chairman.

Hotel Rates — Hotel Del Monte (American plan:) Single rooms without bath, $3.50 to $4.50 per day; two in room without bath, $7 to $8 per day; one in room with bath, $4.50 to $5 per day; two in room with bath, $8 to $9 per day. Pacific Grove Hotel (including lunch and dinner,) at Hotel Del Monte: One in room, no bath, $3.25 per day; two in room, no bath, $6 per day; one in room, with bath, $4 per day; two in room, with bath, $7 per day.

Train Rates — The following railways will give special rates of one and one-third fares, on the certificate plan, provided there are fifty delegates holding receipt certificates: Santa Fe, Northwestern Pacific, Salt Lake, Western Pacific and Southern Pacific.

Receipt certificates must show the name of the meeting, be signed by the secretary of the convention and be verified, officially signed and stamped by the joint agent, B. F. Wright, agent Southern Pacific Company, Del Monte, Cal., before ticket agents will be empowered to honor the certificates for one-way return-trip tickets at one-third fare.

Please impress upon your delegates the necessity of their complying strictly with the conditions outlined above. If, through any fault of their own, they are unable to receive the benefit of the reduced rate, railway agents are in no position to make adjustment through refunds.

Be sure to take a receipt certificate when you purchase your going ticket.

Programme — Early-morning conferences will be held. The work of the social and industrial conditions and educational departments will be specifically featured.

Tuesday afternoon's programme will be an open forum. All present are invited to participate in the discussions on "Efficiency of the Federation—the Unit of the Federation, the Unit of the Departments."

A feature of the work of the literature and music departments will be a Shakespearean pageant, in which all club women present will participate.

The State chairman of music, Mrs. Walter Longbotham, will introduce congregational singing.

Noted speakers of national and State reputation will give addresses on the vital topics of federation.

Social Features—As the convention will be held in the environs of one of the most interesting and historical parts of California, the history and landmarks department will arrange for guides to point out historic buildings and other points of interest during the trip around the Seventeen-mile drive. The local board has planned for this auto ride on Friday.

He claimed that the twenty-one Franciscan missions were "the greatest commercial enterprise down to this day," aside from their religious significance.

A musical programme preceded the address, in which Miss Ethel Saunders sang two of Kate Vannah's songs.

The Whittier Club.

Wednesday afternoon was [illegible] marks Day" at the Whittier Woman's Club, with a programme as interesting as varied. Mrs. Edith B. [illegible]soll of the art department of the Whittier High School was in charge and had arranged to draw largely on local talent to make the event a red letter day for the club. Taking the text largely from an early "[illegible]" of Whittier's first newspaper, the "raison d'etre" of Whittier and its pioneer institutions was clearly brought out. The vision of the founders, the faith of the pioneers and their solid work in the early days as shown in church, school and public and perhaps in no other one institution more than in Whittier College.

Mrs. H. W. R. Strong, a pioneer before the founding of the city, spoke to the club. Mrs. Strong has always been deeply interested in the preservation of local landmarks, especially in the preservation of the Don Pio Pico home. A pleasing musical programme was furnished by students of various Whittier schools.

Leitch; Ezra Williams, Mrs. [illegible] E. Streeter; Peter, Mrs. [illegible] Bohlander; Inez, Miss Ely; Mis' El[illegible]mira Moran, Mrs. C. M. Beecher; Mis' Carrie Trot, Miss Elma Snyder; Miss [illegible] Ellsworth, Mrs. John Bundy. Delicious refreshments were served.

Hollywood Woman's Club.

The Wednesday programme was in charge of the Music Section, and was a repetition of an excellent programme given in that section in December. The story of the Russian opera "Boris Godounov" (Moussorgsky) was told by Miss Jessica Lawrence, and musical selections were played by Mrs. Kenneth Bissell. This section, under the leadership of Bessie Bartlett Frankel, has over sixty members and has been the means of drawing many new members into the club. On May 24, a musical luncheon will be given by this section, which promises to be one of "the" events of the year. Members of the section and their friends are welcome. Tickets [illegible] cents. Joseph Conrad and his books were the subject of discussion at the literary section, which met at [illegible] o'clock, leader Mrs. Gustave [illegible]. Mrs. Mead gave an interesting talk about his short stories, "The [illegible] of Malata," and "Within The Tides" [illegible]. Dreaded An Operation More Than Anything Tried Fruitola and Traxo and Has Never Since Been Troubled with Gall-stones.

Mrs. Mary Franse

Mrs. Mary E. Franse, whose address is West Point, Neb., Box 411, has writen to the Pinus laboratories a very strong endorsement of Fruitola and Traxo. In her letter, Mrs. Franse says:. "About ten years ago I was about to undergo an operation for gall-stones when I heard of your medicine. Dreading an operation above everything, I determined to try Fruitola and Traxo and have never been sorry I did so, as I have never been troubled with gall-tones since."

Fruitola is a powerful lubricant for the intestinal organs, and one dose is usually sufficient to give ample evidence of its efficacy. It softens the congested masses, disintegrates the hardened particles that occasion so much suffering, and expels the accumulated waste to the great relief of the patient. Following a dose of Fruitola, Traxo should be taken three or four times a day in order to rebuild and restore the system that has been weakened and run down by constant suffering. It is a splendid tonic, acting on the liver and stomach most beneficially.

Fruitola and Traxo are prepared in the Pinus laboratories at Monticello, Ill., and arrangements have been made to supply them through representative druggists.

A booklet of special interest to sufferers from stomach troubles can be obtained by writing the Pinus Laboratories at Monticello, Ill.

give some aesthetic dancing. Mrs. T. Hickox is the guiding spirit of the club which has given many good dramatic presentations in the two years since it was formed.

Southern District C.F.W.O.

The series of club conferences inaugurated by Mrs. A. J. Lawton, president of the Southern District, comprising five counties, in the interest of educational work as outlined by the State Federation, are proving interesting and effective.

The first was held at El Centro February 1 in connection with the sixth annual convention, the second at Upland February 21, and the third at Ventura, March 11.

The three departments of education, industrial, and social conditions, are carrying the work. The first is the establishment of night schools for the foreign population, in connection with the America First movement. The other departments are making community surveys on social conditions generally. The county life department is interesting itself on the work in county schools, in farm bureaus and the rural districts to foster agricultural interests.

Mrs. Lawton has spoken before clubs during the past few weeks, at Hemet, Riverside, Chino, Banning and Winchester, at each of which she advocated Mrs. Evan's candidacy for General Federation president, in addition to her own campaign.

For Mrs. Tyler.

A distinctly democratic affair will be the informal reception and tea arranged for Tuesday for Mrs. W. C. Tyler, woman of the Tenth Congressional District, who is the guest of the district, who will represent it in the forthcoming convention at St. Louis in June. At this function the following programme will be given: Miss Buena Miller of Fresno will read "The Citizeness of Dickens's Time" and other numbers. Mrs. Gertrude Powell Kuykendall, a soloist, will sing. Miss Neva Chilberg will give violin solos, and Mrs. Force Parker, president of the Democratic League, will introduce Mrs. Tyler in a short talk. The speaker of the day will address the guests on citizenship.

The Wednesday Morning Club.

This club intends holding a series of Reciprocity Days this year and the first took place last Wednesday, a special St. Patrick's Day luncheon, with Mrs. Ella J. Michael as hostess, was provided.

The table for visiting presidents was presided over by Mrs. W. E. Bush, the club president, the visitors including Mrs. J. N. Gillis of Alhambra, Mrs. H. E. Bartlett of Glendale, Mrs. E. B. Hannon, Mrs. R. Martin, Mrs. A. H. Myott, Mrs. F. E. Trask, Mrs. S. B. Phelps, Mrs. de Mund, and Mrs. Cynthia Westover Alden.

In the books and conversation section, visitors gave three minute talks and greetings from their respective clubs.

Mrs. Alden made an appeal for blind babies and asked the support of the club for a bill now pending in the Legislature.

Lillian Burkardt Goldsmith gave the programme of the day, taking Irish literature past and present for her theme, concluding with an appropriate toast to Erin.

Jewish Mothers Alliance.

Three hundred women were present at the quarterly meeting of the Jewish Mothers Alliance held in The Times Building last Wednesday when Rabbi Magnin and Rev. Dr. Meyers were the chief speakers. The singing of a psalm by Mrs. Suken and H. S. Miller proved a musical treat which was greatly eulogized.

Ruskin Art Club.

Mrs. O. F. Brant and Mrs. W. B. Brown had the Ruskin Art Club programme in charge this week. They secured as speaker of the morning Stephen K. Szymanowski, author and historian.

Mr. Szymanowski extoled Gogol as the creator of real Russian life in literature, and considers his play, "Revizor," the most beautiful comedy ever written. The rise of serfdom and of the revolutionary movement in Russia were graphically described by Mr. Szymanowski.

Nihilism was the outgrowth of the noble thought of the highest born thinkers. Poets, writers, students, teachers, all animated by the noblest tendencies, went out among the masses to teach and awaken them to a sense of their manhood. The growth of a fitting recognition of their own worth is slow, partly owing to the great extent of Russian territory. A strict surveillance on all borders prohibits anything not in harmony with Russian governmental ideas from entering the country. However, a true conception of freedom and of a constitutional government is gradually arising.

Next week the land and the peasantry and the Jew in Russia will be the subjects under discussion.

Los Angeles Million Club.

The Los Angeles Million Club's Wednesday noon-day luncheons are proving a great success. Last time over fifty reservations were made and many business men and women came in on their lunch hour to hear Dr. J. Whitcomb Brougher speak on "The "Lopsided Citizenship." Next Wednesday at No. 211 South Broadway Thomas Lee Woolwine will talk on "The Work of the District Attorney's Office." Miss Ruth May Shaffner will have charge of the musical programme. The public is invited.

Mrs. Baker on the Poets.

The interest that has been taken by local club women in the lectures by Bertha Kunz Baker of New York City presages a large attendance at the address on "The Women of Maeterlinck" which will take place at Cumnock Hall on Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. The fact that Mrs. Baker is intimately acquainted with a large number of the living poets and has made a life study of their works should make the lecture an interesting one.

Highland Park Ebell.

The Civics Committee of the Highland Park Ebell have arranged a fine programme for Tuesday. Miss Edith Hodgkins, chairman of the literacy campaign, will give a talk on the plan of work in this State, and Edward Berwick, vice-president of the peace conference at The Hague, will lecture on the topic, "Two Successful American Models for Europe's Imitation." After the noon basket lunch, the afternoon will be spent in the regular sewing work.

The Ramblers have in prospect a trip on Wednesday, when Mrs. Christopher Gordon has invited the section to be her house guests at that picturesque spot, "La Roca."

The Friday Morning Club.

The music conference, Mrs. James Ogilvie in charge, met Tuesday to consider "The Pianoforte and Its Precursors." Mrs. Rafael Durfee told of the instruments immediately preceding the piano. Mrs. Demond told about the piano itself, developing especially the subject of overtones. Mrs. Abramson, Mrs. Harriette Smith and Miss Virginia Twigg also took part in the discussion.

Twelve members of the society sang the madrigal "Summer is Icumen In" and Miss Cronemiller gave illustrations of music for the Virginal.

Mrs. E.S. Peterson, who had the current topics, told of the efforts throughout the country to develop a more general interest in music. One of the interesting things she mentioned was the police chorus of New York City, organized recently. The chorus is limited to 100 and there are already fifty on the waiting list. The men are going to sing in concert, and their aim is to present a programme that will rank with other singing societies in New York City.

Here is the week's programme:

Tuesday, March 21, 2:30, Drama conference, "The Train of the Torch," Paul Hervieu, read by Sarah Truax. Friday, March 24, 10:30, "The Scientific Study of Delinquency," J. Harold Williams; "Delinquency in Relation to the Juvenile Court," Ernest B. Hoag, M.D.

Delta Gamma.

Over forty alumnae of Delta Gamma banqueted at the California Club Saturday evening in celebration of the anniversary of the sorority's founding.

Miss Marguerite Smith of Colorado was toastmastress and called for toasts according to a clever plan of Mother Goose rhymes. The following women responded: Miss Dorothy Fish of the University of California, Miss Catherine Cole of the University of Colorado, Dr. Lillian Ray of Stanford, Miss Marion Kappes of Northwestern and Miss Bertha Rose of the University of Southern California.

An All-day Session.

The Echo Park Mothers' Club had an all-day session on Friday of last week, when Mrs. E. K. Foster was the chief speaker of the day, taking the vital subject of "Child Legislation" for her subject, especially as it affects the newsboys of the city. A musical programme was also enjoyed.

On Thursday Dr. W. Curtis Brigham gave an address on "Posture and Diet and Its Effect on the Child."

The club will attend the federation meeting at Hollywood this week.

City Teachers.

The Los Angeles City Teachers selected their delegates for the convention at Hollywood this week, at their meeting March 13. They will be represented by the Misses Julia Dwire, Nancy Fallis, Ethel Drew, Elizabeth Blend, Marie Mirnin and Matilda Pfaffman.

An open meeting for all teachers interested in literacy work will be held tomorrow (March 21) at 4 p.m., conducted by Miss Ethel Richardson, Miss Blanch Vance presiding.

John Kendrick Bangs is to be secured for a lecture in the near future before this club.

A university extension course, under Dr. Aurelia Reinhardt, has also been decided upon for the fall.

Miss Anna K. Hallock was elected delegate to the teachers' clubs' convention which will be held at Berkeley April 17-20.

South Side Ebell.

Mrs. Ralph Klages, chairman of the music section of the South Side Ebell, gave a study of the opera "Faust" at last Thursday's session, those taking part being Mrs. Idell H. Moye, Mrs. Agnes Osborne, Miss Sophie Paunier and Lyon Coe, the latter giving a splendid rendition of Mephistopheles.

Two hundred members attended the monthly luncheon which honored St. Patrick's Day on this occasion.

COUNTY TO ASSUME ROLE OF GUARDIAN.

TO HOLD SMALD ESTATE FOR MOTHER AND SON.

Woman Turns Over Property on Condition She be Provided for During Her Remaining Few Days and Crippled Boy be Cared for and Educated Until His Majority.

For the first time in its history Los Angeles county will become the trustee of private property and handle its disposition for the benefit of the individuals involved. The matter was finally decided on as to legality by County Counsel Hill and approved by Superior Judge Reeve yesterday.

The poor health of Mrs. Mamie B. Sites and inability of her young son, Leroy Gibson, to properly handle her affairs makes the action necessary. Leroy, a one-armed boy of 15 years, became a ward of the Juvenile Court when his mother no longer could properly care for him.

Mrs. Sites resided at Manhattan Beach. Realizing that her time on earth would be short, she made a proposition to turn over her property to the county, and in return receive care from the county not only for herself, but for her boy until he reaches his majority.

Probation Officer Dunlap carefully investigated and reported to County Counsel Hill that Mrs. Sites has four lots near Belvedere, free and unencumbered, worth approximately $1000. It was agreed the county should take over this property, using it for school purposes or disposing of it to best advantage whenever it became necessary.

Mrs. Sites will go to the County Hospital to remain there as long as she lives, under the best possible care and treatment. Her son is to be sent to school until he is of age. During the next six years he is to be taught a trade or profession which will enable him to support himself, despite his physical disability. He is to receive not only his education, but his board, clothing and other necessities, until he arrives at his majority.

At that time, according to the agreement, he is to receive any residue which may remain from the small estate intrusted to the county. The actual work of the trusteeship on the part of the county is to be looked after by the probation department, according to present plans.

TACTICS FAIL.

Prisoner Vainly Attempts to Gain Advantage of Technical Rule.

John L. Kelly, alias John King, "Blackie" Kelly and other names, did not secure his freedom, as anticipated, when he refused to agree to a postponement of his preliminary hearing. He was brought before Justice Forbes yesterday morning and Deputy District Attorney Heinecke asked that he be given more time to secure additional evidence against the defendant. To this the latter objected strenuously.

The prosecutor then informed the court of the evidence in his possession, covering the minor burglary charge in which Kelly was implicated, and stated that numerous more serious charges would be brought against the man. As a result, Justice Forbes bound Kelly over to the Superior Court, much to his surprise and disappointment. He is in the County Jail in default of $2500 bail.

Anniversary.

IN FOUNDER'S MEMORY.

Foshay Lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood, Named for Late Head of the Organization, is Instituted with a Charter Membership of Nearly a Hundred.

With a charter membership of nearly one hundred, the Foshay Lodge of the Fraternal Brotherhood, was ushered into existence Friday evening, on the twentieth anniversary of the birth of the Brotherhood. The lodge was named in honor of the late James A. Foshay, the originator of the Brotherhood, the Senior Past President, and holder of certificate No. 1. Mr. Foshay was also superintendent of the Brotherhood for eight years. The new lodge will carry out many of the ideas that originated with Mr. Foshay.

Judge J. W. Summerfield spoke feelingly last evening on the life and character of Mr. Foshay. In addition there were musical selections by the Foshay orchestra, Foshay male quartette, a reading by Miss Schoch. Mrs. Foshay, widow of the founder of the order, was introduced to the large assemblage by President Land of the Foshay Lodge, and was warmly welcomed. The Ellis Club attended in a body and the charter was presented to the lodge by Former Mayor Snyder, a member of Lodge No. 1. Fancy drills were given by the uniformed members of several lodges, and an exceptionally fine drill was done by a team from Lodge No. 1.

SEARCH IS VAIN.

No Trace of Lost Eastern Children in Local Gypsy Camps.

No unaccounted for children were found by the posse of deputy sheriffs, who searched every gypsy caravan in this part of the State, in the hope of finding Robert Allen Striker of Brooklyn, and Jones Douglas Glass of Jersey City, two small boys, whose relatives have offered large rewards for their return.

The local officers were notified of the nation-wide search for the youngsters by San Francisco authorities, who suggested that they might be with one or other of the roving bands reported in this section. Headed by Deputy Sheriff Lyons, the officers visited the camps at San Fernando, Roscoe and Whittier, as well as one at the southwest edge of the city.

They found many children of all ages in each of the rendezvous, some of them apparently Americans. The gypsies were able, however, to show the birth record of each child and prove their parentage.

Open Cut Vote.

turn them over to the City Council just before the count," said Mr. Wilde yesterday evening. "All who write asking that their votes be changed should give their assessment numbers as written on the City Council's letters which accompanied the post cards. If these letters have been lost, they may ascertain their numbers by inquiring at the Assessment Bureau."

The written and signed statement of the law in assessment matters under the amended 1913 act, as given by Deputy City Attorney James and photographically reproduced in yesterday's Times, is the biggest bomb that has yet been thrown into the opposition camp, demolishing, as it does, an eleventh-hour misstatement that threatened to frighten a large number of the open cut advocates into voting against the plan. Everyone in the assessment district was talking about it all day and indignation against the opposition's methods was general.

ONE RULE FOR ALL.

Improvement Association Discusses Age Limit in Civil Service.

The rule of the Civil Service Commission, which bars persons more than 50 years of age from taking the civil service examination, caused that body to become the target for some heated remarks Friday night at a meeting of the Federated Improvement Association in Burbank Hall.

Robert T. Hale, declaring that if the average citizen becomes unfit to successfully fill a municipal civil service position after his fiftieth birthday, there should be some provision made to automatically prevent "similar aged incompetents" from occupying offices of trust and responsibility in the administration of municipal affairs, introduced a resolution to declare ineligible candidates for the office of Mayor, Councilman or Civil Service Commissioner men who have passed their fiftieth year. After discussion the resolution was referred to the Committee on Resolutions, which is expected to present the matter at the next meeting.

A feature of the meeting was a discussion of the proposed Bunker Hill cut, by Lawrence Holmes, who outlined the many advantages to the city which will result with the opening up of that territory. Following his address, which was heartily applauded, Councilman John Topham spoke briefly about the cut and made a few remarks in favor of the East Ninth-street viaduct plan.

BANKER CONVALESCING.

F. M. Douglas, vice-president of the Home Savings Bank, who underwent a slight operation at the Sister's Hospital, is convalescing and the doctors speak encouragingly of his rapid recovery. Mr. Douglas says, "I'll be back on the job again in a couple of weeks.' His many friends will be glad to learn of his improving condition.

One Need in Tuberculosis

is careful attention to hygienic living and proper diet. Science is agreed that fresh air, rest and avoidance of food excesses constitute the most effective non-medical treatment in this widespread disease.

Often, however, these measures need supplementing by proper medication. The system lacks sufficient resistance to overcome the attack, and something must be done to assist in upbuilding the patient's strength.

In many cases of this sort Eckman's Alterative has been used with marked success. Its efficacy in this disease has borne fruit in a record of numerous apparent recoveries, and where a tonic is indicated, it has produced most beneficial results.

Since it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try.

Just Try This When Hairy Growths Appear

(Modes of Today)

A smooth, hairless skin always follows the use of a paste made by mixing some water with plain powdered delatone. This paste is applied to the hairy surface 2 or 3 minutes, then rubbed off and the skin washed, when every trace of hair will have vanished. No pain or discomfort attends the use of the delatone paste, but caution should be exercised to be sure that you get real delatone.

POET OFFERS BRIBE TO COUNTY BOARD.

FOR FAVOR WILD SING THEIR FAME IN VERSE.

Justice of the Peace at Roosevelt, in Return for a Fire Insurance Policy, Promises to Become Laureate of the Supervisors and Sends Samples of His Art.

Poetry as a bribe has been offered the Board of Supervisors and may be accepted. John Munz, Justice of the Peace at Roosevelt, also purveyor of insurance, has written the board requesting to be permitted a renewal of the fire insurance policy on the Detention Home, and as return for the favor promises to write verse for the members.

"You remember, three years ago I had to make, in return for the favor, three poems. That was hard work, but if you give me the policy again I will make you another poem, and the more property you give me to insure the better the poem will be," writes Munz. "I will work hard to make a good poem for you; what you have achieved as Supervisors; what you have done that you are proud of. The following verse is about the old colleagues who served with Mr. Pridham and who are no longer there.

"Capt. Manning, Uncle George and Mr. Butler,
Eldridge, Nellis and McCabe, too,
Though there are no better men than they,
The storm winds had them blown away."

The poet of Elizabeth Lake called attention also to the poem adorning his letter head. It rides above a view of breakers dashing against rocky heights on which the American and the Swiss flags float. This little gem is considered, by its author, the acme of patriotism. It follows:

"High floats the flag, the breakers roar,
Hurrah! Hurrah! Hurrah!!
And I stand here upon the shore,
Upon the shore, today."

Whether the poetry should be considered in the nature of bribe will be decided by Deputy County Counsel Murphy, according to the present intention of the board members, who have read the letter since it was filed yesterday morning.

Propaganda.

UNITE TO HERALD AFAR CHARMS OF BEACH CITY.

Civic Bodies and Individuals Join Long Beach Movement Designed to Benefit Whole Southland with Seaside Community—Development Industrially and as Pleasure Resort Goal of Publicity Campaign.

LONG BEACH, the city with climate, strand and pay roll, has started a new booster movement—a movement laid on such broad foundations that it includes not only the speeding up of activities in its own confines, but incidentally, yet with emphasis, the boosting for Southern California in general.

"Never before in the history of Long Beach has there been such an unity of spirit and purposes on the part of its business men and organizations and the general property owners. This is a cohesive movement, welding together all former factions and advancing in solid phalanx for the public good, which, of course, means the advantage of the individual as well as the community."

Such is the sentiment expressed by many business men during the past few days, as the plans for unified action were discussed. Long Beach has several definite booster organizations and they are in accord, while there is a very noticeable spirit of boosting on the part of individuals. A greater Long Beach, with a greater industrial district and a more densely-populated residence area—a Long Beach that shall be popular in the minds of all residents of inland towns who seek the seashore for recreation and pleasure—is the goal of the new movement.

First and foremost in the propaganda is the firm determination to carry out plans for the further development of Long Beach harbor, as a nucleus for the attraction of industries and commerce. Long Beach is now thoroughly imbued with the idea of "twin harbors"—the allying of the interest of its harbor with that of Los Angeles, and the development of both as one big project, destined to be of vast importance to both municipalities.

HARBOR ACTION.

As has been set forth in recent newspaper accounts, a voted issue of $650,000 bonds for harbor improvement has been declared invalid. Immediately upon the heels of this decision came a movement to take other steps to forward this enterprise. Preliminary arangements have been made to hold a monster mass meeting to consider the problem. A citizens' committee has held preliminary meetings formulated plans and considered ways and means. When the great mass meeting convenes there will be tangible propositions placed before it for consideration and definite action is practically certain at that time.

The special committee in charge of this work includes F. C. Roberts, S. W. Alexander, L. N. Wheaton, George H. Bixby, Job Barnett, D. M. Shreve, E. J. Starr, W. H. Bennett, O. Hauge, C. J. Walker, P. E. Hatch, G. M. Spicer, L. W. Shuman, C. H. Windham and W. F. Prisk.

Long Beach has the commission form of government. One phase of the new movement for advancement is a plan, now being matured, for the formation of what is to be known as the Long Beach General Committee—an advisory board to aid the Commissioners in consideration of important municipal affairs. This is to be composed of three members each from civic and business organizations. Representatives for this committee have been selected by the Chamber of Commerce, the Merchants' and Manufacturers' Association, the Long Beach Ad Club, the Woman's City Club, the Woman's Music Study Club, the Signal Hill Club, and various other organizations. In this one movement alone great good has been done in solidifying various interests.

It is proposed to put forth every possible effort to advance the industrial interests of Long Beach, as well as its popularity as a seaside resort—a happy combination of developments that can be worked out to a remarkable degree. The beach city enters into the new crusade with vim and determination.

GOOD PORT FIRST.

As to the industrial viewpoint, its citizens seem to be settled on the premises that harbor development is an imperative foundation. It is proposed at once to carry out plans for clearing the channel so that the present facilities may be put to the highest possible use. It is planned then to connect the Long Beach harbor with the Los Angeles Harbor by a channel. The Long Beach end of this channel would be 7700 feet in length, the Los Angeles end approximately 4000 feet.

Estimates on the opening up of this channel through the Long Beach territory place the cost at $150,000. This would provide, it is declared, a channel fifteen feet deep and 200 feet wide. It is believed that after Long Beach has undertaken this development, the Federal government will take hold of the project and that eventually the channel will be widened by government work to 600 feet, and given a depth of thirty feet. This project has been laid before Federal officials and has secured favorable consideration.

With the harbor as a foundation Long Beach expects to put forth strong efforts to secure further industrial expansion. She is proud of past achievements on this line, but far from satisfied to rest there. Her record, however, is gratifying. The pay roll of this city's industries at present, is more than $125,000 per month. The largest of these is that of the California Ship Company, a concern that has received government recognition in the award of contracts for construction of submarines. Two other concerns that carry heavy pay rolls are the American Products Company, recently established by George Simmons, and the Balboa Amusement Production Company. Smaller industries are an important factor in this steady outflow of wages and salaries.

ADVERTISING PLAN.

A comprehensive plan for consistent advertising is to be carried out—a campaign for the purpose of attracting investors and for further spreading knowledge of the advantages of Long Beach as a seaside resort and most desirable place for all-year homes.

One of the big factors in this effort—as it has also been in the new get-together programme—is the Long Beach Ad Club. This organization is remarkable in its membership. It has 250 members, representing the live, energetic young business and professional life of the seaside city. E. J. Richards is its president; M. Q. Giffen, first vice-president; B. F. Tucker, second vice-president; R. E. Clements, secretary; Julius Blum, treasurer; George B. Taubman, chaplain; William E. Garner, E. E. Norton, Charles L. Wright, R. Lee Wilson, William T. Lisenby and H. B. Clifton, directors.

The Ad Club is maturing a publicity plan that is to be far-reaching in scope and include striking publicity not only for Long Beach, but also for the exposition at San Diego and for Southern California in general.

The Ad Club will send a delegation in a private car to the meeting of the Associated Ad Clubs of the World, at Philadelphia, June 20 to 30. With the delegation will be the Long Beach Municipal Band and the famous Long Beach Boosters' Quartette. It is proposed to stop at all the cities along the route to the east, and give concerts and other affairs that will direct attention to Long Beach, the exposition and Southern California, and to repeat this work on the return trip by another route. The Ad Club representatives will also participate in the famous Philadelphia pageant. On a large float will appear twenty-five young women in bathing costume and the wording: "Long Beach, the Atlantic City of the Pacific."

Another plan whereby Long Beach proposes to boost its own interests and at the same time advance those of the exposition is that prepared for Long Beach day, April 22. The morning of April 21, a great procession of automobiles will start from Long Beach for San Diego. At least 200 cars will be in this notable line. They will pass through as many towns as possible on their way to the exposition city, and in each place the attractions of Long Beach will be set forth. The trip is to be made the previous day so that the entire time April 22 may be devoted to the programme for Long Beach day at the exposition.

In addition to these arrangements for publicity the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce is carrying on a consistent campaign that is reaching all portions of the United States as well as foreign lands.

The municipality itself just now is deeply interested in the further development of its public schools, which are a pride to its citizenry. During the ensuing month it will vote on a proposition to issue $360,000 bonds for purchase of sites, construction and equipment of two intermediate school buildings, erection of a boys' gymnasium, alteration of the present school auditorium, and other betterments of the schools.

The ethical side of life is well provided for through the activities of church organizations and clubs. It is the boast of Long Beach that there are more handsome church edifices within its confines, and a larger attendance at church services, than can be found in any city of its size in California.

During the last fiscal year the building permits totaled $1,581,965.50, and the plumbing permits $93,722.79. For the portion of the present fiscal year now past the records show building permits totalling $518,230 and plumbing permits to the amount of $45,715.45.

The building permits for the current fiscal year include one each of the following: Greenhouse, school, grand stand, hospital, two barns, two combined dwellings and stores, two apartments and stores combined, two theaters, three offices, three sewage incinerators, four amusement devices, fifteen industrial buildings, thirty-one storage buildings, nine apartments, forty-nine stores, six bulkheads, four churches, four piers, 242 garages, eleven flats, four hotels, 210 private dwellings.

The seven banks of Long Beach tell the story of the substantial character of the community. The reports to the Comptroller on the 7th inst. showed total deposits of $8,900,000. March 4, 1915, the deposits were $7,300,000. This shows a gain of $1,600,000 in one year. The total resources of these banks March 7 were $10,900,000. The Clearinghouse Association has shown clearings of more than $100,000 per day for the past fifteen days.

The postoffice receipts for the last eight months were $75,367.42, an increase of $7358.20 over the preceding period of eight months.

The new get-together movement that has been successful in combining the important organizations of Long Beach in the determined forward movement, was given its first impetus by the Long Beach Ad Club, which sets forth as its mission: "To promote the good and disparage the evil in what must necessarily be of interest to every business man in Long Beach, since it is one of the most vital problems in the commercial world today—advertising in all its phases; to be a factor in promoting the city's welfare by bringing its resources and advantages before the eyes of the world through proper publicity."

It Cures Through the Pores

IF ALL THE PORES IN THE SYSTEM WERE PERMITTED TO PERFORM THEIR FULL DUTY AT ALL TIMES, THERE WOULD BE NO SUCH THING AS DISEASE.

New Pore Treatment Takes Place of Pain Tablets and Other Internal Medicines in the Relief of Many Ills.

NEURALGIA and rheumatism of the joints and muscles are quickly relieved by rubbing the New Pore Treatment over the affected parts until it is well absorbed. It takes the aches and soreness out of the irritated nerves and tissues in a few minutes, and there is no danger associated with its use. If the trouble is long standing or chronic, rub it plentifully over the aching parts and over the nerve centers along the spine. If the rheumatism is in the legs, rub it over the bottoms of the feet. The pores of the feet should be kept open and active at all times. More poisonous sediments are drained off through them than all of the others combined.

The New Pore Treatment is simply magical in the treatment of sore lungs, nagging coughs or nasal catarrh. Rub it over the chest and neck for bronchitis and sore throat. Don't fail to try it for the skin and complexion. It clears them right up. Ask for KNOW-DOC PORE TREATMENT at any drug store. They now have it in both small and large sizes.

What They Say

"Had a bad cough for months. Could hardly speak. One small size cured me. It also cleared my forehead of pimples and pore obstructions."

READY TO HEAR GAS RATE CASE.

Eleven Months in Preparation of Voluminous Evidence.

Law and Engineering Experts Represent Each Side.

Natural Product for Public is Issue at Stake.

E. O. Edgerton of the State Railroad Commission will hear the gas rate case for the city of Los Angeles next Tuesday, after eleven months preparation on the part of the commission engineers, the Board of Public Utilities and the attorneys and engineers of the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation and the Southern California Gas Company.

The present case is fully as important as the recent condemnation proceedings of the Southern California Edison. Chief Engineer Richard Sachse of the commission will personally give the testimony of the commission's engineers, while Prof. Cory and J. E. Barker, former chief engineer of the Board of Public Utilities, will represent the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation. The Southern California Gas Company engineers will be experts from the firm of J. G. White & Co. The city will be represented by Fulton Lane and Franklin D. Howell.

LEGAL TALENT IN CONTEST.

The city's legal forces will be headed by Albert Lee Stephens in person. The Southern California Gas Company will be represented by Jared How of San Francisco, one of the foremost public utility attorneys in the West. The Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation's attorneys will be W. E. Cheney, Herbert J. Goudge and Paul Overton.

It is expected the case will occupy at least a month to present. It is probable that the Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation will take the stand first, followed by the Southern California Gas Company, then by the State Railroad Commission's engineers, with the city occupying the advantageous position of being the last to put in its direct testimony.

As previously outlined exclusively in The Times, three separate interests will be represented in this hearing. The Southern California Gas Company, through its close association with the Midway oil fields, is anxious to obtain a rate which will not only permit the Midway to sell the maximum amount of natural gas to all companies distributing in and about the city, but which will permit the Southern California Gas Company to distribute its product, not only for domestic but also for wholesale purposes.

MUCH DEPENDS ON RULING.

The Los Angeles Gas and Electric Corporation, which was chartered for the purpose of "manufacturing and distributing gas," occupies the position of being willing to distribute natural gas of 1000-heat units or better, on condition that the price fixed by the State Railroad Commission is such that distribution will be without loss to the company. Its attorneys will probably contend that this company cannot be forced to deliver service, other than that for which its stockholders originally put up money, to the detriment of their own financial interests, and will probably maintain that such assurance must be given the company before it can be expected to jeopardize the business already created.

CITY'S POSITION.

The city, through City Attorney Stephens and President Lane of the Board of Public Utilities, will doubtless maintain that the people have a right to pure natural gas as cheaply as possible, so long as the actual investment of the company is maintained in safety. To this end the city may maintain that the artificial gas plants of the companies should be amortized, and that an allowance made in the rate to wipe out this investment. Recent decisions of the various courts and commissions in the United States seem to make it imperative, it is claimed, that these plants shall be amortized, rather than having their investment disregarded entirely.

Neither the companies nor the city are withholding any scrap of information from the commission, as all three reports have already been filed with the commission's engineers, that they may be checked before the taking of testimony begins.

Welcome.

INSTITUTE OPENING.

Young Women's Christian Association Center for Work Among Foreigners will be Formally Inaugurated with Reception. Fire Cause of Delay.

The formal opening of the Y.W.C.A. International Institute at No. 1315 Pleasant street will take place Tuesday, the 21st inst. Interested friends are invited to visit the institute in the afternoon between 3 and 5 o'clock, or between 8 and 10 at night. The Brooklyn-avenue street car goes near, and Aliso place leads into Pleasant street from the car.

This center for foreign work has been a busy place since the Christmas holidays, in spite of the fact that the fire immediately following the informal opening prevented the open house night, which is to take place on Tuesday evening.

The Immigration Committee which has charge of the work will receive with the members of the board of managers, of which Mrs. Willitts J. Hole is president. The Immigration Committee consists of Miss Ida K. Lindley, chairman, and Mmes. W. A. Brazee, Walter B. Cline, R. F. Del Valle, S. S. Dickenson, James D. Eaton, Murray Harris, W. E. Horn, R. Hornidge, E. P. Johnson, B. W. McCausland, J. Roy Pinkham and H. B. Yacoubi; Dr. Flora B. Crichton, Loretta M. Cook, Myrtle Godfrey, Dr. Fred Rica Keep and Misses Ellen Butterfield, Sada Johnson, Mary Keyes, Laura McVey, Catherine Miltmore, Margaret Schweitzer, Mary Schweitzer and Lillian Van Dyke.

THE SAN FRANCISCO COMMUTER.

How the Oaklander Differs from the Oakland Man, and the Sausalitan from the Piedmontese—a Satire.

BY JEANNE REDMAN.

PIEDMONT (Cal.) March 17.—The San Francisco commuter is as interest[illegible] ing a species as any found on this continent. I have an idea that the English would call him a "commutationer," would they not? At any rate, the word "commuter" seems to me to be wholly unsatisfactory. [illegible] ought to be spelled "commutor," and a commutor should be one who dispenses commutations. The man who uses them should be the commu[illegible]. But that question seems altogether dusty beside the more vital one of the man himself.

Think of crossing the same bay on the same sort of ferry twice a day for forty years! That is not unusual. Indeed it is quite common. If we could foresee ourselves catching the 8 o'clock to the city and the 5:15 back every day for forty years we would go mad, but luckily we can only look back on it and then it is too late to bother about, and people never go mad about things unless they bother about them very much indeed.

The commuter is a creature of such iron-clad habits that when the great fire came he boarded the ferry just as usual, and when he got to the city and saw his office in flames he rushed around and around in the greatest state of dismay and waited until the 5:15 boat to go home again.

Nothing but Sunday stops the regularity of the commuter's day, and on Sunday he is just as much the victim of his habits as on any other day, for on Sunday he golfs. Golf is, of course, a disease wherein one [illegible] of the brain becomes acutely inflamed and the rest of it atrophies; but golf plays only a small part in the daily life of the commuter.

All commuters are not the same variety. They differ according to the dormitory in which they sleep. The Oakland commuter, for instance, is quite a different person from the Berkeley man. Oakland, somehow, has a stamp all its own. There is something soporific, something dogged, about the Oakland man that appears nowhere else on earth. A mental [illegible] at the knees, a down-at-the-heels spirituality, a physical appearance of being out at the elbows which is unique and unmistakable. An Oaklander is the only man in the world who should not be asked to do in Rome as the Romans do; wherever you put him he is Oakland still; he takes his local color with him. He is the original bromide. He is not afraid of what he will do to his automobile; he is afraid of what the other fellow will do, and, oh! [illegible] of Mary Wollstonecraft, he believes that woman's sphere is the home, or, [illegible] say the "kitchin!"

The intellectual timber of the Oaklander is well illustrated by an incident which happened last week, with me as the heroine. I was at [illegible] shortly before the dinner hour, dancing, when an Oaklander presented himself at my table. That, of course, is in itself incredible, inasmuch as I did not know him, but the man who was with me did, and he effected an introduction. I danced with the Oaklander, and while we waltzed he [illegible] managed to remark upon the peculiarity of the fact that women are [illegible] ily beguiled, and yet that men are fools. I acquiesced at once and [illegible] make talk: "Shakespeare knew that so well. He makes use of it often. [illegible] recall the simile of Titania and the ass in Midsummer Night's Dream?" The Oaklander agreed and our dance came to an end. A few days later the man who introduced him asked him if he liked me. "Oh, yes," he said. "Miss Redman is all right, but she is too much for me." "In what way?" "Why, she talks all the time about the Iliad and the Odyssey."

The Oakland commuter sits all over the seats on the ferry boat and carries home seeds and bulbs, which he plants after dinner in the evening. [illegible] honor to him for it, and I like his love of flowers, but why does the [illegible] of the garden necessarily hang about him? Why can't he plant seeds [illegible] out looking like a man who never did anything else? The Oaklander [illegible] seen at home is gentle and kind and wholesome, oh, anathema [illegible] and, when a politician, slightly bustling.

While the Oakland commuter carries home from the city seeds and bulbs for his garden, the Berkeley man carries home books and [illegible]. The university atmosphere has penetrated into the bungalows of [illegible] and housekeeping there is as modern and emaciated from all precedent as [illegible] Berkeley co-ed.

There are babies innumerable in Berkeley and they are all [illegible] brought up, not to say actually eugenic. Even the grandfathers who [illegible] the babies are trained. There is no baby talk in Berkeley. There is not [illegible] much noise of any sort. The street noises are subdued ones—just the occasional rattle of a motor which takes the Puritas water around the [illegible] ridden town, and the somber hum of the vacuum cleaner. They [illegible] mops and vacuum cleaners in Berkeley. And electric washing machines. [illegible] one can live under the shadow of North Hall and not feel the [illegible] influence of the place. The houses in Berkeley are all houses beautiful; [illegible] are Whistler door moldings and Futurist window curtains. Even [illegible] furnishings are designated to educate one. The whole place breathes [illegible] tivation. There are Roycroft bindings in the library and revolutionary [illegible] on the pianos and evidences of the higher culture everywhere. [illegible] the northern home of the intellectual elite.

The Marin county commuter (that is, the man from Sausalito, [illegible] Mill and Ross valleys and Belvedere) carries home small pieces of [illegible] motor boats and automobiles. His pockets bulge with tennis and golf [illegible] and rackets and fishing lines are strung across his back. All things [illegible] border on sports he carries home, and he stands at the bow of the boat [illegible] watches its progress across the channel as though he never had seen it before. Every tug we pass on the bay holds an intense interest for him. [illegible] is a dreamer, with an imagination which carries him away into strange [illegible] where there are unfamiliar types and standards, and where, I fancy, [illegible] always a skipper commanding a boat which is bent on a fantastic errand.

The Alameda commuter is quite a distinctive personality. I [illegible] of carrying home (tucked carefully under his arm with the Saturday [illegible] Post) medicines! The Coroner is the most-talked-of man in Alameda. [illegible] think that that large bottle which makes such an irregular lump in the Alamedan's overcoat pocket is a cure for malaria. There is one chance in a million that it is a new kind of swimming shoe, for they swim in Alameda, and shoes are in vogue because of the stingarees which infest the [illegible] say nothing of the crabs and sand fleas which add nothing to the [illegible] bathing in the bay off Alameda. But most probably it's medicine. It [illegible] be almost any medicine but sleeping powders; there is no need for [illegible] the low-lying city by the bay.

Alameda is literally nothing but a dormitory and bath-house. [illegible] are beautiful houses there, but no houses beautiful, and in these [illegible] nice people sleep. In the daytime the entire city moves over to San Francisco. You can stand, in the middle of the day at the points where the [illegible] liest street and the principal street (I suppose Park street really [illegible] called the principal street) intersect, and search in vain for evidences of [illegible]. There are many more evidences of life on Mars than there are in Alameda in the daytime. But in the evening, when the trains bring the people [illegible] from the city, there is quite a stir. That is, between the hours of [illegible]. There is quite a faint bustle about this time, like a soft breeze blowing [illegible] pines, until the nice people have eaten their comfortable (everybody in Alameda is comfortable except for malaria and rheumatism) meal and [illegible] to bed and to sleep at 8:30, when the little city closes its eyes and [illegible] its wonted tranquillity.

From Piedmont comes the essence of spring with all the [illegible] and glamour of this ineffably exquisite season. And the Piedmont [illegible] shows it in his eyes and in his gait. There is a vigor and swing to [illegible] as he hurries from the train to his waiting motor. For the Piedmont commuter rides. He rides mostly in stunning limousines, too. He is the [illegible] around the bay section whose staff of life is not wholewheat bread, but [illegible] pastry. He lives on high hills which overlook the Golden Gate and the [illegible]. And these hills are ablaze with bloom—with cherry blossoms to remind [illegible] of his travels in quaint Japan, and the peach blossom of our own [illegible] leys, and the glory of cerise and saffron tulips and the gold of [illegible] look like a Cezanne landscape in pure color. A wild, mad orgy [illegible] having this spring, all to itself, while the wars rage—and what a [illegible] orgy! It is as if the Piedmont hills were stretching out glad, [illegible] hands to the silly fighting world, hands overflowing with the [illegible] and richnesses of life. Keeping the faith, as it were, in the [illegible] of things!

Justice Tempered.

LIGHT FINES FOR BOYS.

Four Youngsters Indicted by Federal Grand Jury for Operating Wireless Telegraph Without License are Punished, Two Deny Guilt.

With the statement that he was surprised that they should have been indicted by the Federal grand jury, Judge Trippet assessed nominal fines against four of the six boys charged with violating the radio laws by not having licenses, and two who pleaded not guilty were told to return to court the second Monday in July, if in the meantime their cases were not otherwise disposed of. They were allowed to go on their own recognizance.

Edward Whiting, Harry Blodgett, Richard White and Jack Hyams, who had pleaded guilty, were each fined $1; George Hawley and George [illegible] insist they are not guilty.

In passing the [illegible] Judge Trippet said he was [illegible] do so by the [illegible] that they did not [illegible] lating the law in [illegible] censes. He hoped [illegible] would be sufficient [illegible] they cannot be [illegible] without suffering [illegible]. The court [illegible] have been found [illegible] dealing with the boys.

All were [illegible] parents, who gave [illegible] good character of their [illegible].

FOR ORGA[illegible]

A movement [illegible] ent improvement [illegible] west of the city [illegible] meeting to be [illegible] Wednesday evening [illegible] sentatives will be [illegible] sociations of [illegible] Lawndale, [illegible] Inglewood, [illegible] Chesterfield [illegible]

"Keeping Everlastingly at It Brings Success"

Thrilling Race for Gold and Autos

Only three more days are left the 80,000 vote bonus period, with $75 in gold. Then—one short week and The Times sixteen splendid automobiles and other valuable prizes will be awarded.

All interest now centers in making the most of the present bonus offer, which gives 80,000 extra votes on each five-year club of new subscriptions. Wednesday, when this offer closes, will also be "Gold Day," for the candidate turning in during this period the largest sum in new subscription payments wins an added prize of $75 in gold.

Candidates all over the Southwest are swinging forward with a burst of enthusiasm, intent on gaining the winning votes while the special offer lasts. It is a wise thing to do, too, for this is the very last club and gold offer of the campaign. It is the banner period; the real work is being done now. Vote reserves are being built up, to fortify the candidates against the tremendous pressure that will manifest itself in the home stretch. Only during the next three days can such vote totals be amassed as will withstand the surging battle of the last days.

Realization of this important fact is causing an amazing rush for the new subscriptions that are so valuable from a vote standpoint. Five-year clubs are being built right and left; as soon as a candidate completes one she starts on another.

The wonderful liberality of this vote bonus, with $75 in gold as an additional tempting prize, is exerting a remarkable influence among those candidates who, it was thought, would not try for a prize. It is even bringing new candidates into the race every day. But those who would still enter the campaign had better do so now, for the nomination period closes Saturday, March 25. There is still an excellent chance to enter now and win in the end. One or two clubs will work wonders.

More than one "dark-horse" is already causing deep concern among the other candidates. And there are SIXTEEN automobiles among the forty prizes.

There are two important dates to remember—March 22, when the special offer closes, and March 29, the grand final day of the campaign, when a fortune in magnificent prizes will be distributed among the ambitious workers of the Southland.

The last changes in the vote standings of candidates will be published in next Wednesday's Times (March 22,) and will thereafter not be changed until the end of the campaign and the winners are announced, except in case of corrections of errors.

Candidates who desire to publish a portion of their votes next Wednesday, in order to place their name in good position, must see that their votes are in the Campaign Office before 12 o'clock, Tuesday noon, March 21. The next standings as published will remain positively the same during the last week of the campaign, as no changes will be made except to rectify mistakes that may exist.

Every candidate must be entered in her proper district in order to share in the distribution of prizes, and if you know of any other candidate who is entered in the wrong district, it is your duty to write the Campaign Manager at once and also see that your correct name and address appears in the list, so that any important mail sent you will be promptly delivered. Address all your communications to the Campaign Manager and you will receive prompt acknowledgment of same.

MIDST THE MOVIES.

By Eugene Brown.

The Once Over Brotherhood answered the call of the alarm clock. We made up a little party to investigate the charge that the moving-picture interests are seeking to extort money from the people. Our distinguished friend, Chesterton Hay, fancied that if they were able to do [illegible] in extraction he might take a little flyer himself. He had in mind the formation of a million-dollar company to put Dare Devil D'Artagnan out as a screen serial, after the manner of the "Adventures of Adelaide" and their ilk. He fancied that the exploits of the immortal Three Guardsmen would make fine fodder for the films. There being some fifty-odd producing companies here already, one more or less would make no difference; nevertheless, we wanted to get in right and make no mistakes. A scouting expedition was decided upon. Besides Squire Hay, the party included the eminent artist, Al Falfa, and myself.

"Where shall we begin?" inquired the squire.

"Let's hunt up Frank Woods, who holds over at the Fine Arts studio," suggested I.

"Really, that's not a bad suggestion, don't you know?" said our leader. "I fancy he may be an old friend. Woods lived up near the old Hay place and [illegible] the families were connected [illegible]."

"That's fine," exclaimed I. "If we hurry up we may find Tree with [illegible]."

"[illegible] Tree was leaving about [illegible]."

"[illegible] usually leave in March out [illegible], I believe," interrupted Mr. Hay.

"[illegible], well! Listen to the merry [illegible]," said I. "This Tree happens to be Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, the [illegible] who pushed Shakespeare into the [illegible]."

"[illegible] you, Sir Herbert Tree. He is [illegible] an old branch of our family," [illegible] Hay.

"Through the Roots, I suppose?" [illegible] the artist.

[illegible] much further sparring we [illegible] the passage to the Fine Arts [illegible] out Sunset boulevard—the [illegible] Reliance plant. The general [illegible] is on one side of the street and [illegible] the way rise the lofty walls of Babylon, around which is being [illegible] the biggest and greatest of [illegible] productions.

[illegible] was Woods we sought and [illegible]. He was in his office engaged [illegible] thought—as behooves a man [illegible] has to think. Nevertheless [illegible] greeted us cheerily.

"[illegible] introduce Mr. Hay and Al [illegible]," I began.

"[illegible] to meet you, gentlemen. [illegible] you in—green goods? [illegible] like a regular firm."

"[illegible] way in the pipe line," interjected the artist. "We want to pipe [illegible]."

"[illegible]," said the scenario [illegible], "go ahead and do your [illegible] willing to give Chesterton a free hand."

"[illegible] wondering if Sir Herbert [illegible]," explained the squire.

"[illegible] to New York last Friday," [illegible] Mr. Woods. "But he'll be [illegible] in a few weeks. He just [illegible] to get away from here. [illegible] to give us another [illegible] production."

"[illegible] reminded of yourself in [illegible] the immortal William out of [illegible] grave and chasing [illegible] screen," interrupted I.

"Not on your life," retorted the director. "I'll bet you a case of mineral water that if Shakespeare were alive today he would be writing for the movies."

"I'll take that bet," exclaimed I, promptly, "and we'll have our artist friend here hold the stakes."

"Excuse me, gentlemen," interrupted Al Falfa, in piteous accents. "Please get somebody else. Look at my tummy already yet."

"Take this play of 'Macbeth,' for instance," resumed the director. "It lends itself splendidly to the films. It has a strong, concrete and well-developed plot, with wonderful climaxes. We can give you a scenic production that you couldn't have on any stage in the world. The scenes with the witches are wonderful. When it comes to producing Banquo we give you a real ghost—whatever that is. Then, too, you can see Birnam Wood coming to Dunsinane instead of hearing about it. We built a reproduction of Macbeth's castle and we have a battle scene that seems like the real thing. When you see it you'll feel that we are warranted in going ahead with classic stuff. Shakespeare is even greater in the development of great dramatic plots than in the spoken word. At the same time, we have 'cut-ins' on the screen that give all the familiar quotations and tell a connected and coherent story. You just wait and see."

"When does it come off?" said the artist.

"Very soon, now, but they may decide to make the first production in New York at $2 a seat."

We went out to look at the remnants of Macbeth's castle.

"Who is this guy, Macbeth, anyhow?" said the artist. "Is he the fellow I met out at the links?"

"No," answered I, "I think he's the party that used to make lamp chimneys."

Then we were placed in the keeping of Bennie Zeideman, the chief ranger. Everybody calls him "Bennie" because his name is Benjamin. He is built on the sleek and graceful lines of the fox terrier and has an alluring bark. He knows about everything and everybody on the place and keeps cases on all that's going on. He was much impressed with the gracious dignity of Chesterton Hay and was almost affectionate with the artist.

"Do you want to see DeWolf Hopper working?" he inquired after the preliminaries had been arranged.

"Well, I should wiggle my beezer," exclaimed I. "The big stiff has been playing for twenty years to my certain knowledge and now if I can catch him at work I'll give you my old hat."

"Sh-h!" hissed Bennie. "We'll sneak up on him."

So we crossed the discarded ruins of Macbeth's castle; passed in the shadow of the walls of Babylon, and came upon the shell of a stage set out in the open. It was an ordinary parlor scene and DeWolf Hopper was seated on a chair at the front teasing a fluffy Scotch terrier, who was tied to the leg of the chair in order to keep him in the picture. A burglar crept softly in from the rear and on seeing Hopper promptly covered him with a pistol. The big comedian threw up his hands and gave the marauder the dog.

Hopper was wearing whiskers and a very ancient dress suit. He was a good-natured, old-fashioned English squire. It was a hot day—the hottest March day known here, and the thermometer dangling on the flimsy framework of the open stage boiled over at 94 degs.

"Ah, ha!" exclaimed the artist. "When Hopper wears whiskers on a hot day they call it working!"

The big comedian came out of the picture and greeted us warmly—perspiringly, in fact.

"What do you think of it?" he asked.

"The dog is a mighty fine actor," said I, evasively.

"He ought to be," gurgled Fay Tincher, the eccentric comedienne. "He belongs to me."

I introduced the stalwart Hopper to our distinguished guest.

"Delighted, I'm sure," murmured Chesterton Hay. "I think I know your cousin, Grasse Hopper."

"Not in the same set," retorted the comedian. "I'm one of the big bugs; he's only an insect."

Others in the party included Mae and Marguerite Marsh, Norma Talmadge, Dorothy Gish, Bessie Love and a few more film favorites.

Miss Marsh and 'Squire Hay got along very well together. "There used to be a Marsh Hay in our family," explained Hay, "and I often ran across the Marshes."

"I hope he had rubber boots," snickered the irrepressible Fay.

The Tincher person was wearing a green celluloid eye shield to protect her attractive orbs from the dazzling sun. "I have to wear blinders to keep from seeing the censors," she explained.

"Camera!" exclaimed Director Dillon, and forthwith the play went on.

It was explained to us that the comedy was called "The Philanthropist," and it is the third screen offering in which the amiable Hopper has cavorted. The first was "Don Quixote," which is surely something to tackle, but which had been put through most happily by the big comedian in a light opera form. Brother Hopper may be persuaded to become a permanent resident. He is already raising artichokes and children in Hollywood and is very much in demand for club talks and speeches about the banquet board. I asked Bennie why he went into the film game. "To keep DeWolf from the door," was the prompt response.

It was his merry jest.

Director Woods had his noodle oiled the other day with the idea of solving the problem of putting "Casey at the Bat" on the screen. If he works it out Hopper threatens to pack his trunks and go back East. He has been trying to get away from Casey for ten years.

In the shade of some sheltering palms in another corner of the block we came upon a trinity of scenario writers—real ones. They were working in the open, with the assistance of a stenographer, and they had nothing whatever to sustain life or aid inspiration save a pitcher of lemonade. They have been successfully creating a line of children's stories, for which there is considerable demand. This prompted Chesterton Hay to remark that there was nothing more attractive—even to grown-ups—than a clean, old-fashioned fairy tale. Tricks of photography made almost anything possible on the screen.

"I've been telling fairy stories to my wife for ten years," admitted the eminent citizen.

"They all do it," echoed the artist.

Studio directors specialize in bonnets. The dilapidated ex-Panama of Dave Griffith is famous. He always wears it during his big productions and when he is excited he wig-wags with it, after the manner of an entire signal corps. The lid is known to the profession as Griffith's mascot, and if any vandal should steal it the owner would promptly go forth and suicide himself.

If some antiquarian would bring back the helmet of Navarre some movie prince would be pleased to trade a hundred thousand bucks for it.

Our visiting party encountered John Emerson and had a social session. Emerson was a producer for Charles Frohman, but came here to transcribe "Macbeth" for the screen. In this way he is guiltily responsible for shoving Shakespeare upon the screen. But he indicated no remorse over his handiwork. Despite his modesty I even fancy he gloats over it. Just wait and see what he will do to "Hamlet" and "Julius Caesar."

Emerson wears a straw thatch that looks as if it might have been shot to pieces during the Mexican War. It is about the size of a gallon measure. It appears as if it might have been used for straining catfish at one time. When John passes by with his dome shield the spectator unconsciously feels for his artillery; but to take a shot at it is risky business. One might hit John's head and cause the loss of a valuable man.

The artist and I disguised ourselves with a couple of peppermint drops and visited the employment division to see whether we could get jobs as actors. The autocrat in charge whispered to his stenographer: "Here's a couple of hams that want to take away Sir Herbert's job."

In this department the types are selected for the minor parts, the crowds, the mobs, the armies and the like. On some mornings as many as 1500 extras are taken on, and the actors are herded after the manner of sheep in the foothills of Wyoming.

The boss gave me the once over and shook his head: "Nothing doing today," he explained. "There's hardly a play with hop fiends in it this season, but we might use you next week in the prison scene in 'The Warden's Wife.'"

To the artist he said: "I'm sorry I didn't see you first. We could have used you as Banquo's ghost, but that's all over now. However, if you will abstain from eating for another month we can use you in 'Hamlet.' We will want a tall ghost that can rattle about 100 pounds of Danish hardware."

The artist was peevish. "Go to the devil," he rasped. "If I can't play a feeding part you can shut your blamed studio up."

Mme. Brown, who has charge of the actorines or extra women, is in the same division. The artist and I agreed that she had what we would call a nice job. All she has to do is to sort over the girls who think they can act and give some of them a trial. The artist admitted he would like a position where he would be entirely surrounded by fairies and permitted to yell: "Come here, you blue-eyed heifer—the one with the yellow hair, and see what you can do to this Lillian Russell woman."

Lady Brown wears badge No. 1 as a city mother and has police and other powers that go with it. She can engage in rescue work or she can pinch any foolish maiden that runs away from home to follow the trail of Eva Tanguay. One day last week Mrs. Brown sorted out 250 dames and damsels who were wanted in the storming of Babylon. There were over twice that number who wanted to get into the game.

The artist wanted to know if he couldn't get a trial as a female impersonator.

"You'll get your trial in the police court," replied Mrs. Brown severely.

As we turned away I asked our Chesterton what he thought of it all.

"Fine business!" he exclaimed with enthusiasm.

Cheer up! Our distinguished friend is falling into the vernacular.

Next week something else.

THE LEG PULLERS.

By Eugene Brown.

"Have you been doing any more Santa Claus stunts?" said I casually as Chesterton Hay slipped his check-book in his pocket and picked out a plump Havana.

"I don't quite understand," replied the handsome guest.

"Have you been doughing up some of our infant industries?"

"Really, I'm puzzled, you know."

"Oh, I see," continued I. "I forgot you were from New York. What I mean is: have you been doing some more contributing to our worthy institutions?"

"Oh, yes, I have had several callers today. That stout lady who just went out wants to raise an Amazonian army to march on Washington to demonstrate to the government that the women want preparedness for war. By the way, do you know Isadore Key?"

"I guess not," answered I. "But I'm acquainted with his cousin, Charlie Locke."

"Well, this one is the grand geezer of the Venerable Order of Goats, and he came to see me about becoming an honorary life member of the lodge—a herd I believe he called it. The order is an old one, but very select in its membership. I told Isadore that I didn't want to raise whiskers, and he told me that only the geezers and the delegates to the supreme herd had to have beards. The members are very fraternal, and when you are in trouble and make a noise like a goat all the other Goats within hearing will rush to your rescue."

"It must sound like a wild night in the stock yards on taxpayers' day, then," interrupted I.

"I cawn't really say. But they honored me with a life membership. Of course, I was expected to advance the fee of $250 for engraving the certificate. By the way, do you know Charlottessen Rubendahl?"

"You mean Delicatessen, don't you?"

"No, I mean what I say. She's a pink little grass widow with a heart bigger than her body. Just now she is worrying about the poor Esquimaux who have none of the advantages of climate you have here. During the long, dreary Arctic night life must be horribly lonely with them. They have nothing whatever to cheer them up, and so Charlottessen is planning to send a canary bird to be hung up in every igloo. She wanted me to help her, and the way she pictured those helpless Esquimaux had me crying like a baby, don't you know. I just simply had to buy 500 canary birds to help the poor devils."

"Don't you know," interrupted I severely, "that a canary bird won't sing in the dark?"

"By Jove!" exclaimed the squire sheepishly. "We never thought of that, but if it isn't too late we might send nightingales instead."

"There's plenty of time," retorted I grimly. "I think Charlottessen is more liable to buy squabs anyhow. Have you had any other callers?"

"Let me see," said the urbane Chesterton, consulting his check book. "Here was a man organizing a company to operate a Swiss cheese mine in Nevada, and here's $50 toward the opening of a chain of poolrooms in Zanbibar. It is claimed that there isn't a pool table in the land. Here's another $50 toward the entertainment fund for the Khan of Kuspidor, who is making a journey to this country. Here's is $300 for the promotion of the Johnson Nonpartisan League—whatever that is—and here is $5 for the suppression of crime. That ought to be enough for that. Here is $100 to the fund for sending doughnuts to the soldiers, and here is $10 toward buying a limousine for a walking delegate. How can he be a walking delegate in a touring car? I never thought of that, but I suppose the poor devil gets tired of walking. Here is $50 toward buying a bungalow for a moving-picture actress who lost her voice, and here is $5 for sending souvenir postal cards to the famine sufferers in India."

"You've been having a fairly busy day," said I. "All you need now is a newspaper, and why not that? Owing to differences in time we can have the best paper in the world right here in California, and if you are to be with us you could not possibly be interested in anything that would be more to your pleasure and advantage. You want a paper that is clean and tells the truth. You don't want an unreliable, sensational sheet, and you do want one that can go in every home and that will give everybody a square deal."

"You interest me," exclaimed the squire. "What would it cost to start such a paper as you plan?"

"Well," said I reflectively, "if we don't have to put a building up we might be able to put her across for $100,000 to start with and we would have some revenue at once."

"What would you call it?"

"We would name it after its founder," said I with enthusiasm. "We will call it the Hay Press. It will compress all the news and squeeze out the falsehood."

"Fine," exclaimed the eminent guest. "I'll put in ten thousand for the preliminaries. Here, you might as well take the check now."

After affixing his signature he handed me the treasured bit of paper.

It was a great moment.

At last the world was to have the news monitor it craved and merited.

I looked at the paper again.

It was a demand draft on the Cactus National Bank of Sonofa, Mex.!

"Now I see why you are so damned generous," roared I in passion.

Happy Thought Club.

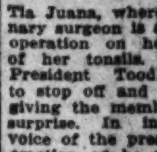
HAPPY THOUGHT

When the members of the Happy Thought Club were gathered together for their weekly symposium it was noted that a tall and willowy woman of doubtful age was seated in a chair at the president's right. She had a face that looked as if it had passed through a lemon-squeezer, but her eye was bland and gentle and the lids seemed to dimly curtain the inspiration which lodged behind. She appeared to be a stranger to most of those present, but curiosity concerning her was appeased when the president announced that she was none other than Aphrodite Skaggs, the soulful singer of Salina. Miss Skaggs is not only a poetess of great fame but is also the designer of a form-fitting corset that has busted into some of our most eclat homes. She was on her way to Tia Juana, where an eminent veterinary surgeon is about to perform an operation on her for the removal of her tonsils. Learning of this, President Toodles persuaded her to stop off and visit the club—thus giving the members a most pleasing surprise. In introducing her the voice of the president trembled with emotion as he referred to the possibility that they might hear her golden voice for the last time.



Miss Skaggs smiled reassuringly, however, and then read to the club a little ballad which she had written especially for the occasion. It bore the title:

"NO SUNSHINE FOR WIDDERS."

Since Hank is gone there ain't much joy in life,
 And happiness goes to the highest bidder;
Leastways it doesn't linger near the wife—
 There ain't much sunshine for a
  weepin' widder.

Tho' at providin' Hank was no great shakes;
 When Fortune fled he knocked off work and chid her
Instead of toilin' for his family's sakes,
 He left that mission to his weepin' widder.

'N' yet John was a hearty, lovin' man;
 The wife was cheerful, yet he clean
  outdid her;
He'd find the sunshine on the road he ran—
 There ain't much left now for the
  weepin' widder.

She toiled and labored in her little nest,
 Until the gathering clouds completely hid her
Then, tired like, went to her eternal rest
 Where there's some sunshine for a
  weepin' widder.

There was hardly a dry throat in the room as the gifted poetess concluded her recitation. Upon motion of Gladys Canby she was elected an honorary member of the club and a committee was appointed to accompany her to Tia Juana to see that Doc doesn't saw her up too much.

BYRONIC TONE POEM.

SYMPHONY TO PLAY "HAROLD IN ITALY" BY BERLIOZ.

Berlioz, the great French composer, who is but little known here, will be somewhat more familiar after the coming public rehearsal and concert of the Symphony Orchestra. His famous "Harold in Italy" symphony is to be given, with Rudolph Kopp as viola soloist. This promises to be the most interesting work from many angles presented this season.

The "Harold in Italy" was written at the express desire of Paganini, the violin master, who had a famous viola he wished to display to Parisian audiences. It was, however, first performed by another artist.

The work was suggested by the poem, "Childe Harold," whose tired worldly worn soul is shown in various phases of Italian life. The viola solo gives forth a melancholy comment upon mankind and life in each phrase, whether the peaceful, sentimentally religious or boisterous, as indicated by the general text of the music.

The work is programmatic throughout, although it adheres to the symphonic form. The four movements are distinguished as Harold in the Mountains—scenes of Melancholy, Happiness and Joy; Procession of Pilgrims Singing the Evening Hymn; Serenade of the Abruzzi Mountaineer to his Sweetheart; and Brigand Orgies—Reminiscenes of Earlier Scenes. The closing portion concerns Harold's sensational death in the brigand's den, and is in grotesque contrast to the first three beautiful movemets.

As is always the case with Berlioz the orchestration is of a very marvelous character for a composer of the period in which he lived. Berlioz is regarded the forefather of Liszt and Richard Strauss in the writing of programmatic orchestral music.

Beside "Harold in Italy" there will be played the MacDowell Indian Suite, which has not been heard in this city for a number of years. The themes are taken from American Indian music, and there are five divisions of the work known as Legend, Love Song, In War Time, Dirge and Village Festival. The remaining offering will be the "Tannhauser" overture by Wagner.

Adolf Tandler will direct.

Florence Hinkle.

Florence Hinkle, one of the most representative types of the coming American singer, will be heard Thursday evening at Trinity Auditorium.

Miss Hinkle has secured her present position in the world of music without European study or operatic appearances, her success, therefore, being the more secure.

She was born in Philadelphia, and as a girl sang in one of the choirs in the Quaker City, reinvesting her small reimbursement in weekly lessons in New York City. Fortunately from the beginning she was given the very best instruction, not only vocally, but in the various rudiments which go to make an all around musician. Her beautiful phrasing, and fine sense of proportion in each song included on her programmes is due no doubt to this early training, in addition to her innate ability. She was a pupil in later years of the distinguished basso, Herbert Witherspoon.

She has been soloist not once, but numerous times with the various symphony orchestras of the East, is constantly in demand for oratorios, and in addition has all the recital work she has time to fill. She comes direct to the Coast after an overwhelming success as principal soprano soloist in the presentation of the great Mahler Eighth Symphony, under Leopold Stokowski, in Philadelphia.

She will be ably assisted at the piano by Charles Albert Baker, one of the best known eastern accompanists. The programme is an especially interesting one, containing several novelties, and German, French and English songs, heard not too often.

Following is her programme for the recital here: "Care Selve," from "Atalanta" (Handel,) "Il Regardait mon Bouquet" (Monsigny,) "Come Unto these Yellow Sands" (Purcel,) "Du bist die Ruh" and "Auf dem Wasser zu singen" (Schubert,) "Roselein, Roselein" (Schumann,) "O komm im Traum" (Liszt,) "O liebliche Wangen" (Brahms,) "L'oasis" (Fourdrain,) "Serenata Francese" (Leoncavallo,) "Jardin d'amour" (Vuillermoz,) "Depuis le jour" from "Louise" (Charpentier,) "Come, Child, Beside Me" (Bleichman,) "Slumber Song" (Gretchaninow,) "I Know My Love" (Old Irish;) "In the Time of Roses" (Reichardt,) "Under the Lindens" (Marschal-Loepke,) and "Life and Death" (Coleridge-Taylor.)

Mme. Thorner's Recital.

Offering a programme of German lied, English songs and operatic selections, Mme. Thorner, distinguished dramatic soprano, will be heard in recital Tuesday evening at Trinity Auditorium. This is her first public concert appearance this season.

Mme. Thorner has dramatic and lyrical qualifications of unusual richness and has won many admirers since she made her home in this city something over a year ago.

She has achieved distinct success in her recital, oratorio and other work in the East, previous to settling in Los Angeles.

The numbers she will offer Tuesday evening include "Ou suis je" from "Alceste" (Gluck;) "Adelaide" (Beethoven;) "Fruehlingstraum" and "Ave Maria" (Schubert;) "Mit Myrthen und Rosen" and "Er ist's" (Schumann;) "Mainacht" and "Der Schmied" (Brahms;) "Nur wer die Sehnsucht kennt" (Tschaikowsky;) "Traum durch die Dammerung" and "Zueignung" (Strauss;) "Now Sleeps the Crimson Petal" (Quilter;) "Sylvelin" (Sinding;) "Phyllis" (Young;) "Ecstasy" (Will Garroway;) "Within Thine Eyes" and "Marching Song" (Paul Eisler;) aria from "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni,) and "One Fine Day," request, from "Madame Butterfly" (Puccini.)

Will Garroway will be accompanist except in the numbers by Paul Eisler, in which case the latter will be at the piano.

Edwin House Programme.

Edwin House, baritone, will give a recital tomorrow evening at Blanchard Hall.

Although several foreign composers are represented on the programme, the singer will present all numbers in English.

While Mr. House has been engaged in choir work for many years in this city, this is his first recital here. It will afford his many friends an opportunity to hear him in a general class of selections.

Accompanist will be James Campbell.

Among the songs on the programme is the War Trilogy, with words by Mrs. A. B. Dodge and music by Mrs. Gertrude Ross, both of this city.

Following are the selections included: "Where'er You Walk" from "William of Nassau; Netherland Folk Song, 1621" (Handel;) "Requiem;" "Banjo Song" and "Uncle Rome" (Sidney Homer;) "Phosphorescence" (Loewe;) "With Pious Hearts" and "Arm, Arm, Ye Brave," from "Judas Maccabeus" (Handel;) "For the Green" and "An Irish Courtship" (Loehr;) "Friend o' Mine" (Sanderson;) "Today" (Carrie Jacobs Bond;) "Long Ago in Alcala" (Massager;) "Good-by" (Mildenberg;) "Invictus" (Huhn;) War Trilogy, with composer at the piano (Gertrude Ross.)

Fanning at Green.

Cecil Fanning will be heard in his first 1916 California recital in the Romanesque room at the Hotel Green tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Mr. Fanning arrived in this city last Friday and will spend some time here. Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Turpin are accompanying him. This is Mr. Fanning's first appearance here since the unusually marked triumph won by him in recital in New York. The young baritone gained many friends here

GORGEOUS BALLET.

GERTRUDE HOFFMAN IN "SUMURUN" AT THE ORPHEUM.

Entertainment of diversified character is announced for the coming week at the theaters. The amusement seeker may view Gertrude Hoffman in a gorgeous spectacle called "Sumurun," or, if he prefers an idyllic form of entertainment, the comedy drama, "Freckles," will fill the bill, or if he thirsts for a realistic crime play, he may find that at the Morosco. The smaller vaudeville houses offer everything from musical comedy tabloids to Ford jokes.

Orpheum.

Gertrude Hoffman's own production of the Arabian Nights spectacle, "Sumurun," headlines the Orpheum bill opening tomorrow afternoon. A company of sixty artists takes part in the eight-scene production. A runway, the first used in vaudeville, called "the flowery way," will extend through the house, and over this many of the people in the troupe will make their entrance and exits.

"Sumurun" was originally staged by Max Reinhardt, the famous producer of mammoth spectacles. From him Miss Hoffman purchased the rights to "Sumurun." The story in pantomime and music is of the love of the beautiful slave of fatal enchantment, and it is said that the unique method of conveying its details lends intensity of effect. This, together with the sumptuous manner in which the production is staged, holds the spectator spellbound. Miss Hoffman plays the role of the slave.

The new bill also includes Harry Langdon and company in a comic motor car act; Moore, O'Brien and Cormack, in a cabaret turn; James H. Cullen, veteran monologist, and the holdovers, Grace de Mar, and Sharp and Turek.

Mason.

"Freckles," a stage version of the Gene Stratton Porter story, will be the attraction at the Mason this week beginning tomorrow night.

"Freckles" is a play of the Indiana swamp country. As in the original novel, the story deals with the adventures of a freckle-faced, redhaired waif who was deserted on the steps of an orphan asylum. A strong cast of players and singers, together with an elaborate and unique scenic production, is promised. Musical numbers will be a feature.

The beautiful and inspiring Limberlost scene, with all its charm and thrills, is a feature of the production, and is said to be a triumph of stagecraft.

Morosco.

Paul Armstrong's "A Romance of the Underworld" will be the attraction at the Morosco commencing this afternoon. A cast of thirty players will take part. Ida St. Leon and Edmund Lowe have the leads. Lowe is to assume the role of a newspaper man, who later becomes a lawyer, and Ida St. Leon has a congenial part, that of Doris Elliott.

The story deals with crime in the underworld, Armstrong being noted as an expert on crime. He probably knew more of the criminals of the United States their habits, hopes and ambitions and methods of living, than any other man in the country. As a newspaper man he generally worked about the police stations.

Pantages.

Six cute little cannibal maids on a cannibal isle, with Gus Elmore as a cannibal chief, Ben Harrison as a peddler, and Hazel Wood as a chorus maid, both shipwrecked, compose the cast of "Cannibal Maids," a musical comedy tabloid headlining the Pantages bill opening tomorrow afternoon.

Other acts on the bill will be Frank Busk, story-teller; the Imperial Cyclists, who play basketball on bikes; Rice and Newton, in songs, dances and comedy; the Steiner trio, acrobats, and Grace McCormack, violiniste. The last installment of "The Red Circle" will also be shown.

Hippodrome.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Murphy, old-time vaudeville favorites, will headline the new Hip bill opening tomorrow afternoon, in their comedy skit, "The Coal Strike."

Others will be Harry Mason and company in "Get the Money;" Barnum and Yanta, in a musical act, featuring Fanny Yanta's double voice; Barber and Jackson, in a singing, talking and playing act; McGood and Zates in ditties and patter; Bob Warren, in

AMONG THE STORES AND ADMIDST THE SHOPS.

Along Our Dazzling Streets, where Dame Fashion's Shopping is Done.

BY OLIVE GRAY.

Now is the time to buy:

Asparagus, which is becoming plentiful and of good quality, for the breakfast omelette. Nothing is more delicious as a morning dish, dainty, satisfying and easy to compound. When the omelette is beginning to "set" fold in the asparagus, which has been previously cooked and is piping hot. A sauce made from the asparagus juice seasoned with butter, salt and pepper may be added.

The cotton material for all your summer frocks, before the newest and most attractive patterns are gone. It is a mistake to wait about selecting these, for, if you do, the very ones which most struck your fancy are certain to have been equally attractive to someone else and you will never be quite satisfied with what you have been obliged to take.

A few more roses for the garden. The sales at some of the popular stores and in the greenhouses offer just new many novelties and at prices irresistible. There is always room for one or more new roses, however small your garden space, and it is most interesting to watch the new ones unfold their beauty as the season advances.

Practical Suggestion.

Protect your garbage can from leaking and also from contamination by pouring over the inner surface a thin coating of melted paraffine. The can will be much more easily kept clean when thus treated.

Observing Lent.

If you are inclined to observe the Lenten season it is well to make it one of self-denial, not perhaps as to foods or other indulgences, but in the way of doing for others. It is good practice, once in a while, lest we become too selfish, to try going without something which we prize or which we like to do, passing the pleasure or the privilege on to some one else. Give your theater tickets to the least favorite cousins; send the not too dear friend to the beach, while you remain at home; or pass the unread magazine to your sick neighbor, awaiting its return, for your own enjoyment. These are small things to do, seemingly insignificant self-denials, but they may serve as a revelation, as to just how selfish we have become and the insight may do us good for a far longer time than it has taken for the revealment.

A "Gingham Hen."

A little girl ran into the house and called excitedly to her mother: "Oh, mamma, there is a gingham hen out in the yard!" She referred to a barred Plymouth Rock. I shall never see gingham again without recalling this incident. And such pretty ginghams I was noticing the other day in that high-class store on upper Broadway where patterns in cottons are so exclusive and wantable.

Pay While Wheeling.

If you buy the baby buggy at that certain popular store on upper Broadway, you may pay while the wheels go 'round. In other words you pay but a very small amount and little by little each week. Thus the baby may be enjoying the out doors in perfect comfort while you are gradually paying for his transportation.

Silver Deposit.

You deposit but a wee fraction of a dollar and a very wantable article in silver deposit ware will be your very own. There is a wide range of articles in the collection, too—articles useful as well as pretty in this ware which has become standard.

Striking Bath Suits.

Not striking by reason of their shock to the finer sensibilities—possibly that is what you were expecting. People rather like to be shocked, I sometimes think; but it is not the aim of that high-class house to do a thing like that. The suits to which I refer are striking because so novel and different. They are made in a combination of plaid and plain silks, and there are caps to match—the latter in the plaid. I think them pretty and they are modest in effect and should be becoming.

Stay So's.

There is a fascination to me about glass and nickel bathroom fixtures, suggesting as they do the perfectly cleanly and the sanitary. A glass shelf or towel rack is clean and inviting to begin with and it will stay so, to the end of its usefulness and no one knows how very long that may be. Therefore, the housewifely feeling is aroused in looking over such articles, and when they are obtainable at surprisingly low cost, as in a sale now in progress in a big Broadway store, who will fail to covet?

A Broom Apron Free.

Never heard it called that? Then you do not know what I am talking about! I never heard it called that, either, but I do know; so I have you at a disadvantage. It is the cover for the broom which renders it a better implement for cleaning walls and ceilings. And, in case it is time to buy a new broom and you know values in this line and buy the broom at that big Broadway store this week, you will receive without cost the "apron" which the broom is to wear while doing an important part of its work.

A So-Little Mop.

The mop is not small, but the price is so. If I were a housekeeper I would have a dustless floor mop in every spot where it could be concealed. And when they were to be had so cheaply as this week, I would lay in a supply.

Not Pussy Willows.

Not those adorable buds which come forth on the branches of the willows, just to say to us that it is spring; not these but something quite as interesting and far more useful! I refer to something "always wanted" by the woman who is fond of dishes—and what woman is not? The old English willow ware; who does not covet it, if she has it not? And, during the coming week, it is to be had for less and less, and even less than that. A whole set for so small an amount that it will pay to buy it and store away for future possible use; against the time when Edith may marry and need a breakfast set, or when we may be able to afford a beach cottage or a bungalow in the far away hills. Or, if you love that willow ware as you should, you may store away the dishes which you are using and revel in the new, blue set.

Skirts Cut Free.

If you buy your new separate skirt at that store which would not naturally be the seventh choice among stores, you may have it cut for nothing, and cut to your very own measure, too. And for a slight charge just the merest little—you may have it fitted and basted as well. This will all be done by a really excellent tailor, and your skirt problem will have been solved for the coming separate skirt season.

A Motor Restaurant.

"The automobile restaurant" is the clever name applied to that motoring "kit" which makes it possible to dine in the open in comfort—yes, in luxury. You may buy the entire outfit for ever so much less than usual, during the coming week and that at a high-class and reliable store, where quality guarantee goes with the very name of the place, like a trade-mark.

* * *

Fashion's Reflective Mood.

Lavender with a dash of emerald green, composes a fascinating color scheme.

The separate taffeta skirt is almost a necessity in a well-arranged wardrobe.

The more novel the shape and coloring of the parasol, the more fashionable it is.

Bright-colored corduroy skirts are having things all their own way for country wear.

Soutache braiding is having great vogue. They are even trimming linen frocks with it.

The combination of velvet and chiffon holds a prominent place among the new frocks.

Patent leather motifs form a decorative scheme on some of the new gabardine suits.

'Round the Shops.

Madame Holley's work has been commented on in this column before; and reference is again made to her workmanship, which amounts to an art.

Who doesn't have an old gown that they would like to have made over into a smart new style, but to depend on someone who makes a speciality of remodeling and whose work is so satisfactory—well—Madame Holley can be found at 532 Metropolitan building. She also designs and makes up new materials.

A scientific method that removes superfluous hair and roots permanently is used by L. M. Smidt & Co., 825 West 9th street. It is a boon to gentlemen, who wish to remove hair from their arms. This treatment can be used at home.

S. Ando at 310 West 9th street, makes a specialty of repairing fine china and antiques. How glad some ladies will be to know this.

There are many people who would be interested to know of a reliable place to have Panamas and straws cleaned and blocked. You can be assured the A-1 Hat Works, 224 Mercantile Place, will give you satisfaction.

With a method that is entirely different, the Scientific Hair Parlor, No. 515 Fay building, Hill and Third streets, specializes in dyeing the hair.

Have you ever visited the school of French dressmaking and custom shop at 612 Title Guarantee building? Just think—there you can learn under the direct supervision of an expert designer, who will plan, cut and fit for you—to make a perfectly tailored suit or an exquisite evening gown at a big economy of purse. You do your own sewing. This shop also does custom work.

You've surely seen that splendid assortment of Panama hats displayed at Mullen and Bluett's, Broadway at Sixth street. They are so new, with the lovely trimmings of picot ribbon in dainty colors. You can get most any style—a sailor, big, broad ones or smaller, and dressier models, with straight or turned up brim. The bali buntal straw made in the Philippines, makes up into beautiful hats. They are woven so finely and with a touch of ribbon; they are very modish. There were Bangkoks and Leghorns, too.

Some of you perhaps have never visited that exclusive Delft blue and white shop at No. 520 Haas building, Broadway at Seventh, where the Royal Ladies' Tailor is located. Mr. Barnard, who is very recently of New York, has been in this city but a short time, however, many have had the opportunity to wear his costumes. A $75.00 suit for $60.00 and a $60.00 garment for $50.00. This is a special spring feature he is offering, and the wonderful materials to select from—smart gray, English mixtures, plaids and beautiful white gabardines and serges. Another feature of Mr. Barnard's is fancy silk suits in poplins and taffeta—for which he has splendid smart suggestions.

Values up to $17.00 to sell from $1.50 to $6.95—These remarkable reductions mean that the Tiny Waist Shop, 504 W. 7th st., is closing out everything. This includes beautiful crepes, Georgettes, silk and lace blouses, at remarkable prices.

It is just the time of the year when you want to fix up last year's hat for a second best—Sawtelle's—547 South Broadway, make a specialty of remodeling—They also have a line of exclusive millinery at moderate prices.

Miss Jefferson, at her attractive parlors—444 S. Broadway—gives general beauty treatments and shampooing. You will be convinced that it is a pleasure to have her do your work. F1080.

Fifty-three different styles for fifty cents—The Baby Specialty Shop, 734 S. Hill St., makes this announcement, upon the arrival of a huge assortment of shoes for tiny tots. In the sweetest materials—linen, moire and velvet—kids, patent leathers, in pinks, blue, white and black—also cunning sandals—one, two and three straps. You will enjoy looking over these splendid values.

All the freshest fruits and vegetables, also the choicest meats can be found, always, at Young's Market Co., 638 S. Broadway. Asparagus is getting more plentiful and green peas too—the first strawberries are in now. For milk-fed chickens and Willowbrook sausages Young's is the place to go—They also have a splendid line of baked goods, rich cakes and flaky pastry—Ever try them? Phone either Main 5076 or 10632.

Popular Priced Furniture for the Living Room

THESE Jacobean pieces are the most practical types of living-room furniture that can be suggested. The Jacobean is richly finished in the old English—a dull brown—that wears. The construction is durable, substantial, sturdy. Jacobean furniture is built for service and is unhesitatingly recommended.

The best oak, quarter sawed, is used in its building. The design is quaint and pleasing. The upholstering is in rich tapestries. The chairs are roomy and comfortable.

These styles are especially interesting to those desiring to furnish in the out-of-the-ordinary designs at small expense—pieces that combine elegance with economy. The fireside arm rocker, for instance, is but $22.50. Others are higher and lower. The style includes every essential piece for the living room from foot rest to Davenport.

You will be particularly fascinated by the "California" windows this week—one showing exclusive Living Room Furniture and the other some distinctive Chinese Rugs.

Music.

during the musical festival last summer.

Constantino at Fullerton.

A programme of much interest was given by Florencio Constantino and assisting artists last night at Fullerton High School. Among the latter were Mrs. Henrietta Hawley Cole, F. Allwood, M. S. de Lara, Hazel Hoffman and Mrs. Grace Bradley. Operatic numbers, including selections from "Herodiade," "The Girl of the Golden West," "Tosca," "Rigoletto," "Samson and Dalilah," "Andrea Chenier" and other operas were presented by the various singers. One of Constantino's principal numbers was the lament of Johnson from "The Girl of the Golden West." Mrs. Cole sang "One Fine Day" from "Madame Butterfly," and was also heard in a duet from "Tosca" with Constantino.

Musical artists of week.

Mme. Helen Thorner, dramatic soprano, who will be heard in recital Tuesday evening at Trinity Auditorium, and Rudolph Kopp, viola soloist, who will play at the public rehearsal of the Symphony Orchestra Friday afternoon and the concert Saturday evening. He will render the solo part in "Harold in Italy" symphony by Berlioz.

[illegible] Artist.

The whistling concert programme given on February 27 by the winsome Miss Margaret McKee and assisting artists is to be repeated today, with some changes in the individual solos, at Temple Auditorium. At Miss McKee's last concert over 1000 were unable to get in after 3200 persons had been provided with seats in the big Trinity Auditorium.

Miss McKee will have as assisting artists Signorita Lucia Laria, Italian harpist; George Ewing, 'cellist; William Rehrer, violinist, and Ray Hastings, concert organist. Each artist will give individual solos besides assisting with obbligatos to Miss McKee's whistling solos.

Music of Italy.

Italian music will be offered by Dr. Frank Gordon Kingsley at his recital this afternoon at Trinity Auditorium, in which he will be assisted by Mme. [illegible] de Kvapishevska, soprano.

The latter has appeared in opera in Milan, Italy, in "Lucia di Lammermoor," "Rigoletto," "Traviata," "The Barber of Seville," etc., with immense success. Her voice is unusually rich and varied. She can sing equally well light coloratura, as well as the heavy dramatic tones.

Following is the programme: Grand fantasia, "The Girl of the Golden West" (Puccini,) Dr. Kingsley; famous Italian songs, "'O Sole Mio," "Marie, Mari" and "Santa Lucia," Mme. Kvapishevska; prayer from "The Jewels of the Madonna" (Wolf-Ferrari,) Dr. Kingsley; grand opera aria, "The Song of the Birds," from "Pagliacci" (Leoncavallo,) Mme. Kvapishevska; "Dance of the Hours," from "Gioconda" (Pochielli,) Dr. Kingsley; "First Spring" (Tirindelli,) "My Morning" (Denza,) Mme. Kvapishevska, and overture, "William Tell" (Rossini,) by request, Dr. Kingsley.

Woman's Orchestra.

The Woman's Orchestra will make a last appearance this season in a morning musicale, April 9, at Blanchard Hall, at 10:15 o'clock, under the baton of Henry Schoenefeld. A movement from the Haydn Symphony in D major will be played, as well as several selections for the strings, and the [illegible] from the Violin Concerto by [illegible], orchestrated by Harley Hamilton. Soloist will be Mrs. [illegible] Rollins-Wylie, soprano, who will sing "Bird of the Wilderness" by Horsman, "The Green River" by Carpenter and "Yesterday and Today" by Spross. Concert mistress of the orchestra is Miss Bessie Fuhrer. The work of this organization has always been favorably received here.

[illegible] Music for Verses.

The Home Industry League of California, in the Call Building, San Francisco, announces it is conducting a song contest. The league has an official poem they wish to have set to music for adoption as the official song. The form of the music, it is announced, may be march, two-step, one-step, fox trot or waltz. First prize will be $25 and second $15. The closing date is April 14.

Saint-Saens Quintette.

The Saint-Saens Quintette, which fulfills quite a unique function as a leader in things musical, has been having a very successful season this year. The organization has given two concerts at Ebell Club auditorium. At the last the principal number was the [illegible], opus 16, No. 1, by Nawratil; the first movement of a Borodin quartet was also played, beside the "[illegible] Cake," a request number, by [illegible]. Arthur Babcock was the soloist and pleased greatly in a group of numbers by Diaz, Wolf, Class and Tschaikowsky. The personnel of the quintette is as follows: E. H. [illegible], first violin; W. A. Clark, Jr., [illegible] second violin; Carl [illegible], viola; Michael G. Elsoff, 'cello; Will Garroway, piano. The latter took the place of William [illegible] this season, who resigned on account of his duties in connection with the Symphony Orchestra.

Schubert Club.

[illegible] on the next regular programme of the Schubert Club will be [illegible] Tomlinson, contralto; [illegible] Rector, pianiste; Heloise [illegible], violiniste, and Mrs. [illegible], accompaniste. The [illegible] will be given at the Hotel [illegible] next Wednesday afternoon. [illegible] will offer songs by [illegible] Chaminade and others, [illegible] from "In a Persian Garden," by Liza Lehmann. Miss Rector will render the Chopin sonata, Opus 58, and several compositions by Blanchet. Miss Coutelenc will play the obbligato to one of Mrs. Tomlinson's song numbers. Mrs. Tomlinson has spent considerable time in the East of late, and this will be in the nature of a debut locally since her return.

Matinee Musical Club.

Under the auspices of the creative section of the Matinee Musical Club an evening of original music and poetry by nonmembers of the club will be given next Friday, at the Little Theater. The programme is to be presented under the direction of Miss Fannie Dillon, and is as follows: Tone Poem (Thelma Robbins,) Manual Arts String Quintette; "O Golden Sun" (Grace Freebey,) sung by G. Haydn Jones, composer at the piano; nocturne, Intermezzo, "La Source," "Impromptu and Minuetto" (Harold Symth,) composer at the piano; Celtic Lullaby (Mildred Arenz) 'cello obbligato played by Howard Martindale; "Songs of the Winds" (Josephine Heintz,) sung by Mildred Arenz; Original Poems (Ben Field,) three songs of the desert, "Sunset in the Desert," "Night in the Desert" and "Dawn in the Desert," "At Close of Day," "A Golden Thought" (dedicated to Mrs. Mabee,) "Peace" (from War Trilogy) Gertrude Ross, sung by Mrs. Grace Widney M'Abee, composer at the piano; Lyric Pieces, Op. 25, "The Brooklet," "The Song of the Mesa," Concert Waltz in D flat, Op. 21 (Homer Grunn,) composer at the piano.

Massenet Programme.

The music of Jules Massenet will be the subject of the historical recital to be given by Alfred Appling Butler tomorrow evening at his residence, No. 1130 West Twenty-seventh street. Misses Louise Walker and Ruby Edgecomb, assisted by Grace Elsie Moore, will play the French composer's piano Concerto in E Flat Major; Miss Lucie Atwater will sing aria from "Herodiade," Dion Romandy will offer the Meditation from "Thais" and Mrs. Catherine Shank will give a group of songs. The Massenet concerto is new here.

Talks on Operas.

Sydney Francis Hoben, lecture recitalist, recently presented musical talks on "Thais" and "L'Amore dei tre Re," the former before the Ebell Club of Long Beach at the Hotel Virginia, and the latter at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. C. Y. Knight, South Orange Grove avenue, Pasadena. About 500 persons were in attendance at the recital before the Ebell Club. Mr. Hoben was highly complimented both for his playing and elucidation of the stories of the two operas.

Choir Concert.

The recently organized vester choir of the First Congregational Church under the leadership of G. Haydn Jones, will give its first concert this evening. The members will be assisted by the First Congregational Orchestra under the leadership of William H. Mead.

Following is the complete programme: Orchestral prelude, "Prayer" from "Rienzi" (Wagner;) "The Day is Ended" (Bartlett,) Miss Grace James, violin obligato; "A New Heaven and a New Earth," from the "Holy City" (Gaul,) Mr. Page and chorus; "My Faith Looks Up to Thee" (Schnecker,) quartette, with violin obligato; Offertory, "Elegy" (Massenet,) orchestra; "Like as a Hart" (Sterling,) ladies' chorus; "Praise Ye the Father" (Gounod,) chorus and orchestra; Postlude, "Marche et Cortege" (Gounod,) orchestra.

Swedish Music Collection.

Owing to the demand that has arisen as a result of recitals by Swedish artists in this vicinity, and on account of the increase in the Swedish population, a representative collection of the music of that country is to be procured for the public library of this city. When the plan was set on foot, it was decided to secure the assistance of some of the music lovers of the home country to gather together the musical works. According to advices from one of the largest music houses in Sweden the project will be carried out as quickly as possible, and it is expected that the collection will reach here early in the summer.

On Rossini Opera.

"Don Pasquale," opera in three acts, will be the subject of Clement Burbank Shaw's lecture recital at Music Hall, Blanchard Building, next Friday evening. He will be assisted by several vocal artists, with Miss Ethel Summe at the piano.

MUSIC NOTES.

Molly Byerly Wilson's concert engagements in Indiana and Ohio, where she is now filling a series of twenty-five dates during March and April, have included recently Fort Wayne, Indianapolis, and Cincinnati.

Alfredo Tommasino, one of the youngest Italian band leaders in the world, composed a beautiful march, "The San Diego Exposition," to be played at the opening of the fair. Mr. Tommasino is leader of the official exposition band, which is giving two concerts daily.

Jaime Overton, assisted by Anthony Carlson, will give a musical programme today at the residence of Mrs. Katherine Hansen in Santa Barbara.

ON THE OTHER SIDE.

BY JAMES M. WARNACK.

The boys in the office had been talking about the Whichness of the Why Not and the Itness of the Is, and, as I sat in the jolty old street car, my mind was still in the maelstrom of philosophical speculation when suddenly the car crashed headlong into another car at the crossing near my home. There was a sound like the crashing of mighty cymbals, the cry of splintered timbers, the clink-clonk of falling glass, the stifled exclamations of a dozen passengers, a mass of mangled human forms and—

I found myself standing within a circle of mystic gray light in the midst of a little group of men I had never seen before, but a few of whom I recognized, having seen their pictures in books and newspapers. One of them, William Shakespeare by name, approached me and bluntly asked, "What is your business here, sir? Pardon the personal question, but I have an inordinate curiosity. I like to know the what and the why of things in general and in particular, and one of my modes of acquiring knowledge is through inquiry."

I started to speak, but was interrupted.

"Prithee, Shakespeare," sneered Galileo, "be not so concerned with a single soul that has, for some good reason, found its way into our circle. If you are really interested in hastening the glorious destiny of human souls come with me to Mars and combine your influence with mine in teaching those benighted beings a better form of government. Now, Michael Angelo is a practical man and a philanthropist, having learned that he cannot develop his own powers to the full by the practice of 'art for art's sake.' Mike has already assisted the Martians in constructing a canal that is superior to anything of the kind this side of the Milky Way, and he, with my assistance, has filled the minds of the scientists of Mars with the idea of an invention of a searchlight that will afford the Martians a means of communication with that stupid little planet, Earth."

"Galileo," shouted Dante in a voice of thunder, "you are hopelessly involved in inter-stellar politics. Moreover, I have a suspicion that it is not the good of souls that you seek, but your own glory. Shakespeare deserves not the verbal scourging which you have administered. William's curiosity is his greatest asset and, although in time he may overcome it, at present it is perfectly natural to him and therefore a characteristic which he may legitimately utilize. However, I would have him remember that even the perfect knowledge of the natural order of things means nothing, after all, unless he learns to see in each atom of the universe the key to the three kingdoms."

"Hush," whispered Homer. "Here comes Ibsen! What news, Henrik?"

"Hello, Ibbie, what's the good word?" asked everyone in chorus.

Ibsen alighted among them, laughing uproariously. "I've just come from Earth," he chuckled, "and I've had a world of fun. I never was quite sure why I was sent to Earth. I used to wonder if I was a humorist, though I remember now that no one ever laughed much at the stuff I wrote. Now I find that in America there are hundreds of Ibsen clubs trying to interpret me. You remember that while I was down there in the body I dashed off a few pages of some sort of stuff, vainly hoping that there might be a message in it somewhere for a few folks. Well, bless you, the members of these clubs instead of looking for a message to apply to their own lives are trying to find out what I meant by certain lines. If they succeed they'll have me backed off the boards, for heaven knows I don't know what I meant. Over in England, a man named Shaw is explaining me. Do you know him, Bill?"

"Never heard of him," answered Shakespeare.

"Well, he's a clown, but I doubt if he knows it, though lots of other folks do. He seems to take everything and everybody except himself as a big joke. Also, he seems to think he is superior to you, Bill. By the way, the people on Earth are preparing to celebrate the third centennial of your birth. Three cheers for Billie!"

"Oh, they have to have their little celebrations and I guess it's my time to be the goat," drawled Shakespeare.

Socrates grunted. "I've surely had my share," he said. "I suppose I'll never hear the last about that hemlock thing."

"Oh, don't take it to heart so, Sockie," cut in Diogenes. "Now, if you were like me you'd have something to kick about. Imagine how bored I get having every newcomer ask me how it feels to live outside of a tub! Why, even on my last trip to the moon I ran across old Newton and I'll be switched if he didn't go to joshing me about that 'honest man' stuff. Of couse, I knew that Newt had no sense of humor and when I ferreted the thing out I found that Voltaire, Babelais and Bob Burns had put him up to it. Those three fellows pester the life out of me. By gollies, sometimes I think that in coming up here I jumped from the frying pan into the fire."

Victor Hugo frowned at the light turn the conversation had taken and opened his mouth to rebuke the last speaker when Solomon waved him aside and lifted his hand for silence.

"Gentlemen," said Solomon in a calm voice, "you are all out of order. The gentleman from Stratford-on-Avon has the floor. Let us have order and let us be fair. Mr. Shakespeare,, repeat your question."

"As your majesty is aware," began Shakespeare, "ours is the most exclusive order this side the Milky Way, and we cannot be too careful as to the character of the spirits we welcome amongst us. I only wish to inquire of this young man concerning his title to admission within this circle. What have you thought, felt, written, said or otherwise accomplished, sir, that entitles you to a place in this organization?"

"Well," I faltered, "when I was on earth I once wrote an article which the editor of the Los Angeles Times considered worthy of publication in his paper."

"Welcome, brother!" shouted a chorus of voices around me.

Then I opened my eyes and looked sheepishly about me.

"Saturn street! Saturn street!" sang out the conductor, and, as I left the car and walked homeward I wondered if things on the other side were really like what I had seen.

Republic.

Variety is the keynote of the new bill to be offered this week at the Republic. Music, mirth, athletics and dramatic comedy all have their turn before the concluding photoplay, "Bondwomen," starring beautiful Maude Fealy. The two Fostellians will present an aerial novelty act, with some teeth suspensions; May Bond comes billed as a singing comedienne; Hearn and Rutter have a singing and grotesque dancing turn; Toki Murato will present some of the latest novelties in Nipponese athletics; Carroll, Keating and Fay bring with them a comedy sketch entitled "Crow's Nest Inn." A headliner act is that of the Tyler-Sinclair trio, who come heralded as xylphonists extraordinary.

When the war broke out, Wilhelm Moeller, a poor laborer of Schoenberg, Mecklenburg-Schwerin, sent six stalwart sons to the front. The oldest one of them was 33 years old and the youngest, who entered the army as a volunteer, 17. Now all of them are dead. Three were killed in the early stages of the war in Belgium and France, two lost their lives in the great German drive in Poland, and a few days ago the grief-stricken father received the sad news that the last one of his sons had died from wounds in a field hospital in Serbia.

BITS OF VERSE.

Life.

What am I, Life? A thing of watery salt
Held in cohension by unresting cells
Which work they know not why, which never halts;
Myself unwitting where their Master dwells.
I do not bid them, yet they toil, they spin
A world which uses me as I use them.
Nor do I know which end or which begin,
Nor which to praise, which pamper, which condemn.

So, like a marvel in a marvel set,
I answer to this vast, as wave by wave
The sea of air goes over, dry or wet.
Or the full moon comes swimming from her cave
Or the great sun comes north; this myriad I
Tingle, not knowing how, yet wondering why.
—[John Masefield in Atlantic Monthly.

A Bit of Praising.

You like a bit of praising when you've mastered something well,
You like the fragrant roses and the limelight's gleaming spell,
And so does she; she hungers
For a bit of praising too.
In her quiet work-a-day world,
Just the same, perhaps, as you.

You like to feel you've finished what you've started on with skill.
And you like to hear your fellows say you haven't done so ill.
And so does she; from your lips
She would love to hear the thing
That would set her bright eyes beaming,
That would make her spirit sing.

It seems to keep you jogging and to fill you with the steam
That makes the daily effort like a milestone in the dream.
And just as you have hungered
For the praise that men may give
She hungers for your praising
That her heart may sing and live.
—[The Bentztown Bard in Baltimore Sun.

"The Best."

Did you fall in the race?
Did you faint in the spurt
Where the hot dust choked and burned?
Did you breast the tape midst the flying dirt
That the leader's spikes had spurned?
Did you do your best—
Oh, I know you lost. I know that your time was bad.
But the game is not in the winning, lad.
The best of it since the beginning, lad,
Is in taking your licking and grinning, lad,
If you gave them the best you had.
Did your tackle fall short?
Did the runner flash by
With the score that won the game?
Did it break your heart when you missed the try?
Did you choke with the hurt and shame?
If you did your best—
Oh, I know the score; I followed you all the way through.
And that is why I am saying, lad,
That the best of the fight is the staying, lad,
And the best of all games is the playing, lad,
If you give them the best in you.
—[Nelson Robins in Youth's Companion.

OF ART AND ARTISTS.

BY ANTONY ANDERSON.

Rachel.

The dim blue-laced veins on either brow,
'Neath the transparent skin meandering,
That with the silvery-leaved lily vied;
Her full dark eye, whose brightness glistened through
The sable lashes soft as camel-hair;
Her slanting head curved like the maiden moon
And hung with hair luxuriant as a vine
And blacker than a storm; her rounded ear
Turned like a shell upon some golden shore;
Her whispering foot that carried all her weight,
Nor left its little pressure on the sand;
Her lips as drowsy poppies, soft and red,
Gathering a dew from her escaping breath;
Her voice melodious, mellow, deep and clear,
Lingering like sweet music in the ear;
Her neck o'ersoftened like to unsunned curd;
Her tapering fingers rounded to a point;
The silken softness of her veined hand;
Her dimpled knuckles answering to her chin;
And teeth like honeycombs o' the wilderness.

First Annual Exhibition.

No one can question the great interest and importance to us of the first annual exhibition of contemporary American painters, now in full swing in the Exposition Park gallery. Its appearance is an event, a mile stone that at once marks our progress and points the way. While its coming created a storm, it will leave us, on the third day of April, in a spring-like, peaceful hopefulness. Undoubtedly the artistic atmosphere will have cleared most beautifully by that time, and we may proceed to find out "where we are at."

Our fine opportunity for study and comparison will have taught us—you, me, the painters and the jury—many things we ought to know. We may discover (perhaps) that we have some right to a belief in ourselves. We may find that the aims and ideals of art are very much the same in Los Angeles as in New York. We may be willing to admit that we are slightly provincial in our point of view, and that we have been rather bumptious and self-sufficient. We may even condone the alleged offenses of the jury, in the firm belief that all its members did their very best. We may attain to tolerance, justice and broadmindedness. With this noble end in view, let us forget our own little claims and consider the rights of the men who have contributed to our profit and pleasure by sending pictures to the first annual exhibition. Let us examine their wares.

That these wares are all among the very best from the hands of their makers I do not and cannot admit, for such an avowal would belittle the artists themselves. The reasons for the second-rate quality, in the cases where it is apparent, are many and complex. I will offer two that may seem to us sufficiently obscure and amusing. A New York painter wrote to a painter here that small canvases were sent because the New York men did not want to swell our expense account. He also said that it was difficult, in New York, to visualize California—it seems so remote, so intangible, so like fairyland. To send a canvas out here was like flinging it into the vast unknown. Apparently, even landscape painters are not great travelers—they don't know the world, our world.

I understand that no canvas is to be purchased from the present exhibition for the museum, but that the artists who come under consideration for such a purchase will be asked to send out other and better pictures. This is good. Far wiser to go slow and sure than to hurry forward and strap a pile of useless baggage on our backs—baggage that must be discarded, sooner or later, for our own comfort and dignity. Not much use in filling the Exposition Park garrets and basements ahead of time.

Meanwhile, let us look at the pictures now before us, none of which is bad, many of which are good, and a few of which are superlatively good. Among the very good I rank John F. Carlson's poetic little winter piece, "Silvered Stream," which is as subtle as nature itself; Frederick C. Frieseke's "A Corsican Girl," wonderful in its color scheme and arrangement; Richard E. Miller's typical study, "The Scarlet [illegible] C. Olinsky's beautiful [illegible] mother and child, "A [illegible] and I think that's about all. [illegible] some of the others approach so [illegible] that it might be difficult to [illegible] they did not belong to the [illegible] of the choicest.

A few of our own Los [illegible] painters, I regret to record, [illegible] take the trouble to send their [illegible] Hanson Puthuff has done much [illegible] work than appears in "[illegible] the Majestic," Benjamin C. [illegible] Brown better than that in his [illegible] erous, but somewhat coloring [illegible] Jacinto from the Desert," [illegible] Kavanaugh Wachtel more [illegible] composition than is shown in [illegible] beautifully luminous "Spring [illegible] Sierra Madre Foothills." In [illegible] the vitality of Donna [illegible] "Green and Gold," careless [illegible] and forced lights make the [illegible] chalky and peculiarly irritating [illegible] taking thought, the artist might [illegible] painted it so much better.

However, Elmer Wachtel [illegible] forward with a large canvas, [illegible] Midsummer," that is solid, well [illegible] ed and thoroughly [illegible] Edgar Keller with a [illegible] of snow and brook on a [illegible] Helena Dunlap with a vivid [illegible] still-life, "The Veranda [illegible] which the feeling of light [illegible] remarkably well rendered, but [illegible] is yet lacking, in that it [illegible] intimacy of use—glistening [illegible] cups, fruits are all [illegible] Edouard A. Vysekal's "[illegible] ing" is very rhythmical in [illegible] leff Sammann's seascape, "In the [illegible] ning Sun," is a fine and vigorous [illegible] ture. Carl Oscar Borg gives us [illegible] as well as good drawing in "[illegible] Evening."

The vague mists of Indian [illegible] are finely rendered by Emil [illegible] in "Ripening Corn;" the cold [illegible] dawn by that virile painter of [illegible] Armin C. Hansen, in "The [illegible] Pilot;" hidden harmonies of [illegible] color and arrangement by Arthur [illegible] Davis in "New Green and Gold"—[illegible] what in the world does he mean [illegible] the composition and its title? [illegible] W. Benson's "Girl and Dog," [illegible] light and air, seems yet a trifle [illegible] and thin, and cannot be classed [illegible] this fine artist's really good [illegible] ments. Nor is Edward W. [illegible] rightly represented by "The [illegible] Bridge in the Ravine," which [illegible] of his typical winter scenes, [illegible] but which has none of the [illegible] magic that Redfield is often the [illegible] ter of. Jack Gage Stark gives [illegible] light, brilliant and golden, [illegible] small study of "Walnut Creek," [illegible] find myself unable to agree [illegible] violent purple shadows. C. P. T[illegible] ley is a trifle dry and wiry, but [illegible] attractive, in his little study of [illegible] and white roses.

Winter's poetry is found in [illegible] Daniel Garber's picture from [illegible] Hudson River; decorative [illegible] of dull color in Betty de Jong's "[illegible] Dancer;" the truth of frosty [illegible] Chauncey F. Ryder's "School [illegible] in Winter;" twilight's tenderness [illegible] Horatio Walker's "Shepherd [illegible] Sheep;" night's mystery in Birge Har[illegible] rison's beautiful "Moonrise in Ch[illegible] ton Harbor;" California's atmo[illegible] and feeling in Maurice Braun's "[illegible] Loma Hill" and Frank A. [illegible] "The Bridge;" something of the [illegible] spirit of the old masters in [illegible] Genth's "The Man of Tomorrow," [illegible] bratory color in Sydney Dale [illegible] picture of New York, "Wintry [illegible] which somehow suggests a [illegible] Dickens.

William Ritschel contributes [illegible] perb picture of the open sea, [illegible] Derelict;" Guy Rose a charming [illegible] all shimmering green and gold, [illegible] Bridge," in which the technique [illegible] an almost feminine [illegible] Charles Rosen a vigorous [illegible] snow on russet fields; Karl A. [illegible] a lovely bit of color called "[illegible] ette." Buehr's "Harvest Time" [illegible] good sky, but in other respects [illegible] and superficial, almost papery [illegible] textures. Rosenthal's two [illegible] city girls are as brilliantly [illegible] beautifully superficial as the [illegible] themselves.

Hitherto John H. Rich has [illegible] inclined to over-refinement, but [illegible] is no evidence of this tendency [illegible] "The Necklace," which, while [illegible] plays little of the beauty of [illegible] so usual in his other canvases [illegible] a way, all the better for the [illegible] it has vigor and directness. I [illegible] sider it one of his best pictures. [illegible] certain naive simplicity, almost [illegible] chaic, is found in Charles W. [illegible] thorne's little portrait, "The [illegible] gay." D. Putnam Brinley has [illegible] with considerable success, to [illegible] light in "The Emerald Pool," [illegible] nevertheless the light is pretty [illegible] —and the canvas is five times [illegible] than it need be. We find a [illegible] of cloud in Gittardo [illegible] Song of the Marshland," a [illegible] grandeur in De Witt [illegible] "Dawn, Grand Canyon."

William V. Cahill's picture, "[illegible] paring for the Bal Masque," [illegible] in color, drawing and [illegible] buxom girl in green is [illegible] before her mirror. There is [illegible] sweep to her army and her [illegible] still-life accessories are also [illegible] well done—though, to be [illegible] Dresden china bowl with its [illegible] and grapes seems a trifle out of [illegible] dragged into the composition [illegible] color. I like all the painting [illegible] picture but the background, [illegible] perfunctory, lacking in quality.

By the way, almost all the [illegible] women in the gallery are gazing [illegible] mirrors. Do the artists mean to [illegible] timate that this is the favorite [illegible] pation of women? Let us [illegible] Let us rather believe—what is [illegible] ably the truth—that the pretty [illegible] time—pretty and brief—is [illegible] representation because it [illegible] painters such golden opportunities [illegible] a display of their cleverness [illegible] nique. Let us assume the [illegible] vanity, if we must—[illegible] women!

SOCIETY.

A DEBUTANTE'S LETTER.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.

Dear Louise: I thought I would try to abstain from gossiping during Lent—don't you think that is a good idea? But, of course, as this is St. Patrick's Day—well, Sundays and [illegible] days are exempt, you know.

One observes that Mrs. John Percival Jones is indulging a very cultivated Lenten penance. She is aiding and abetting that attractive Mrs. [illegible] in giving a series of culture [illegible] by lending her charming home on West Adams for the purpose and herself acting as high [illegible] for the occasion. We are [illegible] data and reminiscences on [illegible], my dear, that we may wear [illegible] of conscious knowledge when [illegible] initiated accomplice kindly brings up the subject in casual conversation. Casual references to [illegible] art are so refined. Tactfully utilized, they can condone an extra inch of leg, modify a risque back [illegible] exhibit, and even justify a [illegible].

Talking of cigarettes, Anthony says no self-respecting male would smoke the things, they are so feminine. La! It gives one to think. If only the men could be relied upon to taboo the effeminate, all we have to do is self-sacrificingly take up all their [illegible] in order to completely reform them. Who knows but what they will disdain cocktails and high-balls presently—the nasty effeminate things.

I heard a man sneering at golf as an effeminate game recently, which reminds me, the women's Southern California championship begins on Monday morning at the Midwick Country Club and it looks as if we are to have a big party. Mrs. Luther [illegible] is coming up from Coronado and is bringing her little sister, Mildred Smith, who has the distinction of receiving a special invitation from the association. They say she is by way of being an embryo champion, plays as good a game as Isabel before her marriage.

And then, there is the State championship at San Francisco, beginning April 11. Mrs. Fulton is trying to make up a party to go up for it. The San Francisco Golf Club is laying itself out to entertain the southern [illegible].

[illegible] Neville brought his charming [illegible] down with him for the invitation men's tournament, and they stayed with the Arthur Bralys. Isn't it delightful to see a handsome mamma and son so devoted? Mrs. E. R. [illegible] went over to the club one of the afternoons. She is wearing one of those tricky Scotch plaid skirts [illegible] glorified French Scotch plaid, [illegible] not the fierce uncompromising [illegible] article) and they certainly do look smart on the right figure. We shall see some wonderful sporting [illegible] this week at Midwick.

[illegible] you, oh, have you seen the [illegible] hats? Enormous affairs, just like that cartwheel we had eight years ago. It is all very well for the tall girls but the small women are going to look all hat and ridiculously top-heavy. Usually Dame Fashion has a certain sense of proportion, when she gives us wide skirts, she gives petite hats and narrow shoulders. But now skirts, shoulders and hats are all bulging ominously, with yards round the hem, fichus, elbow ruffles and a half a mile of [illegible] shall have to start an agitation for widening seats in street cars and theaters.

It is awful to see what a difference a little sartorial trick can make in one's appearance. Did you see Bessie [illegible] at the Orpheum? In her first [illegible] she is the essence of graceful [illegible], as dainty and refined as a summer cloud. But when she comes in a perfectly good black tulle hat and a shimmery silver gown she looks [illegible] and unequivocally fast. The difference was quite shocking, especially as it was the sort of hat most of us might have thought was in good form. And her red velvet [illegible] evening cloak is another [illegible], yet I doubt not it would look irresistibly stunning on a store [illegible] which any of us might have been tempted to buy. Oh, my young [illegible], do be careful. It is so much better to dominate one's clothes than to be dominated by them; to be a little more improper than one looks rather than to look more improper than one is. Why deliberately pile up [illegible] circumstantial evidence?

There is a distinct penchant these days to collect good-looking men—more fashionable than art and china [illegible] just now. One very prominent hostess carries her penchant so far that she is prepared to recognize [illegible] she never noticed before if they happen to have a handsome male [illegible]. It is a great opportunity [illegible] hovering on the brink of the [illegible] inner circle—the successful [illegible] of a beautiful man or two [illegible] gushing hostesses across to [illegible] with a beautiful display of [illegible] affection which is quite [illegible].

Did you hear about the awkward contretemps when a certain [illegible] European fiance was asked by his bride-elect to choose her [illegible] hats? They sat him in a [illegible] chair with a protruding nail at [illegible] millinery salon, and when he rose there was a long calamitous rip that drew all eyes in his direction. "Oh, [illegible] confound it, don't you know," [illegible] the distressed gentleman [illegible] vainly endeavored to conceal a [illegible] slit with a painfully inadequate glove. They lent him a big [illegible] to hang around him as he made [illegible] and embarrassed way to the [illegible] opposite, the while every [illegible] in the establishment watched [illegible] the road with unconcealed [illegible].

Lent is the proper season for reducing exercises, and there is grim determination in the boudoirs these days. One authority has insisted that [illegible] before breakfast will effect [illegible]. A society leader, whose figure has always been one of her chief [illegible], confesses to a hundred kicks [illegible] and with so socially eminent [illegible] matutinal kicks are distinctly de rigueur, my dear.

[illegible] can have quite a generous [illegible] of fun in Lent if it is engineered under the guise of charity. That is why the fashion show at the [illegible] on Saturday is a strictly [illegible] affair, and besides the several [illegible] professional manikins [illegible] of the smart Pasadena [illegible] parading their newest [illegible].

An interesting English visitor has [illegible] the submarines, Mrs. Brevetor [illegible], formerly a California girl, [illegible] of Mrs. Herbert Goudge, arrived last week. She brought her little [illegible] with her and will make quite a long stay. Her handsome young [illegible] is fighting in France.

[illegible] Hickox gave a delightful St. Patrick's Day luncheon bridge [illegible] at the San Gabriel Country Club in honor of Mrs. Foster and Mrs. [illegible]. By the way, did you know that [illegible] was receiving all the artificial shamrocks and Irish souvenirs this year, cutting out Germany's erstwhile prerogative?

So long, cherie, give our love to the new baby,

Your irrepressible BETTY.

The Lenten Recess.

For the first time in aeons, Milady is actually having a breathing spell. During the past week have been chronicled less society happenings than in any seven days of the year. And it has been a gay year, with two expositions drawing celebrities to the city and State to wine and dine.

The first penitential mood of Lent is the cause of the pause. There have been just sufficient entertainments to keep the pendulum swinging, though more or less informal.

St. Patrick's Day, with its accompaniments of harps, pipes, Paddy's pigs and hats, snakes and shamrocks, offers far too artistic decorative possibilities to let the particular season slip by unnoticed, and most of the affairs of the week have let the emerald insignia of ould Erin embellish some charming luncheons and teas.

Through the artifices of Mrs. Frank Griffith and Mrs. Walter R. Leeds, some of the favored bachelors of the city are to be hosts during Lent at the twice-a-month dinner dances at the Los Angeles Country Club, which, no matter what else occupies the social calendar, will attract the elite to the pretty country rendezvous. The men are sticklers for informality and sport clothes are the latest word in proper dress. (Just as though they aren't about the most reekingly beautiful and expensive toilette extant.) Last Wednesday evening Frank Simpson, Jr., gave a smart dinner for the initial bachelor affair, having for guests Mrs. John Percival Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Griffith, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Weeks Banks, Miss Marie Louise Bryant, Miss Louise Hunt, Miss Amy Busch, Miss Albertine Pendleton, Miss Eleanor Banning, Miss Mary Hughes, Miss Marjorie Tufts, Miss Eleanor Workman, Miss Elizabeth Parsons, Miss Marion Wigmore, Miss Dorothy Lindley, Miss Katharine Torrance, Miss Cecile Call, Miss Jane Richardson and Miss Marjorie Fleming and Messrs. Joseph Banning, Jr., William Kay Crawford, Asa Call, Frank Seaver, Clarence Hobiltzelle, Robert Craig, Neil Brown, Paul Herron, Arden Day, John Garner, Wheeler Chase, Ninian Wolfe, Rankin, William Van Fleet, Fritz Demmler, Chester Shepherd, Harrell Harrell and Gonzales Munoz.

Dr. and Mrs. Herman Janss were also hosts, having with them a party of ten friends.

The personnel of "eligibles" who will do the honors until Easter in dispensing hospitality is: George Ennis, Carl C. Klokke, William R. Millar, Ygnacio Mott, Gurney E. Newlin, Henry C. Nutt, R. J. Cash, Jr., Adolph L. Schwarz, Frank Simpson, Jr., Alfred H. Wilcox, Dwight Whiting, Robert Thresher, Lieut. John Henry Newton, Charles Seyler, Walter Van Pelt, Leo Welsh and Charles Orr.

The only other really large party of the week was given by Mrs. Stoddard Jess Thursday afternoon in welcome to Mrs. E. G. Roberts, wife of the former State Treasurer. They have come from their San Bernardino home to be permanent residents of the city, her husband having assumed the vice-presidency of the First National Bank.

Several hundred guests were received between 3 and 6 o'clock at the handsome Jess home, No. 2133 Harvard boulevard, the hostess being assisted by a number of ladies: Mrs. George Reynolds of Chicago, wife of the eminent banker; Mrs. Charles E. Seaman; Mrs. James Tabor Fitzgerald, Mrs. E. S. Pauly, Mrs. H. M. Binford, Mrs. Willis H. Booth, Mrs. George I. Cochran, Mrs. Walter Perry Story, Mrs. George Goldsmith, Mrs. A. B. Jones, Mrs. Oscar Mueller, Mrs. Herman Baruch, Mrs. A. E. Edwards of Pasadena, Mrs. T. H. Phillips, Mrs. W. J. Washburn, Mrs. Sidney Haskell, Mrs. Lee Phillips, Mrs. E. J. Price, Mrs. J. A. Kerr, Mrs. J. O. Koepfli, Mrs. Josie Witmer, Mrs. J. E. Fishburn, Mrs. C. O. Nourse, Mrs. George B. Jess, Miss June Braun, Miss Victoria Witmer, Miss Helen Martin, Miss Angelita Phillips, Miss Elsie Baruch and Miss Ada B. Williams.

The drawn shades excluded daylight from the rooms, a soft illumination coming from myriads of candelabra and crystal electroliers. The floral motif was very beautiful, with a wealth of stately long-stemmed American Beauty roses and delicate ferns and palms employed with artistry in the reception and living-rooms and in the cheery sun parlor, while fragrant apple blossoms—great flowering stalks of them—radiated spring time in the library. Captivating music from a harp and violin orchestra came from a floral bower in the hall, done in flaming gladioli and snap dragons and tropical palms.

Violets and jonquils with billows of filmy tulle adorned the tea table, where an elaborate collation was dispensed by a bevy of pretty girls in summery frocks.

Altogether it was one of the most perfectly appointed of the spring teas, distinguished by the handsome gowns of the assemblage of women in attendance.

The morning musicale at the Alexandria Tuesday under the direction of Henri La Bonti was made the motif for several luncheon parties, Mrs. John Shepherd, Mrs. William Howe Kennedy and Mrs. Walter L. Dodge forming one; Mrs. Dean Mason had Mrs. George J. Denis, Mrs. Randolph Huntington Miner, Mrs. R. H. M. Strong and Mrs. Ernest A. Bryant. Mrs. Denis had guests at the musicale prior to Mrs. Mason's informal luncheon.

Mrs. Albert McFarland Bonsall, Mrs. Ernest C. Hamilton and Mrs. Bonsall, her mother, Mrs. Harry Colburn Turner and her house guests, Mrs. Manley T. Pooler, Mrs. Vernon Goodwin, Mrs. David H. McCartney and Mrs. Robert Burdette and her house guest, Mrs. James Foley, wife of the poet, were among the guests who added to the distinguished personnel.

The musicales will furnish an avenue of enjoyment and sociability during the Lenten season, for one must needs go in for the philanthropic, the musical, the literary now, rather than the formal mode of entertaining.

Miss Hazel Adele Buckius.
Miss Helen Snow
Miss Dorothy Crumley.
Miss Marybelle Peyton.

Prominent in social affairs.

Miss Hazel Adele Buckius is soon to wed Lawrence H. Rogers. Miss Marybelle Peyton is a charming girl whose engagement was anounced a week ago. Miss Helen Snow is a much entertained visitor from Pittsburgh. Miss Dorothy Crumley was a recent hostess at a pretty function.

Honoring Pittsburghers.

Miss Helen Snow, a very beautiful young girl who is being much entertained since her arrival from Pittsburgh, and her mother, Mrs. George Snow of Gray Manor, in the eastern city, are to furnish the inspiration for a large tea which the latter's sister, Mrs. Jeanette Patterson Moffat of Gramercy Circle at Twenty-fourth street is to give next Friday afternoon.

Assisting will be Mrs. Henry Clay King, Mrs. Victor Emden, Miss Leonora Peter of Akron, O., Mrs. Baker P. Lee, Mrs. T. A. Williams, Miss Ella True, Mrs. Sarah A. Kenny of Pittsburgh and Miss Florence Howard.

Mrs. and Miss Snow are now planning their return east for the first week in April, and have pursuaded Mrs. Moffat to accompany them for a visit of generous length.

Mrs. A. D. Houghton gave a smart tea for the visitors Friday afternoon, and that evening the Kings gave a dinner at the Los Angeles Athletic Club St. Patrick's affair. Mrs. Moffat has also contributed frequent informals for both her sister and attractive niece, whose stay has been one long happy series of parties.

Wednesday at the Alexandria Miss Peter, who by the way is an intimate friend of the Snows in the East, and Mrs. Henry Clay King had a tea in prima donna rosebuds and maidenhair, others at table, in addition to Mrs. and Miss Snow and Mrs. Moffat, being Mrs. L. H. Carroll, Mrs. F. A. Kenny of Pittsburgh, Mrs. I. Henry Harris, Mrs. S. A. Harper of London, Eng.; Mrs. E. A. Preuss, Mrs. Victor Emden, Mrs. Brent, Miss Florence Howard, Miss Bernice Marcher and Mrs. H. A. Hixcox and the hostesses.

To Become a Benedict.

Wilbur Bassett, whom his friends considered one man safe and invincible from the little Love God's wiles, is to become a benedict.

Miss Margaret Mary Ridge of Douglas, the Isle of Man, is to sail from Liverpool, next Saturday to become the Angeleno's bride. She will arrive in New York about April 2 and come direct to the City of the Angels, where she will be the guest of an aunt, Mrs. White Smith of Wilshire boulevard and Commonwealth avenue, until April 12, the date of the interesting nuptials.

Mr. Bassett is a Harvard man and entered into a lucrative law practice ten years ago when he came fresh from school to this city. He has been secretary of the Harvard Club several years and active as well in the University Club, where he has several times distinguished himself as leader of the merry "jinks." He is vice-president of the Pacific division of the Associated Harvard Clubs. His father was Lieut. Fletcher S. Bassett of the navy and his mother lives at the Leighton. Active in yachting circles, "Judge" Bassett, as he is more frequently called, is identified in both the South Coast and Sunset Yacht clubs.

Before last year the attorney was supposedly a confirmed bachelor. Then the English girl arrived here. The groom-elect has a pretty home nearly ready on Ardmore Heights, which to suit his bride-to-be is built after the English style, with high ceilings and a well-lighted studio, for the future Mrs. Bassett is a graduate of the Royal Academy in London and a water-color artist of ability. Artist Greenbaum and other local painters have been profuse in their praises of her technique and method.

Miss Ridge has been in the Isle of Man since last October, preparing her trousseau, and will be warmly welcomed upon her arrival.

Miss Bulla to Wed.

Robert N. Bulla formally announces the engagement of his daughter, Vivian Olive, to Ormond S. Butler, son of S. Melvin Butler of Los Angeles. No time has been definitely decided for the wedding, which, on account of the prominence of both families, will be of paramount social interest in Southern California.

Miss Bulla is a beautiful young girl, a graduate at Ramona College, near this city, and a native California, as is Mr. Butler, who was graduated at St. Vincent's College. The young people and their families have been friends many years and the betrothal is an especially happy event.

Another Announcement.

T. M. Kell of the Woodward announces the engagement of his niece, Miss Mora M. Parkinson, to Jack Young of Roosevelt, Ariz. The wedding will be an event of the summer. At present the prospective bride is doing post-graduate work for her M.A. degree at the University of Southern California. Her fiance is an engineer connected with the reclamation service and will take his bride to Roosevelt to live.

Romance by the Sea.

As the culmination of a romance covering the past twelve months, Miss Aimee Cornelia Edwards and Charles Harry McClain plighted their troth in the First Baptist Church of Hollywood last Monday afternoon, at the twilight hour of 5 o'clock, Dr. Albert Hatcher Smith, officiant, using the ring service, so beautifully impressive in its simplicity. Selections from "Lohengrin" were rendered by Harry James Beardsley, the young pianist.

The decorations were especially effective, the I. S. W. Sunday-school class, of which the bride was a charter member, having under the direction of Miss Ruth McCalla, blended the class colors, yellow and green, into a lovely altar and background for the marriage by the use of potted palms and the dainty blossom of the golden-shaded brassica.

The bride, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin C. Edwards, and a sister of Miss Virginia Leavelle, and Clarence Gambrell Edwards, wore a tailleur of white silk serge, made belted coat, and her hat was a combination of white and gold net. She carried a white satin Bible and her bouquet, of valley lilies, orchids and maidenhair ferns, was later caught by Miss Barbara Lamkin of Los Angeles, who, according to the tradition, will herself approach Cupid's altar 'ere another year rolls by.

After felicitations from friends and a drive to Venice, where for a year the Edwards have resided at No. 24 Park avenue, the wedding supper was served. It was also the celebration of the 21st birthday of the bride.

Mrs. McClain, who is a Mississipian by birth, was reared in Hollywood, where she attended high school and later Holman College. The groom is the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob McClain of Philadelphia, but for some time has lived in California, making his home in Venice, where he is closely affiliated, through his ability as a violinist, with professional musical circles. His wife also is musical, having a voice of remarkable strength and appeal.

The newlyweds left Monday night on a honeymoon trip, the bride's going-away gown being of biscuit color and green cloth, with chic hat to match. The destination was not divulged, but upon their return they are to reside at the Freeman, Westminster avenue, Venice.

Of Interest Here.

The wedding of Miss Elizabeth Cohen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Cohen of San Francisco, to Sidney K. Lehman, of this city, is to be conducted next Wednesday evening at the Sorosis Club, in the northern city.

Vassar Dean Honored.

Mrs. Elbert Wing of West Adams street entertained luncheon guests yesterday in compliment to Miss Ella McCaleb, the dean of Vassar College, who has been in Southern California a few days, the guest of Miss A. B. Orton, of the Orton school, Pasadena. There are many alumnae in this vicinity who hope to entertain for Miss McCaleb while she is here; in fact, Mrs. Wing had mostly Vassar graduates at her happy affair yesterday.

To Meet Mrs. Harper.

Miss Fanny Wills gave a tea at her home, No. 501 Buena Vista street, yesterday afternoon for Mrs. Ida Huested Harper.

Mrs. Loring's Afternoon.

An extremely delightful afternoon was that spent by Mrs. F. L. Loring's friends at her beautiful home on San Rafael Heights Wednesday. A number of invitations had been issued to hear Miss Kathleen O'Brennan, who gave a truly Irish programme of the folk poets of the Renaissance—a recital full of pathos and humor, with her own witty stories were interwoven as folk poems. At the conclusion of the programme Miss O'Brennan was presented with a basket of shamrocks tied with green ribbon. The guests were entertained at a daintily-served tea in the handsome library, Miss Maud Daggett, the sculptress, presiding.

Visitor Hostess.

Sixty-five guests enjoyed the gracious hospitality of Mrs. John M. Burgner of Kansas City, who on Thursday entertained at bridge in the sun parlor at the Rampart. Among the guests were several Kansas City ladies. Mr. and Mrs. Burgner, with their two daughters, have spent the past three winters at the Rampart, where they feel fully as much at home by reason of many pleasant friendships, as in their own large Missouri home. Both the young ladies are being educated in private schools of the Southwest. Mr. Burgner is a wealthy lumberman and his wife a delightful society woman of their home city.

Operatic Star Dines.

Miss Ava Wilson, a student at Cumnock School, entertained as a guest at an informal dinner during the week Miss Margaret Jarman, the famous opera singer. Other guests of Miss Wilson were the faculty and students of the school who live in the dormitory, with Misses Martha Weaver and Helen Brooks as chaperones. Dinner was served in the house in the garden.

Mrs. Wyatt's Musicale-tea.

The pretty home of Mrs. William Tremain Wyatt at No. 329 South Coronado street was on Friday afternoon of last week the scene of a charmingly-appointed musicale and tea, when the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Fred A. Stephenson and Mrs. William Henry Cline, received a large coterie of prominent society and musical folk.

Golden jonquils and other spring flowers decked the spacious rooms. Mrs. Wyatt presented to the guests Miss Lillian Chancer, a slip of a girl of but 17, yet one who comes from London and the East with flattering notices as to her ability at the piano, which she proved Friday by her brilliant playing. Later, Miss Chancer is to have a public appearance.

Other artists who lent their ability to the afternoon's programme were Albert Tessier, a Los Angeles boy of 12, who astounded all with his own compositions at the piano; Agnes Lindanger; Mildred Dawson, a dramatic soprano and a young girl who has been coached by Shakespeare in London; Mrs. Stephenson, in splendid, colorful vocal numbers, accompanied by Miss Chancer, and Mrs. L. C. Makinson, who gave delightfully Gertrude Ross's "Dawn of the Desert," accompanied by the composer. Mrs. Ross also accompanied Miss Dawson.

Tea was served in the dining-room, which was a mass of yellow spring blossoms. The music, the decorations, the entire detail of the party was most artistic, and among those gracing the occasion were Mrs. Jotham Bixby, Jr., Mrs. A. L. Selby, Mme. Ellen Beach Yaw, Mrs. Ben Thorp, Mrs. Charles Sumner Kent, Madame Constance Balfour, Mrs. Walter Brush, Herr and Frau Adolph Tandler, Mr. and Mrs. Roland Paul, Mrs. Charles H. Lippincott, Mrs. J. Mr. Fanning Returns.

Cecil Fanning, singer, poet and artist, arrived in Los Angeles from the East Friday, in company with Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Turpin, and they are now domiciled at the Hershey Arms for a stay of generous length. Mr. Fanning won a great triumph here by his art and personality during his previous visit last year, and his return, as is that of the Turpins, who are charming people, is heralded with acclaim. He had phenomenal success on his recent tour throughout the East. His first appearance in 1916 in California will be in the Romanesque room at the Green tomorrow afternoon. Mr. Fanning represents Ohio artists in sculpture at the great California exposition, the pedestal chosen bearing upon it the legend, "Le Chanteus, portrait bust of Mr. Cecil Fanning, the singer-poet of Ohio, by M. E. Cook." It is a remarkable piece of work, happily combining sculpture, poetry and music, and stands for one of the greatest honors ever bestowed on a singer in America.

Their arrival will immediately start a continual round of entertainments, social and artistic, for the trio of visitors. Maj. and Mrs. L. L. Krebs are to receive for Mr. Fanning today at their Sierra Madre home, and others have expressed a wish to contribute to the festivities in the near future.

Dancing Party.

No more festive social event was enjoyed during the week than that which last night had for hosts Mr. and Mrs. George H. Bishop, who, at their beautiful home, No. 606 South Manhattan place, gave a merry dinner-dance. The ballroom was decorated with innumerable red and green miniature balloons, which swayed with the devotees of Terpsichore as they went through the mazes of the modern dances, and spring flowers and greenery lent beauty to the dining-room and parlors.

Bidden were Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bishop, Mr. and Mrs. William Mead, Mr. and Mrs. Willis Hunt, Judge and Mrs. Finlayson and Miss Finlayson, Mr. and Mrs. Paul English, Judge Wheaton A. and Mrs. Gray, Mr. and Mrs. William Thomas, J. Bell Bishop and Miss Helen Thomas, Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Pauly, Mr. and Mrs. Edwards, Mrs. Eldridge, Mrs. Holmes, Mrs. Thompkins, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Phillips and Messrs. Obershauf, Farren, H. Culver, Paul Herron, Hoag, Buckingham.

For Wednesday.

Mrs. A. M. V. Shermerhorn will give a large tea at the Alexandria Wednesday afternoon for Mrs. G. E. Tomlinson, following the Schubert musical programme, which Mrs. Tomlinson and Miss Wilhelmina Rector are to present.

Pink Luncheon.

Miss Juanita Lane, No. 1032 Grattan street, entertained during the past week with a luncheon of handsome appointments in the rose room of the Sierra Madre Club. The board was banked in pink rosebuds, maidenhair fern and fluffy bows of tulle, which radiated to hand-painted place cards in gold lettering. Daylight was excluded, the only illumination coming from candelabra holding pink tapers with silk shades. After luncheon games of auction were played, the high scores being made by Misses Rector and Harris. Those who enjoyed the hospitality included Mrs. Frances L. Brown, Mrs. Walter Overell, Mrs. Frederick Jungquist, Mrs. E. Mathew Finehout, Mrs. Harlan Clatworthy, Mrs. Earl Rogers, Mrs. Howard Clark, Mrs. Frank Boettcher, Miss Willie McClelland, Miss Adelaide Hall, Miss Anna McGarry, Miss Danford, Miss Agnes Weber, Miss Florence Howard, Miss Cora Boettcher, Miss Fannie Harris, Miss Wilhelmina Rector and Miss Kate Goodwin.

Capt. and Mrs. John McDermaid and their daughter, Miss Mae McDermaid of Rockford, Ill., who are spending the winter with their daughter and sister, respectively, Mrs. Mattson A. Morrill, No. 1042 West Thirty-eighth street, were the complimented guests the past week at a smart dinner party given by Mr. and Mrs. William Wick at their home, No. 1644 Westmoreland boulevard. Covers were laid for twenty-four at an oval board centered in woodland violets and maidenhair. Gold-edged cards done in violets marked places.

Selecting the Engagement Ring

Because of the sentiment that attaches to the giving of the engagement ring—the selection of a perfect stone, no matter how small, is of infinite importance.

Hundreds of engagement rings are selected from the important stock carried by this establishment because of its widely-known reputation for integrity and acknowledged supremacy in diamond merchandising.

Whether you intend to pay $10 or $1000 for the stone—you will receive greater value for your money here than at establishments of lesser importance in Los Angeles and throughout Southern California. The prestige carried by the name "Nordlinger" on the ring box is also a valuable consideration.

Told in a Simple Way

No Apparatus, Inhalers, Salves, Lotions, Harmful Drugs, Smoke or Electricity.

Heals Day and Night

It is a new way. It is something absolutely different. No lotions, sprays or sickly smelling salves or creams. No atomizer, or any apparatus of any kind. Nothing to smoke or inhale. No steaming or rubbing or injections. No electricity or vibration or massage. No powder; no plasters; no keeping in the house. Nothing of that kind at all. Something new and different, something delightful and healthful; something instantly successful. You do not have to wait, and linger and pay out a lot of money. You can stop it over night—and I will gladly tell you how—FREE. I am not a doctor and this is not a so-called doctor's prescription—but I am cured and my friends are cured, and you can be cured. Your suffering will stop at once like magic.

I Am Free—You Can Be Free

My catarrh was filthy and loathsome. It made me ill. It dulled my mind. It undermined my health and was weakening my will. The hawking, coughing, spitting made me obnoxious to all, and my foul breath and disgusting habits made even my loved ones avoid me secretly. My delight in life was dulled and my faculties impaired. I knew that in time it would bring me to an untimely grave, because every moment of the day and night it was slowly yet surely sapping my vitality.

But I found a cure, and I am aready to tell you about it FREE. Write me promptly.

Risk Just One Cent

Send no money. Just your name and address on a postal card. Say: "Dear Sam Katz: Please tell me how you cured your catarrh and how I can cure mine." That's all you need to say. I will understand, and I will write to you with complete information, FREE, at once. Do not delay. Send postal card or write me a letter today. Don't think of turning this page until you have asked for this wonderful treatment that can do for you what it has done for me.

Today's Beauty Talk

You can make a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost if you get from your druggist a package of canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and rub briskly. This creates an abundance of thick, white lather that thoroughly dissolves and removes all dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly, with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that make arranging it a pleasure.

In Congenial Atmosphere.

Mrs. Bertha Kuns Baker was the guest of honor at a dinner at The House in the Garden, Cumnock School, Thursday evening, with Miss Martha Weaver and Miss Helen Brooks as her hostesses, and other members of the faculty and students, also present. Mrs. Baker, who is a well-known clubwoman, lecturer and author of New York City, is spending several weeks in Los Angeles and is giving a series of readings at Cumnock Hall.

Mrs. Churchill North.

Mrs. Owen Humphreys Churchill has been in Palo Alto, where, as the guest of William A. Shedd, head master of Manzanita Hall, and Mrs. Shedd, she recently assisted chaperoning a merry dancing party given to the fair young ladies of Miss Harker's and the Castilleja schools. It will be remembered that the Shedds have frequently been guests at the Churchill home in this city. Mrs. Churchill usually spends much of her time while north in San Francisco, as well, were she comes in for much entertaining.

To Northern Home.

After a delightful ten-day sojourn in Santa Monica Mr. and Mrs. F. Waldo Coleman have returned to their home in San Francisco. They have been visiting the former's brother and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George E. Coleman, at their beautiful beach home.

Card Club Entertained.

The Aloha Club was charmingly entertained at the home of Mrs. A. E. Taber recently. The decorations were in potted plants and calla lilies. Luncheon was served promptly at 12 o'clock to sixteen ladies, the hostess being assisted in serving by Mrs. S. P. Bearden and Mrs. Johansen. After luncheon a short business meeting was transacted and the club day was changed from Friday to Wednesday.

Cards were played until 4 o'clock. The first prize, a beautiful cut-glass dish, was awarded to Mrs. George Haigh. The other prize was won by Mrs. G. Miller.

The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. George Miller March at her home, No. 1625 Wall street.

With Genista.

At the Friday night dinner dance at the Beverly Hills hotel, a weekly event which is popular with society folks from town as well as with the guests of the hotel, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. McCourt, Miss Norma Cornwall, Miss Katharine Reynolds, Miss Virginia Reynolds, Edward Rowe, Stanley Guyot, A. Leithch and Wallace Wagy. The table was attractively decorated with genista.

Miss del Valle Honoree.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginaldo del Valle were hosts at an informal Five Hundred party Friday night, at their home, No. 3508 South Figueroa street. All the decorations were significant of St. Patrick's Day, as were the place and score cards. A delightfully appointed supper was served at the close of the evening. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. Dinwiddie of Frankfort, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Riedel, Mr. and Mrs. Weston, Misses Nellie and Lizzie Weston, Mr. and Mrs. Stott, Miss Mary Drew, Mr. Clayton Luckey.

Mrs. del Valle was assisted by her daughter, Lucretia del Valle, of Mission Play fame, who has recently returned from a social trip into Arizona and is receiving many courtesies at the hands of her California friends. Sunday afternoon Frank Rust will hold a reception in her honor at his fascinating California home, while Monday evening she is to be the guest of honor at a dinner party at the Hotel Virginia.

Athletic Club Gay.

The Los Angeles Athletic Club saw a period of brilliant entertaining in the week just closed, many of the socially prominent sharing in the dinner and luncheon giving. While the largest interest, perhaps, centered in the St. Patrick's Day dance Friday, yet there were dinners and other diversions in plenty to make the week particularly memorable.

Especially enjoyable were the luncheons given Tuesday in the Ladies Annex by Mrs. John W. Monahan, Mrs. Don Morgan and Mrs. Hollis M. Wade, their guests afterward enjoying bridge. Mrs. Monahan's guests were invited to meet Mrs. George Black, wife of the Governor of Yukon Territory. They were Mrs. George S. Munger, Sr., Mrs. Motley H. F[illegible], Mrs. Nicholas Misser, Mrs. Jay Spence and Mrs. B. F. Nance. Mrs. Morgan's party included Mrs. E. C. Starr, Mrs. E. R. Davis, Mrs. Arthur Kelley, Mrs. J. N. Burns, Mrs. E. A. Barre, Mrs. C. Haskins, Mrs. Louis Gottschalk, Mrs. Albert Neal, Mrs. C. H. Randall and Mrs. O. P. [illegible]. [illegible].

Mr. Fletcher's party included twenty-five guests and Mr. Schoeller's twenty. In the afternoon Mrs. Joseph L. Merrill entertained at luncheon for Mrs. A. W. Nes[illegible], Mrs. A. A. Mrs. Wilshire Complimented.

Mrs. Joseph Wilshire, house guest of Mrs. Charles C. Carpenter of No. 1153 West Twenty-seventh street, is having a happy time among her friends these days, being constantly the center of sociability of a delightfully informal nature. Mrs. Clarence E. Carpenter gave a luncheon Tuesday, and the following day Mrs. C. Q. Stanton gave one of those charming teas for which she is noted. Thursday Mrs. Harold Plummer lunched an intimate coterie of eight, followed Friday by a luncheon at the Huntington over which Mrs. Lewis Miller presided. Yesterday the party went to Redondo Beach to be week-end house guests of Mrs. George Wilshire, and next week, or shortly, they are to run down to Coronado to the [illegible].

Mrs. L. W. Jordan, who was Miss [illegible] Carpenter, has come to stay at the C. C. Carpenter home in this city during disturbances on the border. She arrived only Thursday evening from El Paso, where her husband, Capt. Lambert Jordan, is at present stationed. The Carpenter family is feeling much more comfortable now that Mrs. Jordan is safely here, though they are uneasy until things are normal with the genial captain, whose friends are legion in Los Angeles.

Fifty Years Married.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry N. Rice hardly give the impression of being that old, yet Wednesday they celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with a midday dinner at their home, No. 1514 Vermont avenue. Present were all six of their children, [illegible] grandchildren and other relatives. Mrs. F. D. Gould and Mrs. E. J. Edwards came on from Fairmont, Mrs. S. L. Rice of Riverside, W. [illegible] of Lankershim, Mrs. W. B. [illegible] of Covina and Miss Daisy Rice (the only daughter at home) completed the immediate family circle. A sister of Mrs. Rice, Mrs. Alice Gaskill of Arcadia, and a niece, Miss Alta [illegible] of Corona, with Grandma [illegible] of Covina, completed the list of out-of-town guests.

The house was done in golden yellow flowers.

Dr. Rice is a veteran of the Civil War, having belonged to Co. B, Twenty-fourth Indiana Regiment, and the wife of his old age is the "girl he left behind" when he marched away to carry a musket for his country. The next spring, upon his return from the war, they were married, and came to California [illegible] years ago.

They both are enjoying excellent health and were among the merriest at their half-century anniversary dinner.

Visit Closes.

Mrs. George L. Storer and her daughter, Mary Elizabeth, who have been visiting the former's mother, Mrs. E. T. Wright of No. 1158½ South Hoover street, are to return Tuesday to their home in Minneapolis. Mrs. Storer has been renewing many pleasant acquaintances while in the city.

Mrs. Black Honoree.

Tuesday at the Los Angeles Athletic Club Mrs. George Black, wife of the Governor of the Yukon, was made honoree at a luncheon over which Mrs. John Williams [illegible] of South Pasadena presided. A pretty compliment was paid the honor guest in the floral decorations, English corn flowers and English daisies dominating, forget-me-nots and pink sweet peas forming a central mound, and later being distributed as individual corsages, edged in lace, frilled in old-fashioned effect. Miniature silk flags—English and American—in the center of each lent a note of patriotism and friendliness. At table were Mrs. Black and her mother, Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. George S. Munger, Sr., Mrs. [illegible] S. Nance, Mrs. Motley Flint, Mrs. Nicholas Misser, Mrs. Stoddard [illegible], Mrs. Jay Spence, Mrs. Fred [illegible] and the hostess.

Coronado Gay as Ever.

The sobering shadow of Lent does [illegible] on the social horizon at Coronado Beach. The season at Coronado [illegible] goes far beyond the dreams of [illegible] the most optimistic of its planners. Such crowds of people, such [illegible] clothes for men and women, such marvelous entertainments of every kind and description, such lavish [illegible] has never been seen there before. Apparently everyone is on a holiday, with no thought of care or [illegible]. Gaiety is in every breath that [illegible], while a cosmopolitan atmosphere imparted by the presence of people from all over this country as well as many foreigners makes for [illegible] variety. The debutantes of [illegible] winter, every different set of young married couples, brides and bridegrooms, substantial business men, [illegible], representative society folk from everywhere are all to be seen [illegible] and all are enjoying every minute of the twenty-four hours and wishing that forty-eight hours were [illegible] to each day.

The Russian fete to be given at the Hotel del Coronado tomorrow from 5 to 7 o'clock will probably be one of the most notable affairs that has been [illegible] at Coronado Beach this season. [illegible] of society and seventy-five [illegible] of the younger set will do much to make this an elaborate [illegible].

Wedding of Thursday.

The Garnet Club House was the scene of a very pretty wedding Thursday evening, when Miss Effie Fisch, daughter of Mrs. S. Fisch of No. [illegible] Girard street, was married to [illegible] Roth. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Sigmund Hecht in the presence of 150 guests.

The bride wore a gown of white [illegible] over white satin and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. She was given away by her uncle, Samuel Klein, and attended by her sister, Miss Hattie [illegible], as maid of honor, while William [illegible] stood with the groom as best man. Also attending were Miss [illegible] Perlum and Miss Marian [illegible] as bridesmaids and Sam Roth and [illegible] Klein as ushers, while little [illegible] Summerfield, cousin of the bride, was the flower girl.

Mr. and Mrs. Roth are now enjoying a honeymoon trip to San Diego.

OUT-OF-TOWN SOCIETY

[illegible]

Good old St. Patrick was the motif for most all of the entertaining [illegible] last week, although the [illegible] show given at the Hotel Maryland under the auspices of the Central [illegible] of Charities yesterday afternoon and evening capped the climax [illegible] brilliance of detail and charm. [illegible] pretty society buds showed off [illegible] creations loaned for the [illegible] by Grover Magnin in most [illegible] manner. Some wore bridesmaids' frocks and one, Miss Helen [illegible], a bridal gown, while others [illegible] garbed in polo, sports clothes, [illegible] gowns and various other [illegible] of models.

The Emerald Isle ball at the Hotel [illegible] on Friday night to honor St. Patrick was a dream in green [illegible] dazzling light effects. This was [illegible] through the use of tiny electric [illegible], which studded the great [illegible] of green smilax that entirely [illegible] the walls and ceiling of the [illegible], where the supper dance [illegible]. More than 1000 guests were [illegible]. Among those giving [illegible] parties were Mrs. Edwin Fran[illegible], the silver queen, who had [illegible] young people in hers. Baron[illegible] Purdee entertained a [illegible] of twelve. The Edward F. Swifts [illegible] and Mrs. T. D. Lane of [illegible] entertained large parties, the [illegible] having twenty.

[illegible] the same night the St. Patrick's [illegible] the Green was given. It surpassed in beauty anything given there [illegible] and marked the last event [illegible] at this hostelry. One of [illegible] of the evening was the [illegible] dinner, given in honor [illegible] at the hotel. Nearly 1000 [illegible] attended this function.

[illegible] of unusual interest, because of the prominence of the bride's [illegible], was celebrated Wednesday at [illegible] when Miss Leonora Geraldine [illegible] became the bride of P. Rob[illegible], well-known mining [illegible] of Cripple Creek, Colo. The [illegible] was performed at the [illegible] bride's parents, Mr. and [illegible] of No. 234 Bell[illegible] by Dr. Robert Freeman of the Pasadena Presbyterian Church. Only relatives and their closest friends witnessed the ceremony and attended the wedding breakfast later. The bride is prominent in social and club circles here and is an accomplished musician, being chairman of the musical department of the Shakespeare Club.

In a setting of spring flowers in which great boughs of apple and almond blossoms arranged with pink hyacinths were massed about the chapel of the Pasadena Presbyterian Church, the wedding ceremony of Miss Dorothy Davis and Gehrett O. Stocking was solemnized last Tuesday evening in the presence of 200 prominent society folk. Rev. Matt S. Hughes officiated. The bride wore a lovely gown of white "pha-anx" satin, with long train falling from a short satin skirt flounced with princess lace. She wore a long tulle veil caught to her hair with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of white orchids, lilies of the valley and maidenhair ferns. Her maid of honor, Miss Maude Barker of Phoenix, Ariz., was gowned in pink chiffon with overdrape of tulle. The bodice was made up of silver lace combined with pink. She wore a picture hat of silver lace and carried a shower of pink roses and maidenhair ferns. Little Betty West was flower girl and the ushers were Harvey Dorn, James Forbes, Howard McCurdy and Palmer Day. Howard Dorn was best man.

One of the foremost social events of the week was the afternoon given by Mrs. F. J. Hart at "La Villa," in honor of her house guest, Mrs. E. V. Furbush of Boston. About thirty-five guests and members of the "Modern Priscillas" were present. While the guests were occupied with fancy work they were entertained with readings by Mrs. Rowena Blincoe of Los Angeles and Irish selections by the "Shamrock Three," consisting of Mmes. H. I. Hawhurst, J. N. Hawks and T. H. Flather, who wrote one of the songs for the "Priscillas." Mrs. Hart's son, Harold, also entertained with several selections on the concertino. Colored maids served the dainty refreshments partaken of by the guests. Several out-of-town guests were present.

Casa Verdugo-North Glendale.

'Neath the shadows of the lovely green hills society has been enjoying a series of delightful pastimes recently, and many informal pleasures have been given by the members of the smart set. Among the most delightful was the dancing party arranged by Miss Rosalie England, who celebrated her birthday most charmingly with a dancing party recently at La Ramada. In anticipation of the event the lovely place was most artistically decorated with a profusion of roses and cut flowers, and one of the most happily informal dances of the winter was enjoyed by the gay throng in attendance. Later a delightful collation was served the guests, among whom were, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver O. Clark, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Robinson, Mr. and Mrs. Donolan, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Dewar, Miss Jeannie Mitchell, Miss Bess Maxfield, Mr. and Mrs. Frank England, Miss May Smith and Messrs. John Dewar, Robert Dewar, Colin C. Campbell, Albert Stein and Will Stevens of Los Angeles.

One of the pleasant entertainments of the week was the affair given by the Foothills Club which met Friday at the home of Mrs. W. P. Thompson on North Grand View avenue. In anticipation of the occasion the house was prettily decorated and the rooms presented a most attractive appearance in the arrangement of springtime blossoms and greens which were used. In keeping with the spirit of the day, St. Patrick's anniversary was merrily recognized by the gay coterie of guests who assembled at the Thompson home.

Of interest to the socially inclined in this vicinity was the dinner given on Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hulme of Leighton avenue, who entertained as a compliment to Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Hunt of Viola street and their daughters, Miss Lois Hunt and Miss Mary Hunt. The occasion was most delightful and one of the great pleasure to the invited guests.

Quite the most important event of the week was the entertainment arranged by the Parent-Teacher Association of the Central-avenue school for Friday afternoon and evening. A delightful programme of songs and music appealing to the taste of the many guests present was given, and the affair was one of the most felicitous of any similar event of the year. A number of recitations of delightful humor were given by some of the children, all of whom had been carefully trained for the entertainment which was one of successes artistically of the week.

Watts.

Society has made much of St. Patrick's Day during the week just ended and shamrock and other mementoes of the patron saint figured conspicuously upon several occasions. Auspicious among these was the beautifully appointed luncheon given last Wednesday by Mrs. P. M. Scholler of No. 9011 North Compton avenue in compliment to the Latin Home Club, the rooms being transformed into a bower of bloom. The table decorations were in green and white. Twisted crepe paper radiated from the electrolier, almost hiding the silver bowl of ferns that formed the centerpiece and extended to each cover, which was marked by place cards decorated in tall hats and shamrock. French pastry, topped with a single green candle, table cover and napkins splashed with shamrock, and green candles that filled dishes here and there, made an effective setting under the electric lights, the daylight having been excluded. Bidden were Mrs. Arthur Nay, Mrs. Herbert Prince and Mrs. George Wood. Members included Mrs. Bruce Palmer, Mrs. S. H. Giles, Mrs. George Scholl, Mrs. Ella Lee, Mrs. Everett McLaughlin, Mrs. Augusta King, Mrs. William McCarger and the hostess.

Mrs. J. L. DuBois was hostess Wednesday to the Embroidery Club

Leaving her teens on the evening of Wednesday was of sufficient importance to the young husband, P. L. Baldwin, to invite a number of friends to their home, No. 404 East Shorb avenue, to help celebrate the occasion. Mrs. Baldwin had recalled the fact that she was entering the 20s that day, but it did not occur to her the significance of that event would mean such a delightful surprise. Piano and violin music, with the serving of light refreshments, were among the delights of the evening, to which were bidden Mr. and Mrs. Ed Bamberg, Mr. and Mrs. William Kelso, Mr. and Mrs. Belden Bradford, Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. A. Baldwin, Mrs. Mary Arnold and Francis Arnold.

Because of a chance meeting of Mrs. E. J. Gartley and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ross of Charleroi, Pa., the home of Mrs. Gartley thirteen years ago, a dinner was given Sunday by Mrs. Gartley at her home, No. 544 Rudolph avenue, for Mrs. Ross and her daughters, Misses Ivy and Virgina Ross, Mr. Ross having returned East since the discovery two weeks ago that each family lived in American Italy. The afternoon was spent motoring and sight-seeing in the guests' touring car, driven by Miss Ivy Ross. Mr. and Mrs. Ross and family have been residents of Los Angeles for more than seven years.

Of much interest to a large circle of friends here was the marriage of Miss Mable Lewis and Walter V. Burton, which was solemnized Wednesday morning in Los Angeles, the lines that united them in holy wedlock being read by Rev. S. Meyers. Miss Lewis, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Lewis, No. 303 Mt. View avenue, who has been a resident of Watts the past eleven years and employed in the Wood Manufacturing Company, Los Angeles, for more than two years, was attired in a traveling suit of blue serge and black hat. Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Lewis left for San Pedro for the boat to San Diego, which they missed by a fraction of a minute and had to go by train. After a week of sight-seeing and honey-mooning they returned to their temporary home at Terminal Island. In about two months they expect to be permanently located in Los Angeles, where the groom is employed by the Hammond Lumber Company.

BE PRETTY! TURN GRAY HAIR DARK

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darken your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy and attractive.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire dark hair and a youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

A SPRINGTIME motif of pink and white was effectively used in decoration Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Albert Jay Hall for the charmingly-appointed Five Hundred party with which she entertained at her home in Euclid avenue. Peach and plum blossoms and carnations in pink and white were the predominating flowers. Seven tables were used in the card tournament. The prizes were awarded to Mrs. J. D. Sawyer and Mrs. Edward T. Davis. In the refreshments, which followed, the same dainty pink and white scheme was successfully carried out. Favors were tiny pink baskets containing mints. Those enjoying Mrs. Hall's delightful hospitality included Mrs. Lester Ray Kennedy, Mrs. Benjamin F. Webber, Mrs. Edward T. Davis, Mrs. James M. Be Careful in Using Soap on Your Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

Monday the whole store will be turned over to the "Ad" man---just watch things hum!

Now for Monday!

—They've turned the whole store over to me—and I am going to make Monday by far the biggest day in all March!

—That's not a brag! It's facts!

—I've been working with the buyers for weeks past—and between us we've gathered what I believe to be one of the most remarkable lots of merchandise that this store has ever featured!

—Read every one of the items in this advertisement—I know the merchandise—and I know that the prices we've named are so low that it would be foolish economy for you not to buy even if the war wasn't sending everything sky high!

—See the windows today—they hold values that you'll want to see, even if you have to make a special trip down town!—

—Come shopping in every department on Monday—not because we want to make an increase of $50,000, but because I know that the values that will be out will better advertise our store than a whole newspaper full of words!

—If there's anything about the merchandise—or about the service—that is unsatisfactory I would appreciate it if you would notify the advertising office! J. M. Kemp,
The "Ad" Man.

—The whole store is working "tooth and nail" to get that increase of $50,000 for the month of March!

—The department managers have had pretty much of a free hand so far—and they've really accomplished wonders!—

—Sales have been climbing up—up—up, and unless all signs fail March is going to be one of the biggest months in our store's history!—

—Now if the department heads can make the increases they have—what can the "Ad" man do if he is given a free hand to do what he will with every department?

—And the "Ad." man is going to show you and the others what he can do on Monday!

—Every department has been called upon to "deliver the goods"—and every department has!—This advertisement doesn't begin to tell of all the values that are ready—many others are going to be shown in the windows and on tables and counters throughout the store!—

There has been no attempt at sensational price cutting—efforts have been directed towards bringing out new merchandise at less than usual prices—towards bringing out merchandise which you are not able to find elsewhere no matter what price you pay!

—You are going to enjoy shopping at Jacoby's on Monday—you'll find just the very things you want and at the very prices you want to pay—and maybe for less!—

Save your sales checks! Remember, we have a Profit Sharing Plan under which we pay a dividend of 2½% on all the purchases you make this month. Bring your sales checks in on Tuesdays.

Several lines of Corsets at $1.39

Some of the corsets in this sale were bought in a special way—others have been taken from our regular stocks and remarked to help get Monday's sales increase.
There are included both the famous Fitrite corsets and Warner's—both made in medium high bust and long hip models with six hose supporters. Not all sizes in each different style—but a full range of sizes in the lot.

Exclusive blouses copied in voile, $2.45

When I first went to the Waist buyer, I asked for waists that were new and different—I expected to find them all right, but I hardly expected to find them at such a low price as $2.45.
These dainty voile affairs have all the beauty of the high priced blouses from which they were copied—and but a small part of the former's price.

Coats such as I've never seen before are to be sold Monday at $11.95

A REMARKABLE group of new sports garments will be featured on the third floor Monday!

READY—a new department of stylish garments for stout women—3rd floor.

The Garment Chief gave me truly wonderful suits & dresses at $25.00

I expected to get some wonderful items from the Garment Department, for I knew that the express had been bringing in loads of new things, but I was hardly prepared to find the kind of garments that I did find.

When the garment chief said: "I'm going to name the price on these suits and dresses myself," I began preparing for a battle royal, but when he said: "Sell them at $25.00," I kept mighty still, for I'd have been wonderfully glad to have had them to sell for a whole lot more than that price.

I'm not going to try to tell you anything about these garments, but be prepared to find the biggest assortment of styles, materials and colors that you've ever found in a sale and be prepared, too, for bigger values than you've seen before!
All sizes are included, of course.

Find these on the Third Floor—Jacoby's.

The SILK store will be busy!

I can't begin to tell you about all the silks that have been gathered for this Monday sale, and it would be hard, indeed, for me to impress you with the extraordinariness of the values, for, on top of the fact that these silks were bought underpriced is the fact that in every mail comes word from the SILK centers that silks are scarce as scarce can be and that prices are advancing by leaps and bounds.
It's going to be well worth your while to buy silks at Jacoby's on Monday.

36 in. colored chiffon taffetas, $1.05

In this group of big hats which the Millinery chief has prepared for this Monday sale of mine, there are hats that you would guess at ever and ever so much more, and you would not be overestimating their worth a bit—

Tiny tots' rompers and boys' Oliver Twist suits 45c

Fortunately for me, the department buyer is just back from the New York market—and among the first of his purchases to arrive were these rompers and Oliver Twist suits.

The merchandise chief asked no end of questions when he saw them marked so low. But I'm counting on the Babies store giving us far more than a Babies' share of the increase, so I'm going to forget profits.

The rompers are of fast colored ginghams, chambrays and galatea in plain colors—stripes and checks. The Oliver Twist suits are of ginghams and chambrays in light and dark color combinations—sizes 2 to 6 years.

Mr. Went-And-Cut-It ---Here's Mr. 'Gets-It'

The New Plan Corn Cure That's as Sure as the Rising Sun.

"Glad to meet you!" says the razor to the corn. "I'll bleed for you!" says the corn to the razor. Razors and corns love each other. Corns love to be cut, picked,

"Why, O Why, Did I Do It? 'Gets-It' for Me After This—If I Live!"

gouged, salved, plastered and jerked out—they grow faster. Mr. and Mrs. Went-and-Cut-It realize it now—they use "Gets-It" instead—it's the wonderful, simple corn-cure that never fails. Stops pain. You apply it in 2 seconds, it dries at once, the corn is doomed. Nothing to stick to the stocking or press on the corn. It means good-night to plasters, salves, diggers, razors and toe-bundling. You can wear smaller shoes. Your corns will come right off, "clean as a whistle." Never inflames healthy flesh. The world's biggest selling corn cure.

"Gets-It" is sold by druggists everywhere, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago, Ill.

Sold in Los Angeles at all stores of The Owl Drug Co.

A Simple Way to Remove Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, common liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need,) apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

SOCIETY.

eighteenth birthday. The evening was enjoyably spent with games played in the lawn, after which dainty refreshments of fruit salad served in scalloped oranges, cake and candy were served.

Miss Carol Bird was the charming hostess at a party last evening, when she entertained a host of young friends at her home on Cedar street. Dancing and games composed the evening's entertainment, after which delectable refreshments were served.

Mrs. Roy W. Cole most delightfully entertained a number of young ladies at a Japanese party Wednesday afternoon at her home on Whittier avenue. All the ladies were attractively costumed as Japanese maidens and the rooms were tastefully decorated in Japanese lanterns. The afternoon was enjoyably spent in playing games, after which dainty refreshments were served.

Mrs. C. E. Van Essen of Ocean Park, Mrs. Clara Catagire of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Uphaff of Grass Valley were guests of Mrs. F. H. Howard Friday at a delightful luncheon.

—o—

Glendale.

THE advent of Lent has placed no restrictions on the gay doings of the social set, who have been enjoying many delightful affairs with happy abandon during the past week. Among the most notable of the week's entertainments was the party arranged as a compliment to Mrs. Ben F. Logan, the much-feted young matron from Kentucky, who has been domiciled during the winter months at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Evans. The hostess of the pretty affair was Mrs. Henry P. Goodwin, and the Goodwin home on West Tenth street was converted into a veritable floral bower of loveliness, with a profusion of spring blossoms and quantities of ferns and other greenery. The afternoon was delightfully and merrily spent with Five Hundred as the principal diversion, the prize winners being Mrs. Albert D. Pearce and Mrs. Fred Pigg. During the afternoon Mrs. Logan was presented with a handsome gift as a memento of the happy occasion. At the conclusion of the games a delicious repast was served the guests, among whom were Mrs. R. M. Jackson, Mrs. W. E. Evans, Mrs. Walter Stamps, Mrs. Albert D. Pearce, Mrs. John Hunchberger, Mrs. A. W. Tower, Mrs. Laurence Ellis, Mrs. Emil Tholen, Mrs. Charles Tenple, Mrs. Harry Neel, Mrs. Ernest Kimmel, Mrs. A. L. Weaver, Mrs. Warren Roberts, Mrs. Perce H. Curtis, Mrs. Mattison B. Jones, Mrs. Edward Lynch, Mrs. H. Lee Clotworthy, Mrs. F. W. Pigg, Mrs. G. H. A. Goodwin of Hollywood, Mrs. John Karnahan, Mrs. M. Ewell Smith and Mrs. Lucius Phillips of Los Angeles.

Scheduled for next Thursday evening is the entertainment to be accorded to Mrs. Nellie Dean Graham, District Deputy Grand Matron O.E.S. at the Masonic Temple. Mrs. Graham is one of the best-known and best-beloved of the matrons in Southern California, and her presence in Glendale will be the occasion for signal rejoicing. Elaborate preparations for the event have been made and the evening will be one of the most auspicious in the local history of the organization.

On Saturday evening the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Goodwin was the scene of a merry gathering, when the members of the T. W. Club were entertained, and the guests of the evening included Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Evans, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Stamps, Mr. and Mrs. Albert D. Pearce, Mrs. Ben Logan and Mr. Donald Goodwin.

Dr. and Mrs. Lauler are entertaining informally in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lauler of Elsinore, who have been happily domiciled at the home of the Laulers on Burchett street.

A happily-arranged dinner party was recently given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Peckham of North Central avenue, when a number of relatives and friends were guests at their hospitable home. The house was attractively embellished with cut flowers and greens, and the dining-room was most pleasing in its beautiful decorations of green and gold. An elaborate repast was served, and at its conclusion the remainder of the day was spent in informal conversation and pleasures. Among those enjoying the delightful occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hunt, Mrs. Elso Hunt and son, Mason, and Mr. Addie Bee, all of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Henry Weston and Mr. William Gilliland of Oakland.

One of the delightful treats of the week among the social set was the theater party arranged for Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. Warren Roberts, who entertained an enthusiastic party of friends at a matinee party at the Orpheum. Among those enjoying the occasion were Mrs. A. W. Tower, Mrs. Lawrence Ellis, Mrs. John D. Hunchberger, Mrs. A. L. Weaver, Mrs. Freeman Kelly, Mrs. W. E. Evans, Mrs. B. F. Logan, Mrs. Henry F. Goodwin, Mrs. Albert D. Pearce, Mrs. C. Pullam, Mrs. R. M. Jackson, Mrs. Walter N. Stamps and Mrs. Charles H. Tenple.

A felicitous occasion enjoyed by a large number of friends occurred recently at the home of Mrs. W. Gorman of South Louise street, when, in recognition of her birthday, she was tendered a delightful surprise party arranged by Mrs. Riley Lyons. Returning home early in the evening, Mrs. Gorman found her home a profusion of spring-time blossoms and greens, and the rooms filled with guests bent on wishing her many happy returns of the day. The remainder of the evening sped happily away, and it was a late hour when a delectable repast prepared by the loving hands of many friends was enjoyed by the guests. Covers were laid for twenty-four, among those present being Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Bertram Gorham, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Lovell, and Mr. and Mrs. Riley Lyons and their family. Many of the younger folks were there, adding their felicitations to the happiness of the occasion, which was heightened by music, singing and informal amusements.

Dr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Webb entertained with a delightful dinner party recently, when their guests included Mr. and Mrs. Christian Timmner, little Miss Elas Timmner, Mrs. Dora L. Gibson, Mrs. R. G. Payne and Miss Frances Payne.

Hermosa Beach.

MRS. THEODORE HANMAN, president of the Hermosa Beach Woman's Club, was hostess to the club on Thursday afternoon at her home on the ocean front. The members arrived at 1 o'clock, for an early luncheon, which was very charmingly arranged by the hostess. Streamers of green crepe paper were strung from the corners of the rooms to the center of the ceiling. In the middle of the table was a large kewpie doll wearing a green hat in honor of St. Patrick's Day. The place cards had clever little Irish verses written on them and a miniature "blarney stone" was kissed by the guests before the luncheon was over. Among those present were the Mmes. W. D. Ballentine, A. E. Richardson, William Bolton, Thomas Preston, William Donohugh and T. A. Hughes.

Mrs. M. Elizabeth Bailey who conducted an art studio here, recently became the bride of A. Everett Ames Hinkley, of Glendale. Mrs. Hinkley has many friends in this city who were pleasantly surprised to hear of her recent marriage. Dr. Ames Hinkley is a wealthy retired physician of Glendale, where they will make their home.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Polkinhorn sailed this week for the Hawaiian Islands where they will spend two months sight seeing. They will return in time to enjoy the summer here.

The Hermosa Beach Reading Club met at the home of Mrs. R. E. Matteson on Tuesday afternoon and enjoyed a delightful luncheon at the Matteson home. About twenty ladies were present and during the afternoon a guessing game was played which caused much merriment. The walls of the room had been arranged so that they presented a pleasing appearance. Roses and ferns had been strung in garlands in a pretty manner on the walls and bouquets of roses graced the tables.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Tucker of Sixth street gave an elaborate dinner party at their home on Sunday afternoon. The guests were out-of-town people with a few exceptions. The house had been beautifully arranged for the occasion and large sprays of acacia blooms made the room fragrant and enhanced the beauty of the cottage as well. Among those present at the dinner were: Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Valentine, Mrs. J. T. Dodge, Miss Elizabeth Dodge and Dr. Sherwood, all of Pasadena. Others were Mrs. H. L. Gardner of Roxbury, Mass., Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Barber and Miss Ruth Barber of Hollywood.

Mrs. E. D. Johnson, sister of Mrs. Charles Modini-Wood, has leased a cottage on Twenty-fifth street for the summer.

Among the fishing parties from Los Angeles that enjoyed the [illegible] here, was a jolly crowd of college students who came down on Saturday afternoon and spent Sunday in pier fishing most of the time. Chaperones were Mr. and Mrs. Augustus [illegible]dern and among the jolly students who enjoyed the vacation were: Ralph J. Phillips, Martin Logan, [illegible] Stevens, Malcolme Newcomb and Elizabeth Ware, June Teck, [illegible] Stevens and Miss Logan.

Mr. and Mrs. A. [illegible] of Los Angeles have leased the [illegible] cottage at this city and will spend the summer here.

Mr. and Mrs. E. M. [illegible], who are from Toledo, O., are domiciled in the Duncan cottage for six months and may decide to remain indefinitely here.

—o—

Compton.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY was most gloriously ushered in by the young folks of Compton on Friday evening at the home of Miss Mabel Rosella. St. Patrick himself would have enjoyed such a [illegible] party for green, naturally, was very much in evidence, the refreshments, decorations and even those present bore signs of the day. Shamrocks were much in evidence and other dainty St. Patrick novelties were passed as favors. All enjoyed the evening immensely and are now awaiting for another St. Patrick's Day to roll around.

Most pleasant was the surprise handed to W. J. Veitch on Monday evening when neighbors and friends from Los Angeles dropped in to spend the evening, but far more elaborate was the dinner which followed for it was growing dawn when the last of the party had departed for home and the celebration of Mrs. Veitch's and her daughter [illegible] birthday had been included with that of the husband and father. The evening's time was taken up with cards and checkers. RECIPE to STOP DANDRUFF

This Home Made Mixture Stops Dandruff and Falling Hair and Aids its Growth.

To a half pint of water add:
Bay Rum .... 1 oz.
Barbo Compound ....a small box
Glycerine .... 1-4 oz.

These are all simple ingredients that you can buy from any druggist at very little cost, and mix them yourself. Apply to the scalp once a day for two weeks, then once every other week until all the mixture is used. A half pint should be enough to rid the head of dandruff and kill the dandruff germs. It stops the hair from falling out and relieves itching and scalp diseases.

Although it is not dye, it acts upon the hair roots and will darken streaked, faded, gray hair in ten or fifteen days. It promotes the growth of the hair and makes harsh hair soft and glossy.

A ST. PATRICK'S DAY party of a very unusual character was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Morehouse in their newly-completed bungalow home on South Middleton street Saturday evening. A number of friends of the popular couple had been invited from Pasadena, as they thought to a dinner, but when they arrived they found a new home awaiting them and they were welcomed and seated at the brilliantly-decorated table in the bungalow that had been built since their last visit. The surprise on the guests was complete, and an old-fashioned house-warming followed. An elaborate St. Patrick's Day feast was served at 6 o'clock, the shamrock and Irish dragons being much in evidence as decorations. Following the sumptuous dinner an evening of Five Hundred was enjoyed. Among those present at the happy occasion were Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Syvertson, Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Pomeroy, Mr. and Mrs. John Sprague, Mr. and Mrs. James Stewart and Mr. and Mrs. Lester Packard.

Gay colors and merry laughter resounded throughout the precincts of the Woman's Improvement Clubhouse Friday evening when the memory of good old St. Patrick was honored by a Terpsichorean revel that continued till near the witching hour of midnight. As each guest arrived she or he was presented with a daintily-designed souvenir of the occasion consisting of a large shamrock decorated with patriotic colors. The music was furnished by Prof. Bernhardt Walther and accomplished companions to the delights of tripping feet. This dance was quite one of the most successful that has been given at this popular hall for some time.

A merry troupe of young friends greeted Miss Cleota Acres Monday evening when they gathered at the home of Miss Pearl Johnson on North Middleton street to wish her many happy returns of her birthday. A delightful evening was enjoyed by the houseful of guests who congratulated the happy recipient of the honor with words and wishes of felicity. Gay music enlivened the occasion and appropriate refreshments brought the joyous hour to an all-too-soon close. The gathering consisted of Misses Elsie Christensen, Francis Jones, Eleanor Nordgren, Pearl Bartz, Maxine Miller, Pearl Johnson and Mrs. Bailey.

Dr. and Mrs. Comnock of Evanston, Ill., were charmingly entertained at diner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. R. Moorman on North Seville street Sunday evening. Mrs. Moorman was formerly a pupil in the Comnock School of Oratory in the latter city, of which institution the doctor was founder. The visitors were more than delighted with Huntington Park.

An elaborate 6 o'clock dinner is to be served in Masonic Hall Monday evening by the members of Rising Light Lodge, the occasion being the reception of the district deputy Grand Matron, Mrs. Lena Hubbard. The work of the chapter will be inspected after which a social evening will be enjoyed.

GLASS OF WATER BEFORE YOU EAT ANY BREAKFAST

Wash poison from system each morning and feel fresh as a daisy.

Every day you clean the house you live in to get rid of the dust and dirt which collected through the previous day. Your body, the house your soul lives in, also becomes filled up each twenty-four hours with all manner of filth and poison. If only every man and woman could realize the wonders of drinking phosphated hot water, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain-fags" and pessimists, we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

Everyone, whether sick or well, should drink each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds, and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.

ARMY LEGISLATION.

BY A VETERAN.

It is the American way to laugh at the idiosyncracies of other nations and to smugly assume an air of superiority not always based upon secure foundations. When our humble Mexican neighbor pleads to be allowed his modest way because it is the "costumbre del pais"—the custom of the country—we relegate him to the hopelessly unprogressive class, ignoring the fact that important questions awaiting decision have crowded fast upon the nation since it perforce emerged from its swaddling clothes and became a world power. It seems but yesterday when the nation was perturbed over the question as to whether the Constitution followed the flag. With the passing of the years since our army of 70,000 men spread over a thousand Philippine islands that question has become academic as compared to the national necessity that trade shall follow the flag.

In our State Department archives are safely stored some dozens of arbitration treaties guaranteeing a year's delay for reflection while many of the signatory powers have cast aside most solemn agreements and are battling over half the world for the mastery, not the mere recognition, of superiority in Europe, but the domination of trade and the routes by which it takes its course to the world's markets. And yet we dream of silently taking over much of that trade so securely the while our brethren across the seas are battling to the death, that it may not take flight when peace once more resumes its sway among worldly giants. Warned by history, warned by destiny, warned by common sense to cease our dreaming, we pursue the even tenor of our way and leave the preparation of measures in all their details where our forbears placed it more than a century ago—with Congress.

How many of our people really comprehend what this means? How many of us have witnessed the keen disappointments of visitors in the galleries of Congress, who, coming from afar, await in vain to see the laws in the making? For one measure placed upon the statute books by direct action on the floor of either house there are one thousand arranged in the process of compromises in the committee rooms, where all bills of importance are debated and perfected as well as differing opinions permit.

While the country waits for that grave action which will organize a model army, mobilize the industrial resources and connect up railroads and military highways, the Congressional committees pursue the tenor of their overburdened way. After some two months of hearings and discussions the Senate and House committees have each produced bills so far apart in intention and plans that the whole matter of constructive legislation will probably rest with a conference committee of the two houses. The Senate bill provides for a peace strength of about 178,000 men and a war strength slightly below 250,000. The present strength of the army is about 100,000. In ascertaining the conditions of the army as now organized, the needs of the new and greater force have been made known and enabled the Senate committee to recommend a comprehensive measure having in mind a continuing military policy. In the past the small number of organizations available for the world-wide duties of the army has made a modern organization of higher units impracticable. The new bill makes possible the organization of seven infantry divisions, from which are to be taken the overseas garrisons of Panama, Hawaii and the Philippine Islands.

The remaining divisions will be located in the United States in such manner as to admit of higher training of the generals and staff officers who will have to serve with the armies in war. Provision is made for the creation of a reserve for the regular army, to each of whom a payment of $24 per annum will be made to induce them to maintain touch with the service with a view to re-entering in war. Special favor is granted to those who qualify quickly in the duties of a soldier by curtailing service with the colors to two years and in some cases to one year.

The Adjutant-General of the army expressed some doubt as to the practicability of enlisting the number of young men necessary to pass through the one and two-year periods into the reserve. To encourage enlistments it is proposed to authorize each regiment in the army to have one appointment as cadet at West Point to be open to those between the ages of 18 and 22 who have served one year in the ranks. Those who fail of appointment as cadets have the privilege of joining the reserve to complete the remaining years of their enlistment, where they receive a small annual payment and are at liberty to follow the normal pursuits of civil life after a year of military training.

An inducement is also offered to those men who continue their military training for six years by opening the civil service of the War Department to them. It is among these men that the large number of noncommissioned officers will be found and who will be required in the future as instructors for the National Guard and military schools. This feature may be objected to by misguided civil service reformers, but the interests of the nation will be best served by the enactment of the necessary legislation. It is proposed to enlist none but American citizens in future, a change which recent events have suggested as requiring remedial action.

The bill now before the House of Representatives adds very few regiments, not enough to complete the garrisons overseas, with a total army strength slightly less than the Senate bill. The two bills are far apart, however, so far as any military policy is concerned. The one gives the means for training large numbers of men and gradually developing a corps of officers capable of rendering great service in preparing our people for war should necessity arise for that last resort in the controversies of nations.

The Senate bill provides for the creation of divisions, which have been the fighting and administrative army units of all armies for more than 100 years, and makes provision for a sufficient number of generals and staff officers to take up this higher training in which the American army is sadly deficient. The only general officer of the American army who has had an opportunity to mobilize and command a division was recently retired and the troops have been dispersed along the Mexican border. Under such conditions any continuous system of instruction is impossible. A sufficient number of divisions to enable the detachment of one for minor services without destroying all the schemes for training is a public necessity if young Americans are to be afforded means of preparing themselves for the stern realities of war without entering upon the broad field of compulsory military service.

The two bills are now before the Senate and House for their decision. The Senate bill is based upon a dispassionate study of the military problems confronting the nation by the General Staff of the army. The American General Staff has not yet reached its full development, but it deserves the consideration and support of the nation in order that some continuing policy may replace former haphazard methods. None but the most indifferent man can read the current history of the great war now in progress in Europe and Asia without observing that the directing energy of the campaigns which have enabled Germany to prevent any battles upon its own soil is the great General Staff, whose decisions are accepted without question because regarded as the professional opinion of the most highly trained military minds of the world. The people of the United States do not contemplate rivalry with Germany in the creation of a great military machine, but they do demand that the large appropriations for military purposes shall be based upon some better foundation and purpose than results from the policy of expediency.

No Trouble to Yell.

[Photoplay Magazine:] A certain family in a small Kentucky town has been notorious for its lack of domestic harmony. Late one summer afternoon the small son of the house was leaning against the dooryard gate, crying with great energy.

Old Mrs. Beals passed.

"What's the matter, little boy?"

"Th-they won't take me to the m-movie show!" he howled.

"Do they ever take you when you cry like that?"

"S-sometimes they do, an' [illegible] times they don't, but it ain't no trouble to yell."

COVER WIDE FIELD.

VARIED TIMES AND LOCATIONS IN FILM OFFERINGS.

You may visit many places and live in other ages than the present via the film route this week if you take in the big features to be shown along Picture Row. "Cabiria" will take you back to the Roman empire of the third century B.C.; "Ramona" uncoils the dreamy California before the "gringo" came; the Vernon Castles will show you modern New York in "The Whirl of the World;" while "To Have and to Hold" and "Mice and Men," reveal, respectively, the old colonial days and war days in the South, while there are several pictures of England, and at least one of Canada.

Majestic.

"Martha's Vindication" will be the offering at the Majestic, commencing tomorrow. The story is of the friendship of two girls. The roles are played by Norma Talmadge and Seena Owen, two noted beauties of the film world. Tully Marshall and Ralph Lewis have the leading male parts.

The Mack Sennett comedy, "A Love Plot," promises to be one of his best. Louise Fazenda and Charles Murray are starred.

The week promises many extra features, with film stars appearing in person. Charlie Murray and the famous Keystone Cops will appear on Monday night; De Wolf Hopper will recite on Tuesday evening; Norma Talmadge and Seena Owen will appear at the Wednesday matinee, and on other occasions William H. Thompson, Tully Marshall and Ralph Lewis will take part in the performance.

Tally's Broadway.

The Vernon Castles as stars in "The Whirl of Life" will twinkle brightly on the screen at Tally's Broadway, beginning tomorrow. America's most famous dancing couple will appear in a comedy drama of plot and counterplot. The interest, however, naturally centers in the dancing of Mr. and Mrs. Castle, said to be very cleverly introduced as a part of the photoplay. Fully a thousand feet of film are devoted to the exhibition of the latest Castle steps.

The music will naturally be a feature of the entertainment, and the Tally orchestra is preparing some special features.

Garrick.

The attraction at the Garrick, beginning today, will be "Cabiria," Gabrielle D'Annunzio's spectacular story laid in the Roman empire, in the third century B. C. The pictures were taken in Italy, Switzerland, Africa and Spain, and are said to have cost over $250,000. Two years were required in the making of the film and over 5000 persons were employed.

Cabiria is a Sicilian girl, who passes through various vicissitudes, including an escape from a city threatened by an eruption of Mt. Etna, capture by pirates, being sold in the slave market of Carthage, and a narrow escape from being offered up as a human sacrifice to heathen gods. However, all turns out happily in the end.

Burbank.

William S. Hart and House Peters in "Between Men," will be seen for the last time today. The Burbank will be thoroughly renovated and made into one of the best vaudeville houses in America next week, and will open next Sunday as the home of high-class variety entertainment and Mack Sennett Keystones.

Superba.

Dustin Farnum in "Ben Blair" will be the offering at the Superba, beginning tomorrow. There is no more popular film favorite than Mr. Farnum, and he is said to have an unusually excellent opportunity in "Ben Blair," as the debonnair hero of many adventures. Winifred Kingston supports him.

This is said to be, from every standpoint, one of the most pleasing photoplays the Pallas Pictures organization has ever turned out.

Miller's.

William Farnum in Hall Caine's tremendous story of truths and passions, "The Bondman," will be seen on the screen at Miller's Theater, starting tomorrow. In this wonderful story Mr. Farnum scores a great personal triumph in playing the two dissimilar parts of Stephen and Jason Orry, father and son. Stephen is a huge, heavy limbed giant; Jason, the son, who makes a vow to kill his father, is of a vigorous, clean-cut type. The dramatic and thrilling climaxes of the story have been vividly and beautifully picturized. There are many spectacular scenes, including an athletic contest, terrible and tragic happenings in sulphur mines where both Jason and Sunlocks, his half brother, are chained together as fellow prisoners and the ensuing scene in which Jason makes a dramatic plea for the release of his blinded and tortured brother and causes a vast multitude of people to overthrow their Governor. Hundreds of people appear and among the principal members of the cast are Dorothy Bernard, Harry Spingler, Doris Wooldridge, and Julia Hurley.

Alhambra.

"The Devil's Toy," a picture suggested by Edward Madden's famous poem "The Mills of the Gods," has been secured for presentation at Miller's Alhambra Theater starting tomorrow. Not since Goethe [illegible] immortal "Faust" has the [illegible] compact between man and the [illegible] been so dramatically [illegible] said, as in this picture in which [illegible] Blood makes her photoplay [illegible] the role of the woman who [illegible] to his destruction to avenge the [illegible] he committed against her [illegible] Blood is not only a noted [illegible] achieved a distinct triumph [illegible] out the country in "Everywoman" [illegible] the picture she is ably supported [illegible] Edwin Stevens, Montague Love [illegible] other screen and stage [illegible]

[illegible] WOLF HOPPER'S FIVE REASONS FOR SORROW.

By Grace Kingsley.

Despite all the mellowing influences of California's far-famed sunshine, [illegible] has found five reasons for sorrow. They are:

(1.) He has to get up in the morning.

(2.) He never gets a "hand," no matter how well he acts.

(3.) He can't sing into a film.

(4.) David Griffith won't let him play "Casey at the Bat."

(5.) He is afraid De Wolf Hopper, Jr., is going to look like him.

[illegible] Grit.

To sit quietly at a table or anywhere else, knowing that a huge Bengal tiger is about to take a spring into the air from above and probably land on you, requires nerves of steel and a make-up of asbestos, and yet that is just what Peggy Custer, one of the Universal beauties, did the other afternoon. The tiger took the leap, knocked over the table, and Peggy escaped unhurt. Peggy sat with E. O. Nix opposite her at the table, until the tiger made its spring between them, knocking everything off the table, and landing in a bed of good, innocent pansies!

Back to Nature.

Joseph Franz is now producing one-reel animal comedies for the E. and R. Jungle Film Company. Mr. Franz was formerly connected with the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, both as director and actor.

Adele, Too!

Adele Blood, famous as "Everywoman" on the stage, will make her film bow at the Alhambra tomorrow. She will appear in "The Devil's Toy."

Busy Clara.

The next production on the World Film programme in which Clara Kimball Young will appear is "The Feast of Life." Miss Young is now working on three more World features.

[illegible] Flitting.

At last Carlyle Blackwell has settled down. He is now permanently with the Equitable Motion Picture Corporation, having signed a three-year contract with that concern last week. Mr. Blackwell will be seen in "The Shadow of a Doubt."

Back to the Spot.

Three Equitable and World film stars are to leave the screen for a few weeks to take part in important legitimate revivals. Charles Cherry and [illegible] Gray will appear in "Idlers," and Alice Brady is to take part in "Little Comrade."

Sport News.

Rollin S. Sturgeon has left for his annual fishing trip to Santa Catalina Island. He will be gone only a few days, but expects to bring home the biggest tuna ever landed. George [illegible] went with him to "help carry the fish." So please prepare to believe easily.

[illegible] Pippins.

The Beauty and Brains contest conducted for the last few months by the Photoplay Magazine has closed. The winners will be announced June 1. The latest candidates for election to motion-picture work who hail from Los Angeles are Misses Wilfred [illegible], Eleanor Crowe, Dorothy [illegible], Genevieve Thomas and [illegible] Terry. Several hundred fair young Los Angeles beauties are fluttering in expectancy as the judges' decision is awaited.

[illegible] to Shift.

The Shubert Theater, in which "Ramona" will be shown in New York, seats 1500 people, and with two balconies is the largest playhouse on Broadway, and it is one of the most beautiful theaters in the world.

Jungle Notes.

Al G. Barnes of the circus was the guest of honor at the Pals' Club last Monday night.

Bees.

Lillian Brown Leighton, well known for her stage and her screen work, is now leading comedienne with the E. & R. Jungle Film Company. Mrs. Leighton recently acquired a large bee farm just outside Los Angeles and is now spending her spare time getting her bees made up for the coming season. Instead of calling them the same way as do most bee keepers, Miss Leighton says she shouts "[illegible]" and gets results.

PROMISES BRILLIANT PLAYS.

Tyrone Power to Present Three Weeks of High-class Drama at Little Theater—"Servant in House" to be First Offering."

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK

KATHLYN WILLIAMS and Mme. de la Cruz gave a party of exceptional flavor at the beautiful home of Miss Williams, No. 858 Bryan street, recently in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Tyrone Power.

Two of the most beautiful women in Los Angeles receiving the man who is accredited by William Winter and by most of his own profession as being one of the most illustrious living actors, should make a party a charm, and they did.

Naturally the chief topic of conversation was the forthcoming engagement of this noted actor at the Little Theater, beginning Easter Sunday with "The Servant in the House," a play that never would have been half so famous or so well liked had it not been for Mr. Power's wonderful creation of the drain man.

Let me say right here that this fact proves the great art of the man, the supreme art of him. The superficial mind would instantly fix upon the Bishop of Benares as the towering character of the play. It would do this because the bishop is made to look like the man Christ Jesus, thus we mentally near-sighted and spiritually blind miss the message of the Christ and fail his spirit forever. Power says "no," not the personality of the Savior, but the man redeemed through his love is the object on which the attention of this play is fixed.

Mr. Power promises us three weeks of the best of all dramatic art at the Little Theater beginning Easter Sunday.

For all of his ability, I might even yet doubt his capacity for the fulfillment of this promise did I not appreciate his own fine appreciation of craftsmanship as above the dramatic star. Here is a man who could subjugate his own lustrous personality in order to give the right emphasis to the least member of any cast because with him craftsmanship is the great word of the stage. He knows better than any man in America, and I think than any man in the world, that the star system was nothing but commercialism and that it was a part of that commercialism which has plunged the stage into its sad plight of the present day.

It is remarkable good fortune that he has been able to secure as the principal woman for his casts in the Little Theater engagement the lovely and luminous personality of Sarah Truax.

Perhaps I have said before this that in her appearance in the Nativity Masque at Exposition Park this last Christmastide she was the loveliest thing I have seen on the stage since Julia Marlowe was in her prime. It would be a measureless personal disappointment to me if we do not find her altogether beautiful in her three appearances with Tyrone Power.

To do this work acceptably a woman would have to be of the fine nature of Miss Truax, because it involves an appreciation of the spirit in which this engagement is undertaken.

Rest assured that there would be no monetary return for these brilliant artists in such an engagement if it outran itself three times over with packed houses at every performance. They do not expect remuneration in dollars and cents. They want to give Los Angeles something very precious and almost perfect in the spoken drama, but they want to do it, not for money, but for the good of their own souls. They need a cure after some of their work in motion pictures.

After one week of "The Servant in the House" Mr. Power is to give us that classical comedy by Arthur Wing Pinero called "The Magistrate," and the week following we are to have three of the most wonderful scenes from that universal dramatist the world calls William Shakespeare. We are to have Tyrone Power and Sarah Truax in the second act of Macbeth, and then we are to have Power in the second act of "Julius Caesar" and in the last act of "Othello."

If Los Angeles does not fill that house every performance for those three weeks and clamor for more, then Los Angeles doesn't want the drama and some of us will almost feel as if we did not want Los Angeles.

By the way, on that night the acts will be tempered by the classical interpretative dancing of Miss Violet Romer, and perhaps she will be seen on each of the other evenings.

Since I have said so much for the drain man in "The Servant in the House" do not imagine that you are to be disappointed in the Bishop of Benares, for the part will be taken by the man who created it originally, Wilfred Rogers, who helped Tyrone Power make the production a world success.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. McClory of Chicago have six children, Mildred, Olive, Theodore, Harry, Elizabeth and Robert, whose initials, properly arranged, spell "mother." This happened by chance, as Harry is the oldest and Elizabeth the youngest.

Not for Screen.

PLAN BIG PRODUCTION.

ACTOR FOLK TO PUT ON "JULIUS CAESAR" OUT OF DOORS.

Shakespeare's "Julius Caesar," as a huge outdoor spectacle, employing several thousand persons, including noted stars, enacted on a stage covering several acres of ground, and disclosing to the spectator the famous festivals ahd games of ancient Rome, is the production under preparation by the Hollywood Carnival Association, sponsored by some of Hollywood's best known public and business men.

The production will take place May 19, in the small valley—a natural amphitheater which nestles among the hills at the end of Beechwood drive, in Hollywood. This location was donated by Albert H. Beech, representing Messrs. Clark and Sherman.

The proceeds of the affair will go to the Actors' Fund, and William H. Wyatt, manager of the Mason Operahouse, is treasurer of the finances.

The presentation of the play will be under the supervision of Raymond Wells, a director of the Griffith studio, and wel known in the East as a stage director and actor. Many unique features will be introduced. For instance, motion picture methods will be used in some scenes. There will be a large main stage and four smaller stages, and the "cut-back" of the motion pictures will be employed to assist in visualizing scenes being related by the actors, or otherwise to help make clear the action, lights being centered upon them at the proper moments.

A large orchestra will furnish the music and some of the ancient Roman music will be adapted. An army of electricians will be in charge of the lighting. A high-voltage wire will furnish the current, besides which the Lasky company will loan its portable lighting plant, which carries twenty lamps.

BATTLE OF PHILLIPI.

The great battle of Phillipi will be put on with hundreds of men on a plateau beyond the stages and above them engaged searchlights will play upon the combatants, and a line of flares in the back will serve to throw them into silhouette. Several hundred people will appear in the mob scene, when Brutus makes his famous funeral oration.

A facsimile of a row of Roman houses will form a facade for the processions which will wend their way past Caesar's royal box, and up the hill to the palace.

Dr. Frank L. Riley, the noted English scholar, who has lately arrived from London, will have charge of the technical and acheological features of the production. Capt. Lewis R. Ball will direct the military operations.

The dances will be in charge of Margie E. Riley, late of the Olympic Theater in London, Raymond Duncan, brother of Isadora Duncan, and Jacques Dalcrose, assisted by Miss Capitola Holmes, and Dorothy Ball.

Among the stars who will take part will be Constance Collier, Fannie Ward, Tyrone Power, De Wolfe Hopper, Lillian Gish, Douglas Fairbanks, Dustin Farnum, William Farnum, Tully Marshall, Frank Mayo, Crane Wilbur, William H. Thompson, J. Warren Kerrigan, Guy Woodward, Charles Clary, Mabel Van Buren, Courtenay Foote, Wheeler Oakman, and many others.

The stage directors under Mr. Wells's supervision, will be Francis Powers, Ernest Joy, Frank Beale and Frank Montgomery.

Supporting the enterprise are some well-known business men of Hollywood. A committee has been organized consisting of Messrs. C. A. Cook, C. C. Craig, G. G. Greenwood, Joseph Norvall, J. B. Wilcox, president of the Hollywood Board of Trade, Fred C. Howland and G. R. Dexter.

ALLIES' BIG BENEFIT.

Caledonian Club and Red Cross Society Completing Arrangements for Grand Concert to be Given Wednesday Evening at Trinity.

One of the most notable affairs of the kind ever held in Los Angeles will be the grand allied concert next Wednesday evening at Trinity Auditorium. It has been arranged by the Caledonian Club, in co-operation with thirty other local social organizations and Red Cross societies.

The entire proceeds will be donated, through the Allies' Aid Association No. 1001 Hibernian Building, to three funds which appeal strongly at the present time to the sympathies of every one in America, namely, the French orphans, the homeless Belgians, and the Serbian refugees. All services in connection with the concert have been donated, not only those of the artists, but of the designers and printers of the beautiful souvenir programme likewise those of L. E. Behymer, who has taken over the entire booking arrangements. Therefore a really substantial sum will be obtained for division, as everything points to the auditorium being filled to its full capacity of 1800 seats.

The concert will be under the direction of Jaroslaw de Zielinski, who will also contribute a pianoforte solo, the polonaise by H. Pachulski. The charming young violinist, Miss Audrey Creighton, who made such a hit at a recent gathering of the Celtic Club, will give two solos. The vocalists are Mrs. Louise Marie Bitter, Mrs. Ione Kisselburg, Henri La Bonte, J. B. MacLane Brown, the Scottish tenor, and H. C. Cassidy, all well known to Los Angeles audiences. Sydney Francis Hoben the accomplished New Zealand musician will preside at the organ and will play an improvisation of familiar songs, and in the final part of the concert the national hymns and anthems that are part of the great tableau.

This tableau will be a splendid spectacle, the flags of all the allied nations being borne by groups of society ladies in the national colors or costumes. The idea to be conveyed is the noble part which womanhood has played in the struggle for justice, liberty, and abiding peace.

Other big features of the concert will be the opening numbers by the Scottish Pipe Band, twenty strong, in all their panoply of Caledonia, and the choral numbers by the Welsh Eisteddfod Society, forty trained voices. The Welsh will render by special request the famous war hymn of Wales—"March of the Men of Harlech."

Clune's Broadway.

"The Hunted Woman," with Virginia Pearson and S. Rankin Drew, will be the offering at Clune's Broadway, beginning tomorrow. The picture play is said to be a thrilling one, including, as it does, in its incidents, the blowing up of a mountain, a landslide and some realistic hand-to-hand fights. The pictures taken around Saranac Lake and in New Jersey where the exterior scenes are laid, are said to be remarkable examples of camera art.

Cover Wide Field.

James, the First, of England, who flees to America to escape an undesirable marriage.

Wallace Reid, is featured with Miss Murray in this thrilling romance of the early Colonial days in Virginia.

Clune's Auditorium.

"Ramona," the great cinema-drama at Clune's Auditorium has already entertained more than 100,00 patrons, but will be withdrawn at an early date to be sent to Chicago.

"Ramona" is an artistic entertainment of unusually high order, with gorgeous stage settings, three hours of remarkable music played by a forty-piece orchestra and the grand organ, and is one of the very highest expressions of motion picture esthetics.

Symphony.

"The Blindness of Love," with Julius Steger, the gifted dramatic actor, in the stellar role, will be shown here at the Symphony Theater this week beginning tomorrow. In this production, Mr. Steger, who has long been a favorite on the speaking stage and screen, makes his debut under Metro auspices. He is provided with an excellent role, that of a tender-hearted old man whose love for his only son is blinded through his constant devotion to him. It is in such parts as this Mr. Steger excels.

Palace.

The Palace is to inaugurate a new policy. Beginning today the house will show Paramount Pictures, with such stars as Fannie Ward, Blanche Sweet, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Dustin Farnum, Pauline Frederick, and others.

The attraction this week, beginning today, will be Blanche Sweet in "The Ragamuffin." In this film Miss Sweet has the part of a girl of the tenements, who finally raises herself above her evironment. At the opening, she is the tom-boy of the street, playing this part, it is said, with amusing abandon.

BRIDGE DYNAMITING, LATEST.

Keystone Hires Railroad—Blows Up and Rebuilds Trestle.

The demand for thrills at the Keystone Film Company has been on the increase the past week. Mack Sennett, the director-general of the famous comedy company, has been personally directing Fred Mace in a story where some of the thrills depend on a railroad, a horse which jumps sixty feet from a cliff into water and a sawmill where Fred is tied to the saw and left to be cut in pieces.

The railroad was rented without much trouble and some of the scenes had been taken, when Mr. Sennett created a record for spending money in the manufacture of moving pictures. He called the president of the road on the phone, and, after asking him how much it would cost to blow up a bridge, announced that $18,000 would be well spent, and he would accept the railroad's terms. After the president made the terms he changed his mind and tried again to phone Mr. Sennett. When he did succeed in getting the director-general on the wire he was told Mr. Sennett was very sorry, but at that time a force of a few hundred men were busily engaged building his railroad a new bridge!

ROW OF SURPRISES.

Popular Movie Folk to Appear in Person at Majestic.

Nearly all the well-known stars now residing in Los Angeles have been engaged by Manager Rork to appear at the Majestic in person, on different "surprise nights." If were not for the fact that Los Angeles is now the home of so many of the leading lights of the stage and photoplays, the "surprise" nights at the Majestic could not be so surprising.

De Wolf Hopper, Tully Marshall, Norma Talmadge, Charles Murray, William S. Hart and others will appear during the coming week.

Monday night Charles Murray and the Keystone cops will entertain between photoplays. Tuesday "our own" De Wolf Hopper will dazzle the audience for fifteen minutes; Wednesday afternoon Norma Talmadge will entertain. The rest of the week will be devoted to the other stars mentioned above, different ones appearing on different nights.

THE UNCHLOROFORMED.

The Rev. Artemas Dean of Mt. Carmel, Penn. the oldest living alumnus of Amherst College, is now in his ninety-second year. He entered the class of 1842 at Amherst. In 1848 he was licensed to preach, and the following year was ordained pastor of the Congregational Church at Johnson, Vt. He received the degree of M.A. from Vermont University in 1853, and D.D. from Hamden Sidney College, Virginia, in 1890. Since 1902 he has resided at Mt. Carmel.

Evans Jenkins, of West Chester, aged 96 years, was surprised a few days ago when he received a letter from his brother, Malin Jenkins, which was mailed in 1863, at the commencement of the Civil War, in which his brother had enlisted as a private in the Union Army. His brother was at the front and wrote to Evans in West Chester, but the letter did not reach him. Instead it was received by another man, who failed to forward it to the proper person. Some days ago a letter, inclosing the one from his brother, was received by Mr. Jenkins from a woman, who explained that the letter inclosed had long been in her possession, but she had just learned to whom it was addressed and forwarded it to Jenkins. It is being carefully treasured by the recipient, himself a veteran of the Civil War.

Mrs. Elizabeth Browne of Philadelphia, is 100 years old. She shook hands with the Marquis de la Fayette when she was 8 years old, wearing, as she recalls, a little white dress that day, back in 1824, her mother lifting her up to salute the great Frenchman as the crowds pressed around him in Independence square.

For forty years Thomas Henderson Read has been president and active head of the First National Bank of Shenandoah, Pa., and for many years also the president of the First National Bank of Farragut, First National Bank of Coin, First National Bank of Imogene and the Gravity State Bank. He has just celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday, is still on the job and has been at his desk almost without cessation for forty-five years.

Mrs. Arthur Mozley of Malvern View, Christ Church Road, Cheltenham, who celebrated her 101st birthday recently, is one of the eleven children of the late Mr. Alfred Kempe, a noted antiquary. Three others survive, aged ninety-four, eighty-six and eighty-four, respectively, and two reached ninety-seven, one being Rev. J. E. Kempe, for fifty-two years rector of St. James's, Piccadilly and prebendary of St. Paul's.

Uncle Josh Smith, who lives near Oneonta, Ala., is hale and hearty at 99, and he has 493 children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren, great-great-grandchildren, and great-great-great-grandchildren. They are still alive and will soon have a family reunion. Uncle Josh's youngest child is 15, his oldest is a great-great-grandfather. Uncle Josh is a parson and still preaches in the primitive Baptist churches of his section. He is active, walks five miles any time, has a fine appetite, reads several hours a day and is still a good horseman and rifle shot.

He came to Alabama shortly after it was admitted to the Union. His advent was thrilling. A cyclone overtook him and he sought refuge in a field where a hay pole stood. According to his story he held to the pole and was blown around it like a whirligig. Finally the pole was uprooted, but he hung on, and he and the pole were landed 300 yards away on the hillside. He's living within a stone's throw of the place now.

A hike of more than 4000 miles, from Portland, Or., to Portland, Me., has been arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Owens and family. They expect to make the trip in a leisurely manner, giving vaudeville performances en route to pay expenses and advertise the rose festival. In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Owens, the party will consist of their two daughters, Isabella and Mary Eleanor, and their son, John S. Owens. From Portland the party will go to Tacoma and then to Auburn, then across the mountains to Pasco and Spokane. They will go East from there by Yellowstone National Park. Mr. and Mrs. Owens are nearly 60 years old, but they expect no trouble in making the long trip.

Mishap.

HER SHIN BARKED BY OFFICER'S SPUR.

CAVALRY ACCOUTREMENT TABOO AT CAPITAL RECEPTIONS.

Inside History of Society Doings at Washington Reveals Many Instances of Mishaps Which do not Get into Print—Gloves Problem for Matrons.

BY HARRY CARR.

[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE.]

WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE TIMES, March 14.—One approaches this subject with shrinking modesty; yes and with shivering and dread. But some lady of distinction, whose name history has not yet disclosed, has had her shin barked at an official function by the spurs of a tangoing army officer.

The dress uniform of an army officer is stated by the army regulations to include spurs. And at the swagger army parties it is considered something less than courtesy to appear in less than the fullest of dress uniforms. Consequently, in army circles, when a tango party has taken on the complexion of agonizing swelldom, the officers have appeared decked out in all their gim-cracks and spurs.

Last week, however, it was announced somewhat tarly by one of the Washington society leaders that, at army hops hereafter, the officers can leave off their rib stickers. The only explanation was that, in the course of the dance, ladies sometimes had their stockings jabbed by a too careless use of spurs.

So illustrious a custom could not have fallen were it not an illustrious shin that was plowed up. But beyond this, history is silent.

PROBLEMS OF GLOVES.

A lady, part of whose job is to help the august of the earth to receive at the big official soirees, told me the other day that it's hell on gloves.

She says that her white gloves become so soiled that she has to change them three and four times during the course of an afternoon reception.

She said that this is one of the heaviest expenses of being a distinguished lady. I made what seemed to me to be a very brilliant suggestion. I asked her why the army officer who introduces the visitors could not hand each one a wash rag as they came up and request them to slick up a little. She didn't seem to see anything of merit in the suggestion.

HANDSHAKING.

Of all the Presidents who have occupied the White House they say that Prof. Wilson hates these hand-shaking receptions worst.

Roosevelt positively gloried in them. Taft thought they were rather funny and didn't mind them much. But Dr. Wilson is neither temperamentally nor physically adapted to the hard, almost blood-thirsty, work of greeting three or four thousand handshakers a night. Toward the end of the receptions he always looks ready to drop from exhaustion.

At the last reception one of the Congressmen whom Wilson knew but slightly came along in the line.

"Cheer up, Mr. President," he said in a loud voice as he took the President's hand. "Cheer up; I think the worst of it is over." The President glanced along the long line and sighed.

PHELAN'S REPUTATION.

Senator Phelan has a reputation for never having any nervous anxiety to get anywhere on time. The other day he triumphantly overturned all precedents in this regard.

Long beforehand he was warned of the day set when the Senate Committee on Public Lands was to vote on the California oil cases.

Every one concerned was very much worried lest Senator Phelan should not be there on time. When it became known that Senator Phelan was going to New York to help reorganize the Western Pacific, there was public consternation.

Judge Frank Short of the California oil lobby called on the Senator and with tears in his eyes, implored the Senator not to make the trip. Gov. Gillet called upon the Senator and made a life-and-death case of it. Senator Phelan said he could get back in time from New York. He said he could take a night train back and be here a little while after the committee had convened.

A little after the committee had convened! That wouldn't do at all! They insisted that the Japanese would capture California, or something equally dreadful would happen if he wasn't there for the overture.

Senator Phelan insisted that he positively had to be in New York for that railroad reorganization, which was quite as important to California as the oil measures. But he promised that he would hurry.

He hurried! He wired to New York, begging them to have all the work of reorganization ready to shoot. A taxicab met him at the Pennsylvania station and hurled him through the traffic to the office where the meeting was being held. He sat, watch in hand, through most of the hearing. When the fatal hour struck for his return he dashed back through the traffic and got on the night train for the capital. Arriving here, another taxi was waiting for him. Breakfastless, he tore up the capital hill and burst triumphantly into the committee-room. It was empty. Not quite empty. In one corner sat a refined young lady stenographer powdering her little nose.

"The oil hearing," gasped the Senator.

"The oil hearing?" asked the young lady stenographer. "There isn't any oil hearing."

"No oil hearing," said the Senator sternly.

"No, sir," quoth the young lady. "It was a week from today that the oil matter comes up. The committee is not meeting today. Somebody has made a mistake, I fear."

"Somebody has," remarked the Senator in a terrible voice. And he strode forth looking for somebody.

SHE'S "IN DUTCH."

Freda Hemphill, the colature soprano, is "in Dutch" with the National Press Club, an organization composed of Washington correspondents and Congressmen.

I don't know what a colature soprano is, but Miss Hemphill is one of them. In the course of her concert tour she recently arrived in Washington and her manager invited the press club to invite her to come and see them.

A big shindig was arranged and everybody put on clean shirts and tail coats, and, for this one night, they allowed ladies to come to the club. A professional accompanist was engaged.

The Hemphill arrived in a blaze of glory, and there were social doings and some eating. At the crucial hour the master of ceremonies marched up and said to Freda with a fascinating smile, "We are ready now to enjoy the pleasure of hearing you sing, Madam Hemphill."

Freda fixed him with a cold and glittering stare. "And why should I sing?" she asked frigidly. Nobody could think, right on the spur of the moment, of any reason why she should sing. And so she didn't sing.

Mme. Hemphill was a passenger on the same ship in which I went to the war. One of the other passengers was an elderly gentleman who conducts an academy of music in Washington.

One night a concert was arranged in the salon, and the old gentleman almost played the ivory off the piano keys in his enthusiasm to please.

As he finished the volunteer committee approached Mme. Hemphill, all swelled up over the event.

"Wasn't it grand?" they asked referring in their exuberance to the tickling of the piano.

Mme. Hemphill shrugged her shoulders and whispered to us, "It's awful. It's the worst I ever heard. He makes me sick."

"And now," said the committee, "you will sing for us, Mme. Hemphill?"

"Certainly not," said she coolly and left the cabin.

To give this story the proper dramatic punch I should end it with an incident wherein the ungracious lady was herself turned down and sat upon.

But, sad to say, Mme. Hemphill is simply a riot in Germany and everywhere else where she has been heard to sing. When she gets in her carriage and wanders down Unter den Linden it is like the triumphal progress of a queen.

The only thing about Mme. Hemphill is she doesn't sing for nothing. Neither does Harry Lauder.

Empress Sadako of Japan is the mother of four sons, one having been born to her on December 2. The other children are Hiohito Michinomiva, the crown prince, born in 1901 Yashuhito Atsunomoya, born in 1902; and Nobuhito Terunomiya, born in 1905.

Complexion Beyond Compare and the Secret

Months of Time Are Now Eliminated in the Acquirement of Beauty, Says Valeska Suratt, America's Famous Self-Made Beauty-Actress.

BY MISS VALESKA SURATT

IF EVERY woman who reads this will make up her mind to use the following complexion formula, she will soon experience one of the greatest surprises in her search for beauty. The skin responds with great rapidity when the proper means are used. Use this and see how every red spot, every freckle and blemish will vanish and leave in its stead a lily-like purity and tint like that of the most beautiful faces you have ever seen. Mix two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in half-pint of water and add one ounce of zintone. This will form a satiny cream. Use liberally every day. Any drug store will supply you with the zintone. This is a real skin rejuvenator. How tired women get of the "dope" of bleaches and creams, constantly massaging with little result! Here now you may be assured of those very results which you have so long cherished and worked for. Every woman in the land should use this formula.

MISS PHYLLIS—A quick, absolutely sure way to get rid of blackheads is to sprinkle some neroxin on a sponge, wet with hot water. This, rubbed on the blackheads, will remove them all, big and little, in a few moments. It also leaves the skin with a ruddy glow, vigorous and refreshed. The entire face should be rubbed as stated above, then bathed with cold water. In this way you will be sure to remove every blackhead.

ETTA W. F.—There is only one superfluous hair remover I know of that will not cause a burn or spot on the skin. This is sulfo solution. It dissolves away every hair evenly and completely without burning it off, as is the case with ordinary depilatories. It is wonderful to see how easily and uniquely it works. It leaves the skin soft and beautiful and never fails. It can be used safely on the tenderest skin, anywhere on the body.

MRS. F. G. S.—If you will use my own hair-growing formula, you will find it easy to have glorious hair. This formula is a sure and quick destroyer of dandruff, a wonderful forcer of hair growth and stops hair falling absolutely. Mix half a pint of water with half a pint of alcohol (or take a half-pint of imported bay rum, if preferred) and add one ounce of beta-quinol, which can be obtained at any drug store. This makes the most economical and effective hair treatment you can ever obtain.

BERNARDINE—You will agree that for a head wash nothing surpasses eggol.

This is a cleanser more effective than any soap or other shampoo. It removes every particle of scurf, dirt and skin scale from hair and scalp. Use a teaspoonful of eggol in half a cup of hot water and use as a shampoo. It is very economical, for you can get enough at a moderate cost to produce a dozen or more luxuriant shampoos.

MISS O. T. H.—Even deep wrinkles can be removed quickly by using my sure wrinkle formula. To a half-pint of hot water add two ounces of eptol, which can be obtained at any drug store. Apply this [illegible] in a short time, and wrinkles, crow's feet and deep lines will gradually disappear, making the skin plump, vigorous and youthful. It never fails.

DISAPPOINTED—Am sorry you were not able to get the beta-quinol at the drug store. [illegible] addressing "Secretary to Valeska Suratt, Thompson Bldg., Chicago," enclosing fifty cents, you will be supplied by return mail.

LES MISERABLES—If you will simply use hydrolized talc, the great discomforts of armpit perspiration can be controlled. This brings the secretions in the armpits to normal, the profuse perspiration is checked, and your gowns will not become wet and fade, as a result. Hydrolized talc is excellent for perspiring feet, or for any excessive perspiration. It also destroys all odors quickly and completely. Hydrolized talc is a necessity to every woman's toilet.

BEREFT—Development of the bust is never assured, though the following formula has brought about very satisfactory results. Mix together two ounces of rusteons, half a cup of sugar and half a pint of cold water, and take two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime. Avoid the use of instruments.

MISS F. S. G.—I want you to try my blood cleanser and pimple remover. It never fails to produce results quickly. It is a mixture of twelve ounces of sugar and one ounce of sarsene in a pint of water. Dissolve thoroughly, and take one or two teaspoonfuls after each meal. Get the sarsene in the original package, by the ounce, at any drug store.

IN PASSING BY.

BY EUGENE BROWN.

The Light-Hearted Man.

In the scheme of creation the joy of the nation—
From Beersheba even to Dan,
Is the one we admire—he needs no town crier,
Whom we know as the light-hearted man.
When things are unsteady his mind's ever ready;
He devises the very best plan
With the slightest of labor, he coddles his neighbor
Because he's a light-hearted man.
We believe all he'll tell us; there's naught to repel us;
We follow wherever we can,
He makes life endurable; sorrow is curable—
All this through the light-hearted man.
When he comes to his ending he needs no defending,
Our tears like the rivulets ran,
All men are his mourners and none are his scorners—
Hats off to the light-hearted man.

What's the Use?

Woman is the most wonderful thing in the world. Without her man would be lost. With her, man is completely lost.

What's the use?

Woman without her man is desperate. Woman with her man is deplorable.

What's the use?

Call a woman a thing and she is enangered. Say she is nothing and she is tearful.

What's the use?

God pity them both and pity us all.

Publicity Pays.

We insist on the nomination of Henry Ford for President and Charlie Chaplin for Vice-President. They are two of our best-known citizens and publicity is what counts in getting out the vote. Although opposed to a policy of militarism, there is no question about Henry's ability to take care of an enemy. He would carelessly run him down with a flock of his road beetles. If he dared to get up again the insouciant Charlie would kick his face into shreds with that wanton hind leg of his.

Bro. Ford is already on the primary ticket in his own State of Michigan and is understood to hold no objection to having the movie star as his running mate. With Dave Griffith as campaign manager they ought to be able to put something over worth while.

The Consequences.

Possibly it may turn out that it is a defecto and not a de facto government that Carranza is giving Mexico. If the Carranza forces join with the irregulars in opposition to American arms this country will be but paying the price naturally expected of intervention. It is a simple matter to send a few thousand troops across the border, but it is hard to prophesy when the last one will return or what will happen in the meantime. The crisis makes smoother sailing for the President's army and navy programme, for it is realized by the most dovelike member of the peace party that an army of 250,000 would be necessary if Mexico must be subjugated and policed. The unfortunate thing is that the men who have been noisiest in insisting upon the armed invasion of the rusty republic of unrest will not be found on the fighting lines. They will still be heard in corner games of conversation or scattering lurid language against legislative walls. These brisk talkers make bum soldiers.

Border Courtesy.

Strange what temperamental differences there may be between neighbors. American men and women resident in Mexico have been robbed, shot and assaulted right and left, but Mexican men and women in this country are as safe as if in sanctuary so long as they behave. Gen. Pancho Villa, bandit, assassin and international outlaw, seems to have sent his wife and other female members of his family to Los Angeles for security while he was murdering men and women in a town on the American border. In the event of actual war the large Mexican population in this city will be peacefully protected so long as they themselves engage in no act of war or violence. But heaven help the American men and women still living in Old Mexico.

From Bad to Wurst.

The legal department of the city having passed upon the question as to what constituted soup for free lunch purposes the rounders will now resume their parade. It seems that almost anything can be a soup that didn't start out as a stew. If it is dense enough to hold up a brick or be served with a fork it is permissable so long as it began life as a soup. It may contain particles of meat, fish or turtle or be copiously endowed with all the vegetables that grow in the prolific soil of our famous State and yet it is but soup so long as it began its career in sufficient water for a plunge bath. It is up to the cook. If he waves his wand over a bucket of goulash and calls it soup why soup it is.

For this much thanks.

But there is grief over the passing of the delectable and succulent wienie. The law department concedes that it is a sausage and as such may be given away with a schnitt of hops, but the ruling is that it must not be served hot. Now a "hot dog" that is not hot is neither tempting nor appetizing, so that one of the grand old props of our free lunch system is torn from under us.

This is the wurst cut of all.

THE FUNNY SIDE OF PROHIBITION.

Perhaps we'll find our way upstairs

[Butte (Mont.) Miner:] Uncle Sam might learn a valuable lesson on preparedness from Billy Sunday.

"KERNEL" SUNDAY IS GOOD.

[New York Herald:] Now that Billy Sunday says he wants to be a colonel if war comes, it is opportune to call attention to the fact that one inspiration of the movement for adequate preparedness is to provide against the patriotic young Americans of the future being at the mercy of "colonels" of the evangelistic and Chautauqua tents.

THE WOES OF WOMEN.

Fatty Lewis Figures Out that It's Pretty Soft for Us Men Folks.

BY ARTHUR F. KIDLICK.

"I FEEL for you, Smithy, but I can't reach you," Fatty Lewis declared. "You're not going to boost my temperature up to 108 just because you've got a broken arm. Furthermore, I'm saving my sympathy for Mrs. Lewis and the rest of the women. They need it."

"Ain't it tough enough to have a broken wing without getting a grilling from some sack like you?" Smith inquired.

"I'm sorry for you, all right," Lewis admitted. "But you're lucky and you don't know it. S'posing you had a lot of things to bother you like Mrs. Lewis. Pretty soft for you that you wasn't born one of the weaker sex.

"I don't know what I'm going to do with her," Lewis continued. "It wouldn't surprise me a bit if I went home tonight and found her in a complete mental collapse. She was sure in an awful strain when I left the house. She was so worried that she'd lost her own appetite and had almost forgotten to get any breakfast for the rest of us."

"What's the matter with her?" Hurrah inquired. "Anything serious?"

"Serious!" Lewis repeated. "You'd better believe it was serious. And it wasn't one of them things where a person's got a week to make a decision. Mrs. Lewis had to decide this question between 7 o'clock in the morning and 2 o'clock in the afternoon. There was a meeting of her card club scheduled and the meeting was to be at a house near Thirty-first street and Prospect avenue.

"'I don't know what I am to do,' Mrs. Lewis said to me, looking all worried and upset. 'If I go up and take an Independence-avenue car I'll have to walk an extra block. I'll save one transfer, although it will take longer to make the trip. If I take a Jackson-Hardesty car I'll have to transfer at Fifteenth and Jackson and again at Fifteenth and Prospect, but I'll save walking that block, and if I make good connections I'll make better time.

"'I simply don't know what to do,' she declared in an exhausted tone of voice.

"'It's way over my head,' I replied. 'I wouldn't care to take the responsibility of advising you. In case you can't decide in the next three hours you better call up the hostess and have her put in a substitute for you. Maybe you'll be able to dope it out before the club meets at that house the next time. Don't take snap judgment on these important questions. A person's liable to make a mistake.'

"I suppose I really should have remained at home this morning and helped her out," Lewis admitted, "because I really didn't have anything to do but hustle around and dig up $123.80 for the premium on some life insurance and also pay the gas, water and telephone bills.

"I realize I'm selfish," Lewis continued. "I don't assume the proper amount of responsibility at home. Here I go drifting along, following the lines of the least resistance. I don't have to do a thing but arrange to pay for the stuff that Mrs. Lewis purchases. I slough all the hard work off on my wife. She just gets brain fag designing and planning meals.

"You needn't laugh," Lewis declared. "It's no soft snap deciding whether to fry, scramble or boil the eggs and make coffee and toast and boil some oatmeal. It's no wonder these women break down and show their age sooner than men do. All the boob men have to do is to produce the food. The women do all the work and worrying.

"It's sure telling on Mrs. Lewis.

"'A man hasn't the least conception in the world of all the things a woman has to do around the house,' she often remarks. 'I just wish you had to stay around here about a week. You'd soon find out.'

"'I know it, dearie,' I admitted. 'I know it's no cinch washing dishes three times a day, making up those three beds and doing all that sweeping and dusting. You're a wonder. I don't see how your mother and you are able to do it.'

"I tell you these women don't have no easy time," Lewis declared. "Why, no later than yesterday Mrs. Lewis answered the telephone three times and 'central' told her: 'No one on the line.'

"'And I certainly told that "central" something, too,' Mrs. Lewis declared when I got home. "I know she just rings that bell to pester me. I've a good notion to report her to the chief operator. I had to drop my crocheting and walk from the dining-room clear out to the kitchen.'

"I was genuinely sorry for her," Lewis declared. "It must be all of fifteen or sixteen feet from the dining-room to the kitchen, and that poor woman had to make that trip three times in one afternoon. Here I'd been loafing all day. I'd only stood on my feet for twelve hours and probably walked ten miles.

"'Them telephone girls are great kidders,' I told her. 'All they've got to do is to answer calls just as far as they can reach with their hand, and tell a lot of people who are too busy to look at the clock what time of day it is. They've got a couple of other jokes they spring—the party that called you is gone, and wrong number. But if they get fresh with you just report 'em.'

"Besides 'central' there's the iceman," Lewis continued. "Mrs. Lewis has to walk clear out on the back porch every morning to see whether she needs twenty-five or fifty pounds of ice to last her until tomorrow. All she has to guide her in her decision is the amount of ice remaining in the box. If she makes a mistake and guesses wrong, she has to go to all the trouble of calling up the grocer and have him send over a dime's worth to tide her over till the iceman comes the next day.

"The huckster is another prime evil," Lewis added. "Mrs. Lewis simply has to drop whatever she's doing and walk out to the street. Sometimes it takes five minutes to select enough vegetables to last two days. Now and then she has to make a hurry-up decision as to a choice between green corn and tomatoes. She usually decides this question by buying both corn and tomatoes."

"I didn't know women had all them worries," Hurrah remarked.

"That ain't worries," Lewis replied, "that's just routine, every day stuff. You ought to be around when we're going to have company. That's when the old wrinkle producing brain fag gets in its deadly work.

"Mrs. Lewis gets sadder than Hamlet. She raves and tears around just pawing up the linoleum. She gets all flustrated and don't know whether to have chicken or roast beef.

"'What do you think, dearie,' she says. 'Would you have two vegetables or just one vegetable and a salad?'

"'I never took no domestic science course,' I tell her, 'use your own judgment.'

"After she settles the vegetable and salad question, old dessert bobs up to pester and annoy. Sometimes it takes her three days to decide whether to use some of her mince meat or to open up a can of cherries for her [illegible]. Then comes the big problem.

"'What'll she wear?'

"'Do I like her pink or her [illegible] dress? or shall she wear the [illegible] her blue suit with her black [illegible] waist? Which looks the [illegible]

"'The black lace waist looked best to me when I was [illegible] the wardrobe, because it [illegible] cheapest, but I know she [illegible] black dress so I decided that [illegible] proper racket.

"'Of course, what I'm to wear [illegible] bother me a bit. I'll dress up in a perfectly good 1913 model that I've had for two winters and with [illegible] care and if the moths stay away [illegible] summer I'll probably wear it [illegible]son.

"That company stuff is what [illegible] women to nerve specialists and [illegible] them to take vacations to [illegible] nervous breakdowns.

"Then there's a lot of petty [illegible]ances," Lewis added. "Monday [illegible]ing Mrs. Lewis can't go down[illegible] fore 9 o'clock because the laundry hardly ever gets there [illegible] time for the soiled clothes. [illegible] day is another bad morning [illegible] when the clothes are returned [illegible] the guy that reads the gas [illegible] another that reads the water [illegible] and the boy that collects for the [illegible]per. They come every month.

"Then there's solicitors, [illegible] and beggars. And Mrs. Lewis [illegible] run to the door every time [illegible] the mail carrier's whistle, [illegible] she only gets a letter every [illegible] so. She has to watch where the [illegible]partment store wagons stop [illegible] whose buying something [illegible] times the wagons don't stop, and [illegible] means a waste of two or three min[illegible]utes. On the level, I don't see how she has any spare time at all."

"I'll come in," Smith admitted. "I'd rather be a man with a broken arm than a woman."

"So would I," Lewis admitted. "It's pretty soft for us men folks."

IN THE LIMELIGHT.

William A. Durst, age 7[illegible], of Philadelphia, is said to be the only man now living who was on the "Yankee cheesebox" when she played that little game of hers with the Merrimac.

Col. Walter H. Chatfield, Second Infantry, at Fort Shafter, Hawaiian Islands, has been retired, due to [illegible]. He was born in Connecticut, March [illegible] 1852, and served in the ranks until October, 1880, when he was appointed a second lieutenant in the Fifth Infantry. He was in the expedition to the Sioux Indian agency at Poplar River, Montana, from July to October, 1881, was guarding the construction of the Northern Pacific Railroad from June to December, 1882, and was in the expedition to the Cheyenne Indian agency in 1886, and also in the following year.

Representative Nicholas Long[illegible] of Cincinnati is giving serious consideration to the possibility of getting into the senatorial race on the [illegible] tion of the Southern Ohio Republicans.

Col. Everett O. Foss, formerly a newspaper publisher of Dover, N.H., who claimed the distinction of being the only man to witness the [illegible]tion of two Presidents, died in his home city recently. He was at Ford's Theater when Lincoln was shot, and was also present at the shooting of Garfield. He received the title of colonel by appointment from Gov. Medary of Minnesota, while engaged in newspaper work in St. Paul.

Lucio Sernia of Woodland is the parent of twenty-four children, the last, but probably not least, of his flock has just arrived, and is listed on the side of the brother[illegible]. Sernia is the father of twenty-[illegible] girls and three boys, and has been married twice. He is 63 years old, while his wife is but 36. Notwithstanding her youthfulness, she is the mother of five children. Sernia has been married twenty-five years.

Maj. Charles Young, U.S.A., to whom was recently awarded the Spingarn Medal, is a full-blooded Negro. The medal is given annually to the man or woman of African descent and American citizenship who shall have made the highest achievement during the preceding year in any field of elevated or honorable human endeavor. Maj. Young is a native of Kentucky, and was educated in the public schools of Ohio. He was appointed to the West Point [illegible] Academy from Ohio in 188[illegible], and after graduating in 1889 has served in the Seventh, Ninth and Tenth Cavalry and the Twenty-fifth Infantry of the United States Army. He was [illegible] of an Ohio battalion during the Spanish war. Afterwards he was detailed as superintendent of the Sequoia and Grant National Parks in California, where he made a fine record. In 19[illegible] he was sent to Haiti, and thence [illegible] to the Philippines, where in the absence of the colonel he was in command of the regiment on several occasions. He was promoted to the rank of major in 1912, and was then sent as military attache to [illegible]. There he undertook the work of [illegible]ganizing and training the [illegible] constabulary, and it is especially [illegible] his brilliant work in this connection that he received the Spingarn [illegible].

Joseph Pennell, artist and [illegible] who for so many years has lived in London, is coming back to the United States for good, as far as he [illegible]. Although an American citizen [illegible] was born in this city, Mr. Pennell has been much identified with the art [illegible] of Europe. He is a member of the artistic community in which [illegible] James McNeill Whistler [illegible] achievements in etching and [illegible]raphy are notable. Among [illegible] etchings are those of the Panama Canal and of the Pan-American [illegible]sition in San Francisco. He [illegible] has many friends in literary and artistic circles in this country.

I Wonder.

I wonder if the roses know [illegible]
The beauty and the charm they yield;
Or if the daisy how it decks [illegible]
The gradual grayness of the [illegible]
I wonder if the heart that [illegible]
Hears how the other hearts it [illegible]
Are happy for the joy it [illegible]
In what it does for other [illegible]

I wonder if the star's [illegible]
Of all the sweet content it [illegible]
Upon the little lives of [illegible]
That catch its beauty on the [illegible]
I wonder if the violet [illegible]
The tender and responsive [illegible]
Of love that in the woodland [illegible]
To worship at the shrine of [illegible]

I wonder if all beauty [illegible]
The knowledge of the good [illegible]
From out its all-unconscious [illegible]
The song of bird, the [illegible]
Or whether it is not so [illegible]
Some life [illegible]
Moves gently 'mid its [illegible]
More like a perfume [illegible]

THE RELIGIOUS RAMBLER.

Forty Millions have been Counted by New Church Census Plan—The Stirring Story of what House-to-House Visitation has Lately Done in American Cities—Jews, Catholics, Protestants Unite—Labor Unions and Chambers of Commerce Also Go in for New Civic Service.

SINCE one part of the world does not know what another part is doing, the simple fact that a house-to-house census has been made, in the name of religion, of more than 40,000,000 persons in this country, will be news to most readers.

More remarkable yet, this work has been done by highly organized volunteers, and with the complete and active co-operation of Protestants, Catholics and Jews. This is one distinctively religious enterprise in which the three leading faiths of America cordially co-operate; and that, too, by the direction of their highest officials. When the church census was made in Baltimore Cardinal Gibbons served as an honorary member of the committee.

This is pre-eminently a city plan, although it is also worked locally in many small communities. It is done in big, commanding fashion, and the active co-operation of city officials and Chambers of Commerce and labor unions is secured. It is usual for Mayors to issue special proclamations in connection with these house-to-house visitations, and in several instances Governors of States also have recognized the importance of the work by official proclamations.

The incidental effects of the work are varied and unexpected. In one city, it brought the Chamber of Commerce and the central labor union together when they had been engaged in a serious industrial conflict.

A TWO-HOUR CITY CENSUS.

The magnitude of the task of taking a complete census of a city is heightened by the fact that all the work is done within two hours on a given afternoon.

That two-hour period is preceded by weeks of work, such as is now in progress in Oklahoma City, led by Mr. J. Shreve Durham of Kentucky, superintendent of home visitation for the International Sunday-school Association, who has directed these campaigns in Chicago, Philadelphia, San Francisco, Louisville, Toledo, Baltimore, Montreal, Detroit and many other cities. New York is to be adventured in the near future, during the present year.

The immense resources of volunteer labor that are at the command of the churches is in no case better illustrated than by these city censuses.

Hundreds and thousands of workers, Protestant, Catholic and Hebrew, representing all walks of life, from leading professional and business men to high school students, enroll as visitors.

They are carefully organized by districts, as the average city is too large to be handled as a unit. Each district has a local headquarters, which is a church, a synagogue, a Knights of Columbus Hall, a parish house, a Y.M.C.A., or some other appropriate meeting place. Thither the visitors of each district repair for instructions, and to it also they carry their reports.

These district chairmen have all themselves been drilled by the General Committee, representing all faiths and all general civic organizations. Usually, this census is the first occasion in a city's life wherein the representatives of diverse creeds have worked so closely together for each pair of visitors to represent two faiths or two denominations. The spectacle of a Catholic and a Protestant standing side by side on a doorstep, inquiring about the home's religious affiliations, and extending a common invitation card, is wholesome for any community.

THE FACTS THEY GATHER.

After all preliminary instruction has been given and all necessary literature distributed the thousands of visitors assemble at the given hour in their district headquarters. Each has a card marking with a red line the block to be covered. Ordinarily visitors do not cross a street, one pair's share being a city block or less. Visitors always go two by two, for mutual reassurance and assistance.

Ordinarily a half holiday is declared in the city schools for the visitation and children are told to go home and help receive the visitors. This is especially important in foreign-speaking homes, where the children commonly act as interpreters. Naturally the newspapers have kept the public informed of the progress of the plans for the census.

The only literature distributed by the visitors is an invitation, to the following effect, in three or four languages, ranging from French and German to Chinese and Arabic, according to population:

"We come today with a cordial invitation to you from every church, synagogue and Sabbath-school in this community. If you attend the services of your choice regularly all extend greetings; if you do not, all join in a most earnest request that you do so. We want to assure you of a hearty welcome."

Visitors are instructed not to distribute tracts or engage in religious conversation or engage in prayer; all of that is left for subsequent church work. The one object of the census takers, aside from leaving an invitation, is to learn certain definite facts. These facts are (1) the name of every man, woman and child in the city, (2) his faith or denomination, (3) the local church or synagogue attended or preferred, (4) whether a member of any church in the city, (5) whether an attendant upon Sunday-school, and (6) the ages of all persons under 21 years.

ASPECTS OF "CITY RELIGION."

Since each pair of visitors has only from thirty to fifty homes to visit, the work is completed within two hours. The cards are turned into the district headquarters. Later they are assorted by denominations and churches and synagogues, and distributed to the proper authorities. All Catholic names go to the archbishop or bishop, all Jewish names to the rabbis, and all Protestant names to the prodenominational representatives.

A separate list is printed of all persons, together with their addresses, who expressed no church preference, and this is sent to all churches and synagogues alike. Thus far only about 6 per cent. of the persons visited have failed to express a church preference.

An amazing number of lapsed church members are always uncovered. In Chicago alone 42,600 unplaced church letters were recorded as a result of the visitation.

All these facts give an alert church—and most churches are themselves aroused by the census—a valuable body of actual data on which to work. At the same time the canvass puts the public in a receptive mood by reminding them that the church is interested in them. Civic leaders say that they have their reward in the new spirit of good will and co-operation which the International Sunday-school Association's home visitation brings to their community.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood Sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name, and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

"Worried" writes: "I am only thirty, and up until a few months ago never knew what it was to feel tired or worn out. Now the feeling of fatigue never leaves me. I've 'lost my backbone,' have a shortness of breath and feel almost exhausted and wholly without ambition. Feel grouchy and have pains in the back of my head and spine. What will liven me up and make me strong?

Answer: You need a good tonic to build up your blood and soothe and strengthen your nerves; something to restore your energy and overcome the weariness and make you a man again. Three grain cadomene tablets are most effective and highly recommended. Start using them now, and in a short time you should feel fine and better than you ever did.

"Mary G." asks: "How may I increase my weight? I am very bony and angular looking. I eat plenty, but it does not seem to nourish my system."

Answer: The most satisfactory and healthful treatment, to increase your weight, you will find in the use of three-grain hypo-nuciane tablets.

"Worried" writes: "I have constant headache and backache, my feet swell and I am tired all the time. My eyes look puffed and appear yellow. The urine is very little and of bad odor. My blood seems to be turning to water.

Answer: You have a bad case of kidney trouble and you should be very careful. Don't work too hard and avoid taking cold. If you will begin at once taking balmwort tablets, you will get almost immediate relief and continued treatment should greatly relieve you.

"Mrs. W. J. T." writes. "You helped a cousin of mine when she had diseased blood. I think now my blood is impure and I want a good blood medicine. I am very much constipated."

Answer: If your blood is impure you would know from some of these symptoms; constipation, headache, coated tongue, sallow complexion, breaking out of the skin, tired feeling and possibly indigestion and some fever. Take three-grain sulpherb tablets not sulphur. They are splendid to clean the system and put the blood right.

"Tailor" asks: "I suffer constantly with rheumatism. Sometimes I can hardly walk the pains are so severe and muscles and joints so stiff."

Answer: There is no better treatment for rheumatism than the following prescription. I have used it with most satisfactory results in my practice for years. Any rheumatic sufferer should use it for quick and permanent relief: 2 drams iodide of potassium, 4 drams sodium salicylate, ½ oz. wine of colchicum, 1 oz. comp. essence cardiol, 1 oz. comp. fluid balmwort and 1 ozs. of syrup sarsaparilla. Mix and take a teaspoonful at meal times and again before going to bed.

"Ada" asks: "How may I cure my case of a very disagreeable itching and dandruff condition and at the same time not damage the growth of my hair?

Answer: I would suggest the immediate use of plain yellow minyol to remove dandruff and make the scalp alive and healthy. Three or four treatments should correct your scalp and beautify the hair.

"Sue" writes: "I have a cold and cough constantly. My throat and chest are sore, and I am getting discouraged."

Answer: Secure from your druggist 2½ oz. concentrated essence mentho-laxene and mix with one pint of simple sugar syrup. You will find this syrup very effective in opening up the air passages and healing the diseased inflamed membranes. It breaks up your cold and cough and relieves the system of the catarrhal inflammation.

"Too Fat" writes: "Since I have gotten so stout, I don't feel well and I tire easily. I want to reduce safely but surely."

Answer: Five grain arbolone tablets are highly indorsed as safe and sure fat reducers. I have recommended them in many cases of obesity and they have given perfect satisfaction.

THE HELPING HAND.

"How far that little candle throws his beams!
So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

The Philadelphia branch of the American Red Cross which meets at the residence of Mrs. Charlemagne Tower, has been made as interesting to those attending the meetings as it has been helpful to the suffering soldiers of Europe. Notwithstanding how disagreeable the weather the fashionable society's "willing workers" have been present.

Of course, interest in the suffering soldiers is great, but interest in the social side of the meetings is perhaps even greater, since women are finding that by remaining away they miss opportunities to make strong and lasting friendships with those whom they have admired and wished to know, but have always been too busy to do so. The members have grown closer to each other in this one season than would have been possible in two or three seasons of meetings at balls and after-theater supper dances. Each meeting is like a big reception in Mrs. Tower's beautiful home, and as one woman said, "I love the meetings because I love the house, with its treasures picked up abroad, all combined into a restful, soothing, beautiful whole."

About a dozen boxes have been filled with surgical bandages, tampons, cousinets, stump socks, bandage covers, lounging robes, crutch pads, sponges, tape dressings, folded dressings, fracture pillows and underwear and have been dispatched; and when you consider that the boxes are as big as a small garage you will realize that this output is remarkable.

The organization of which Mrs. Tower is president, or chairman as she prefers to be called, is strictly neutral and all countries are being sent supplies, each member, upon arriving with finished articles, being given the privilege of deciding to which country they are to be sent.

Announcement is made of a gift to the University of Chicago by Mrs. Vandelia Varnum Thomas, widow of the late Dr. Hiram W. Thomas of Chicago, which is to be used in maintaining a series of annual lectures in memory of Dr. Thomas. These lectures, when established, are to be given, according to the letter of gift, "by representatives of the larger faith and express the ever-growing thought of the world in religion and life." They are to be made accessible to people outside the university as well as to the members of the student body.

The Paris City Council, on motion of Henri Rousselle, has voted a credit of 4,700,000 francs (about $940,000) for erection, in the grounds of Paris hospitals, of huts in which 2500 tubercular soldiers can be given open-air treatment. The cost of treatment will amount to 3,000,000 francs (about $600,000) yearly.

Even the smallest scratch on the hand sends a Bethlehem steel plant employee to the dispensary. There is no debating whether this or that hurt is sufficient to make the laborer stop work—it is compulsory that the doctors do the deciding. More than ninety out of every 100 men can immediately return to their work after the necessary medical precaution has been exercised. When it is recalled that injuries at first no more serious than a slight scratch may lead to the amputation of a limb or even death, the reason why 1300 or more toilers visit the dispensary of the Bethlehem steel plant every week is at once apparent.

Chester D. Massey of Toronto, Can., has made arrangements to turn over to the American University at Washington $50,000 from the Massey estate. The money is to create an endowment fund bearing the name of Hart A. Massey, the income of which shall be used for the support of graduate fellowships in the American University. In the start assignments to such fellowships priority of claims shall be allowed to young men and women of the Dominion of Canada. But if the fellowships are not thus assigned, they shall be open to all.

This gift has unusual interest from the fact that it makes operative what long has been a cherished desire of the late Hart A. Massey, widely known as the founder of the great farm implement manufactory of Canada. The senior Mr. Massey wished to make a contribution from Canada which should establish, if possible, some link between the Methodisms of Canada and of the United States.

At a recent meeting at the home of Mrs. Whitelaw Reid in New York, at which 200 prominent men and women were present it was decided that three base hospitals, and later a hospital ship and transportation unit should be established by patriotic women of New York in the campaign of preparedness. The cost of one of the base hospitals will be borne by a woman who is well known in New York and Newport society. So in leaving a check for $24,000, the estimated cost of each hospital, she asked that her name not be made public.

Seldom has such spontaneous and sincere enthusiasm been shown at a meeting in New York. Unlimited financial support was promised. Although not publicly announced, it was said that contributions sufficient to equip ten base hospitals would be forthcoming within a few days.

EDUCATORS, SCIENTISTS.

Dr. Alonzo E. Taylor, Rush professor of physiological chemistry at the University of Pennsylvania, has been appointed Red Cross attache of the American Embassy in Berlin. Dr. Taylor is one of the best-known professors in the university medical school. Recently several of his classes were conducting personal experiments to test theories regarding pituitary gland ailments and to discover the amount of nitrogen, which would be manifested in the blood from an increased meat diet. Almost a hundred students at one time were undergoing "sugar" tests, after eating certain amounts of sugar each day.

Edmund Heller, a naturalist, who has worked with Theodore Roosevelt in Africa, has been added to the Asiatic expedition of the American Museum of Natural History. The expedition is to leave on March 20, in charge of Roy C. Andrews, and for two years it is to be in parts of China never before zo-ologically explored. Mr. Heller is a graduate of Leland Stanford University and one of the world's best-known naturalists. His researches among small mammals have been notable. As there are believed to be many small animals in Southern China which have not been known to science, the work of Mr. Heller may be of especial importance.

Dr. David Brainard Spooner, who propounds the theory that Buddha was not a Hindu, as is the prevailing belief, is an American, a native of New England, and for some time has been in the employ of the archeology department of the government of India. It is his belief that Buddha was a Persian and a renegade from Zoroastrianism, rather than a renegade from Hindu teaching, which also explains a reference to Buddha in the ancient Parsee scriptures as a heretic, a term which could not have been used had he not been connected originally with Zoroastrianism, believes Dr. Spooner. Among this explorer's achievements is the unearthing of Buddha's bones from a mound near Peshawur in Northwestern India.

Dr. Jeremiah W. Jenks, head of the division of public affairs at New York University, has left for the Far East. He will spend some time in the Philippines for the purpose of studying conditions in the islands. On his way home he will visit China and Japan. In all of these countries he will deliver lectures. Dr. Jenks's work in the university will be handled by Prof. Willard C. Fisher, recently of Wesleyan University and in 1914 Progressive candidate for Governor in Connecticut.

Prof. William M. Trueblood, who for thirty-five years has been head of the English department of Earlham College at Richmond, Ind., has resigned as head of the department, according to an announcement just made public. He will continue his class work, but the administrative duties of the department will be taken over by Prof. John D. Rea at the beginning of the next school year.

Dr. Masatoru Sawayanagi, the new president of the Japanese Imperial Society of Education, was formerly president of the Tokio Higher Commercial School and the Imperial University of Kyoto. There has been much rivalry between the supporters of the new president and the education department authorities. Dr. Sawayanagi taught at Waseda many years ago, but he was very unpopular with the students. Since those days he has maintained an antagonistic attitude toward Waseda, hence his unpopularity with the present administration, which is mainly composed of Waseda or Count Okuma's men.

H. V. Hall, leader of the expedition of the University of Pennsylvania to the unexplored Asiatic wastes, has returned to Philadelphia with a large collection of ethnological specimens of rare interest. Mr. Hall's expedition was away nearly two years. With Mr. Hall was Miss Czaplicka, a young and gifted Polish woman of slight physique, of Somerville College, Oxford, and she represented the Oxford Committee on Anthropology on the expedition, which was originally planned by her. Mr. Hall pays a high tribute to this young woman, who faced all the dangers and the cold unflinchingly and came through in perfect health.

Sundown.

Slender boats were sailing seaward
And the tide was silver laughter
And the sky was like a story book to me.
Youthful breezes kissed the ships
With their eager, wooing lips,
Where a magic dawn was breaking on the sea.
We were thrilling there together
In the rosy, lyric weather,
And the graceful boats were putting out to sea.
Somber boats are sailing homeward
And the tide is ebbing slowly
And the ocean whispers sober tales to me.
Plaintive birds are flying low,
Through the amber afterglow,
And the weary clouds are drooping to the sea.
All the vast of things is calling
And the dusk is sweetly falling,
And the boats are coming homeward from the sea.

Art and Artists.

Mr. Moran was unable to appear, but four of his interesting pictures were displayed, and are still on the wall. They are arranged round a portrait of Mr. Moran by Carroll Beckwith—not a particularly good piece of painting, though it was done in 1915. It shows us a fine, hale, handsome man, pink-cheeked and gray-whiskered. But one wishes Mr. Beckwith had not fumbled so in his painting of the hands.

Among the pictures not hitherto exhibited is a large canvas by Jean Mannheim, "The Bathers," which is decidedly blatant in execution, but whose strength and interest are undeniable. Moreover, there is subtlety in the way sea and air are felt behind the huge rock near which the little girls are bathing. Harry Bailey's "Portrait of Collie," a sympathetic study of a dog, forcefully done, is also new.

Kathryn Leighton's "Morning on the Seco," a conscientious study, is the best canvas I have seen from this artist; Arthur B. Dodge contributes a well-drawn water color, "On San Nicolas Island," which has much of the character of an illustration and is really not a picture; Helen Kahlmeier's "Portrait Sketch" is small but good, handled in a loose painter-like manner; Arion Putnam's "A Glassy Sea" is a careful, if rather heavy, rendering of nature.

And these are all the new pictures I found. Old ones were sent in by Aaron Kilpatrick, Henrietta Shore, Jack Smith, William Wendt, Helena Dunlap, Benjamin Chambers Brown, Guy Rose, A. B. Titus, Hanson Puthuff, Esther Hunt, Max Wieczorek and others.

Ye artists, wake up to a realization of your high emprise. Take to heart the advisory line of Longfellow, in which you—with the rest of us—are urged to be "up and doing." Otherwise your fate will be oblivion.

Miss Gearhart's Water Colors.

Fifty or sixty small water colors from the brush of Frances Hammel Gearhart were shown through the past week in the Los Angeles High School. Miss Gearhart does not teach art, but English history—and her exhibition came as a genuine surprise to many of her pupils, who knew her only as an authority on remote dates and forgotten wars. Nevertheless, her pictures are good pictures, well worth your pilgrimage up the hill to the high school—only it happens to be too late.

Miss Gearhart has been a close student of nature for many years, painting with love and understanding. I had occasion to speak of her work some years ago, when she exhibited in the Kanst gallery. At that time she was rather over-faithful to truths of local color, with the result that her pictures often lacked tone, but she has striven against this tendency, and now her work has much greater harmony, while she has reached the moods of nature with finer insight. Some of her studies of mist and fog are full of charm.

The smaller studies, in guache, are direct, forceful, simply and beautifully decorative. The pictures in which she introduces the figure are also very attractive. The figure is generally a Japanese man or woman working in a huge garden of flowers or vegetables, and expresses action in a very true way; it is the center of a lovely picture, much color under sunlight.

Miss Gearhart has painted Southern California in all seasons of the year, but more often in spring, handling the green of grass and tree with the firmness of hand that comes from tenderness of feeling.

Marines by Cuprien.

An exhibition of about 100 marine pictures from the brush of Frank W. Cuprien opened on Wednesday at the Kanst gallery, to continue for several weeks. This is the largest and most important exhibition ever given by Mr. Cuprien in Los Angeles, and not a few of the pictures are new. They will be reviewed in this column next week. This afternoon a reception will be tendered the artist at the gallery. All lovers of art are invited.

Landscapes by E. B. Smith.

Thirty new landscapes by Ernest Browning Smith are now on exhibition in the Royar gallery, where they will remain for two weeks. The exhibition includes subjects from Catalina Island, Laguna Beach, Monterey, Lake Tahoe and elsewhere, and is perhaps the strongest yet given by Mr. Smith. More extended notice of the pictures will appear next week.

"Western Art."

Western Art, edited by Beatrice de Lack Krombach, has been revived. It will be published four times a year with color supplements, and a bi-weekly supplement of sixteen pages will also be issued. The first supplement, under date of March 7, contains an editorial on "Southern California's Art Standard," with reviews of exhibitions, etc.

OVER THE SEA.

General Henri Phillipe Petain, the heroic defender of Verdun against the German onslaught, has but recently been promoted. He is still in his fifties, and most of his staff are much younger. In appearance he is said to somewhat resemble the late Lord Roberts. His rise has been so rapid that he is little known to the French people as a whole.

Chen Chi, who was appointed commissioner-general of China to the Panama-Pacific Exposition, has of late been inspecting the eastern factories and warehouses connected with the silk and tea trade, seeking ideas which may be put to practical use in his own country. He plans to make a complete report to the Chinese government on the status of these interests.

Queen Mary of England is at the head of an organization of women who have started a crusade to persuade society women to set an example to the nation by reducing their expenditure to the strict minimum and giving up all expensive living and lavish entertaining.

The new Italian Ambassador to Japan, the Marquis Guicciolì, was at one time secretary in the embassy at Washington and was later Minister at Belgrade. His last post was at Sofia.

Admiral Jellicoe of the British navy, carried off all the gunnery prizes when he was a midshipman on board the Britannia.

Lord Chelmsford, who will become Viceroy of India this month, is captain of the Fourth Dorsetshire Regiment in India. He has already served as Governor of Queensland and New South Wales. Prior to his advent abroad he was a member of the London County Council, and before that had served as a member of the London school board.

Avoid Operations

Statistics show an appalling increase, every year, in operations performed upon women for some derangement of the feminine organism.

It is perfectly true that some of these troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary—but it is also true that many women have escaped the necessity for an operation by removing the trouble with even after an operation has been advised as the only means of recovery.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

These Three Letters Prove That Statement.

Tennille, Ga.—"I want to tell you how much I have been benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. About eight years ago I got in such a low state of health I was unable to keep house for three in the family. I had dull, tired, dizzy feelings, cold feet and hands nearly all the time and could scarcely sleep at all. The doctor said that I had ulceration and without an operation I would always be an invalid, but I told him I wanted to wait awhile. Our druggist advised my husband to have me try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has entirely cured me. Now I keep house for seven and work in the garden some, too. I am so thankful I got this medicine. I feel as though it saved my life and have recommended it to others with benefit."—Mrs. W. E. Lindsey, R.R. 3, Tennille, Ga.

Des Moines, Iowa.—"Four years ago I was very sick and my life was nearly spent. The doctors stated that I would never get well without an operation and that without it I would not live one year. My husband objected to any operation and got me some of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it and commenced to get better and am now well, am stout and able to do my own housework. I can recommend the Vegetable Compound to any woman who is sick and run down as a wonderful strength and health restorer. My husband says I would have been in my grave ere this if it had not been for your Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. Blanche Jefferson, 703 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa.

Bellevue, Pa.—"I suffered more than tongue can tell with terrible bearing down pains and inflammation. I tried several doctors and they all told me the same story, that I never could get well without an operation and I just dreaded the thought of that. I also tried a good many other medicines that were recommended to me and none of them helped me until a friend advised me to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. The first bottle helped, I kept taking it and now I don't know what it is to be sick any more and I am picking up in weight. I am 20 years old and weigh 145 pounds. It will be the greatest pleasure to me if I can have the opportunity to recommend it to any other suffering woman."—Miss Irene Froelicher, 1923 Manhattan St., North Side, Bellevue, Pa.

The strongest and most trustworthy letters come from women who have escaped this terrible ordeal by the timely use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Unless an operation is necessary at once, try this famous old remedy first. It can do no harm and in many cases it has been a blessing. The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

AMONG SOME WORTHY BOOKS.

The Most Modest Novelist in the World Presents a Good Strong Story in "The Side of the Angels"—Theodore Dreiser Carries Uncanny but Impressive Fancy Into the Realm of Ghosts in a Book of Unusual Plays—Louis Untermeyer Shows All Who Care to See that He can Pipe a Tune on Almost Any Poet's Flute and do it Skillfully—Among the Books on War Appears One by Ian Hay Beith, Which We have not Hesitated to Call a "Classic."

"The Side of the Angels."

Basil King is perhaps the most modest novelist in the world, though but a little shrinking would go a long way toward making anyone eligible among the few candidates for that distinction. He has not only declined to write interviews with himself, claim a distant relationship with some prominent personage, purloin anecdotes and tell them in the first person, but—mirabile dictu!—he has been known to refuse newspapers and magazines a photograph of himself. It is indeed a violation of tradition not to have a striking picture in an uncharacteristic pose taken when a new book is published.

Now it is not irrational to suppose, and in this instance it may be done with accuracy, that his indifference to the trimmings of authorship is indicative of concentrated attention to its essentials. Long before his anonymity was displaced by his name, those novels by the author of "The Inner Shrine" were recognized as not without the points associated with the patient craftsman and the sincerity of one with strong religious feeling.

That isn't another way of saying his books are "great;" it is merely another way of saying they are admirably distinctive. Were he an Englishman instead of a Canadian, and were his books imported to the beating of tom-toms, he might, as many who are not his equals have done, become a fad. Were he more blatantly religious, instead of deeply and dignifiedly so, and could his publishers boast, as those of Harold Bell Wright's have done, that $150,000 was spent for advertising purposes in ten months, and were his photograph, together with that of his family, distributed to all who ordered advance copies of his latest book, as was the very seductive inducement offered on behalf of Mr. Wright's latest book, Basil King might have a larger following than now belongs to him.

His latest book, "The Side of the Angels" (Harper & Bros.,) is easily among his best. The story, stripped of word-texture and adornment, has the novelty of viewpoint and complication which justifies the telling of it. In other words he has a story to tell, though it is a variation of a shop-worn, time-worn theme. It is complicated without being tangled, and not without certain sensational aspects, but is wholly without sensational treatment.

Thor Másterman returns to the suburban New England village where his family has lived for generations, with medical degrees from distinguished universities of Europe, and is on the verge of coming into a substantial inheritance left by his grandfather, a beneficence upon which his half-brother, Claude, looks with unmalicious jealousy.

Obviously, Thor is the character upon which Mr. King's affection has centered and Thor is shown as attractively manly and honest. Not all "heroes" are by any means attractive, though they be shown manly and honest as the leading character in an autobiographical novel by Peter Clark MacFarlane. (Vide, "Held to Answer.") But, artistically, he has accomplished something more difficult in the presentation of Claude. Claude is not a weakling; he simply lacks strength. He is not selfish, but is wholly incapable of understanding the generosity of his brother, and would have found it maddeningly incomprehensible had he known the painfully unselfish extent of that generosity. Among the families old as the Mastermans is the Fays, to whom Rosie belongs; but the Fays were not shrewd enough to hold on to their property and so dropped into the lower social caste.

Saying that both men love her is not to convey adequately that this is no commonplace situation; nor is the tenseness of the complication expressed by disclosing that Thor marries Lois Willoughby despite recent reverses to her father. She is an admirable woman and admirably drawn, and is not without an inkling, which becomes something more, of Thor's regard for Rosie. However, it is not for mercenary motives—far from them—that she is and remains sympathetic with and loyal to Thor. The mere presentation of a true woman, in an ordeal so embarrassing and repugnant, who neither poses as a martyr nor is ever without graciousness, is sufficient in itself to distinguish a modern novel from its contemporaries.

Both Claude and his father, who is also Thor's, are without the sense of moral responsibility that is the corner-stone of the plot, being exemplified to the fullest extent in Thor. Neither is immoral, nor criminal, but they lack that strong fiber without which real, true character cannot be woven. It is because every impulse in Thor's nature resents this indifference to responsibilities which, by the duty he recognizes, Claude is obligated to accept for Rosie, that tragedy follows.

And Mr. King, perhaps from distaste for so stale a complication, but we prefer to view it as an ironical contempt for the prevalent theory that by the mere act of seduction a man is more obligated to marry a girl than by winning her love, does not make Rosie's loss of virtue the dynamic factor in the plot. We suppose that she has lost it—perhaps chiefly because we have been schooled by novelists to believe that no other affliction induces a girl to seek relief by attempting suicide. But whether she has or not is, in this case, immaterial. The dynamic factor is Thor's anguish that he has missed what is dearest to him in life, combined with a suddenly awakened fury that Claude is indifferent to the elemental requirement of moral responsibility.

That is a theme of no small magnitude and one of importance. Mr. King has made much of it. "The Side of the Angels" is strong. It has dignity. Those who believe, and those who know, themselves to be discriminating readers would do well to look into it.

"PATIENCE WORTH."

The only book ever written by a "ghost" that shows any decided literary merit is reviewed in this issue of The Times Illustrated Weekly under the title of "Patience Worth: a Psychic Mystery."

"Plays of the Natural and the Supernatural."

Mr. Theodore Dreiser, he of the realism that will not be placated, the Balzacian chronicler of marital infelicities and the adulteries of millionaires, has turned to the dramatic form, and with characteristic indifference to such little things as technique, tradition and limitations, has adapted but few of the seven plays to the dramaturgical form. In other words, five and probably six of the plays could not be played without even more "wizardry" than Belasco has yet shown.

The natural plays are a bit clumsy, especially "The Girl in the Coffin;" and "Old Ragpicker," though an artistic study of a feeble-minded derelict, is without the dramatic theme—"action," it is sometimes called—that is, whether rightly or not is another question, required on the stage. "The Light in the Window" is the least dramatic in form, being constructed with soliloquies and segregated dialogue to show how people err in associating happiness with wealth.

The worst has been said. Meeting Mr. Dreiser on his ground, and every artist has the right to choose his medium, we must tear down the curtains between our material and the dimensionless world of those who have died, and let in a number of ghosts. This is required in all the "supernatural plays."

Mr. Dreiser remains essentially the novelist; his belong to narrative rather than to drama; they are scarcely narrative, either, but rather mordant, fanciful studies interpreting what he has conceived as the way invisible spirits might view and influence our lives.

The most dramatic is unquestionably "In the Dark." Because all of the "supernatural" plays have been called fanciful studies does not imply that they are weaklings; though they have vividity rather than what is usually meant when a play is said to have dramatic strength.

"In the Dark" shows the agitation of ghosts when a murder is committed, how they flutter and weave about the policemen, and how a ghost with red eyes hovers hungrily above the blood-smeared body of the victim, and how the murderer is caught, questioned and inveigled into a confession.

"Laughing Gas" is perhaps the least dramatic and most far-fetched in conception. A physician is put under "laughing gas" for an operation, and while unconscious listens to a discourse decidedly metaphysical by "Demyaphon," an element of chemistry, and "Alcephoron," a power of physics, so amusing to the patient that he comes out from under the anesthesia laughing, and understanding that the vibratory scheme of the universe is merely another way of expressing laughter, and that life, medicine, science and all else is folly.

"The Blue Sphere" shows how a bright spirit lures with a bauble a deformed and creeping baby to the railroad track, where, out of mercy to itself and its parents, it is allowed to be killed. The idea is founded on euthanasia, and the play might be taken as grewsomely humane.

In "The Spring Recital" Mr. Dreiser's fancy is impressive, but there is reason to suspect that if he did not do so naturally he would deliberately inject something irreverential, a little of that uncouthness and shabby brutality which realists of his type seem to think essential to all comment and pictures of life. Stress on outcasts and derelicts may as easily become an affectation, pronounced and unattractive as the now much-laughed-at love-sickness of the Victorian novelists and poets. And among the stately ghosts of Egyptian priests, monks and others, who come as shadows to listen to the organist, disgruntled at the few people in attendance and unaware of his invisible audience, comes also the bum; and this bum supplied a comic relief, not greatly dissimilar to the comic tramp of melodrama. It would be going wholly outside of critical jurisdiction to say the play is "spoiled" by it, but the impressiveness of the piece is lessened by the inevitable and not unamused attention given to this eccentric and insolent ghost.

The plays are unique, especially among "supernatural," a sustained and uniform attitude is shown; they are something more than eccentric, than the bid of novelty for attention. Back of them, back of the words, back of the stories, is an idea; and the ideas have been worth the variations Mr. Dreiser has used.

"—— and Other Poets."

Louis Untermeyer is both a poet and a critic, publishing from time to time serious verse and conducting regularly a literary page; but in "——and Other Poets" he appears as a critical poet, a parodist, and has a little carefully good-mannered fun with contemporary Parnassians and some of the more stately names of other days.

In more than one or two instances Mr. Untermeyer has overshot his target; in many instances only a forced twist has saved the parody from seeming to be very nearly a serious bit of verse in the manner of the poet aimed at.

When he allows Edwin Arlington Robinson to tell what he knew of "Simple Simon," Mr. Untermeyer certainly transcends mere parody. His effort has the nebulosity of psychology to which some of our very earnest singers are addicted.

"What does it matter—who are we to say
How much is clear and how much there must be
Behind his mystical directness—see,
He left us smiling, and a bit astray.
Yet there were times when Simon would convey
A cryptic sharpness, etched with something free;
For he was touched with fire and prophecy,
And we who scarcely knew him, mourn him . . . Eh?"

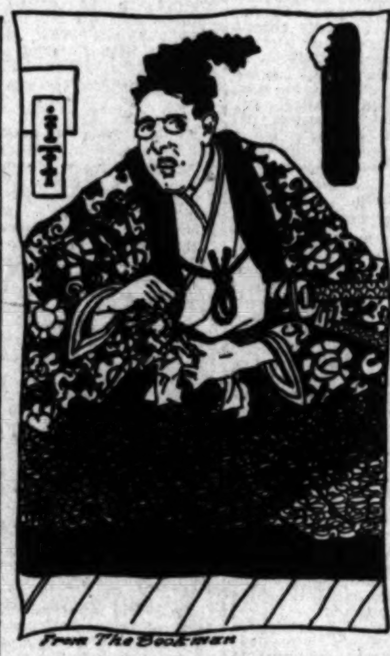
Lamentable as it is to acknowledge it, that isn't a parody at all. That Mr. Untermeyer wrote it with ironical intent is praiseworthy, but he is too wise a fellow himself not to know that with tongue in cheek he has written stuff about "Simple Simon" that many so-called poets would gladly claim seriously as their own.



From The Bookman

Theodore Dreiser,

From a Japanese drawing by P. B. McCord.

His parody on Ezra Pound is of such quality that we have regret because it did not appear in "Poetry: A Magazine of Verse." Judging by letters appearing therein from time to time, Poetry has an extensive circulation among people who think Mr. Pound should be honored above all living poets. That is no exaggeration. It would be a painful blessing for them to see that if one is willing consciously to abjure sense, Mr. Pound's choicest verse may easily be exceeded. Mr. Pound has never written anything more characteristic than Mr. Untermeyer's parody; which, presented seriously, wouldn't be a parody at all, nor yet an imitation, but would class the author as belonging to the futurist "school." To imitate is very prejudicial to the reputation, but to belong to a "school"—ah, that is like really getting into society.

This is taken from the verse in imitation of Mr. Pound:

"The iron menace of the pillar-box is threatening the virginity of night.
Oh, Lars Porsena, let us be naked and impudent, as the first day of April, or Bernard Shaw without a toga.
Let us run up behind people and pinch them in their too-fleshy ankles, in the green twilight;
Male and female alike (I hear they read
you, Walt Whitman)—
Eheu, eheu fugaces—sic semper—sic transit—et cetera . . .
Loosen thy chrome girdle;
Unveil the crux ansata—Oh, Ardanari-Iswari."

Were not Mr. Untermeyer's name signed to it, we would crowd into the first rank of those willing to say it was the best thing Ezra Pound ever wrote.

Another instance of doing better than the parodied poet is in the "psycho-analytic expression" of "Sex and Stars" in imitation of James Oppenheim, that "brilliant" young genius of much verbal fury who conveys more or less deliberately a "powerful" sense of "intense" energy.

It is only by twisting the closing line into absurdity that verse in the style of Kipling is changed from a presentable contribution to the Kipling "school" into parody; while the Vachel Lindsay verse is wholly worthy of that noisy fellow. In some instances Mr. Untermeyer has not been felicitous chiefly because he has not been willing to caricature well as many instances show us he can; but the Sara Teasdale "lyric," the "epical" tone of Stephen Phillips, the love-sickness of John Hall Wheelock are among the perfect gems of parody.

"Attempted affinities," such as imaginary collaborations of Heinrich Heine and Clinton Scollard, Andrew Lang and Oscar Wilde, and "Pierian Handsprings" are, for the most part, less distinctive. But "—— and Other Poets" is a book for those with a watchful eye over the antics of contemporaries, being a unique critical study rather than mere parodies.

"The First Hundred Thousand," and Others.

One may get closer to the war, the men who are in it, their routine, moods and perils, though their heroism is gracefully and modestly left largely to the imagination, in "The First Hundred Thousand" (Houghton Miffin Company,) by Capt. Ian Hay Beith of the Highlanders than in any other book we have seen.

G. Valentine Williams in "With Our Army in Flanders" (Longmans, Green & Co.) gives infinitely more detail, and gives it admirably, describing trench life and life behind the lines intimately. Mr. Williams seems to have been actuated by a desire to tell everything possible from the menu to the manner of charging, and has been very successful, though one must have a devouring thirst for details not to grow a little bored by this well-nigh interminable description, even graphic as it is.

"The Way They Have in the Army" by Thomas O'Toole (John Lane Company) is a general survey of army life, regulations, how recruits are drilled, bits of information about the various famed and distinctively gallant regiments, regimental colors, the various ranks and military etiquette. Its scope is limited, yet it is fully as large as Mr. O'Toole intended it to be.

But "The First Hundred Thousand" gets to the heart of the soldier; it shows not only what he does but how he does it and what he feels. As a study in war moods it would not be preposterous to call this chronicle, written by one whose reputation as an author has for some years been wide ("Ian Hay") a classic.

It begins with the organization of Kitchener's first hundred thousand, and by a sequence of incidents in narrative form, shows the raw rookies (the rookiest imaginable) drilling and grousing, getting whipped into shape, learning pride of service and the soldier's duties. At length they go to the front, and we note almost every stage of their progress, and how they adapt themselves to the new and trying conditions. They enter the trenches, they dig trenches, they shoot and charge, build parapets at night, and swear at the German bomb guns that with methodical regularity destroy the parapets in the morning.

The attitude toward the enemy as Capt. Beith shows it convincingly reveals how little correspondents, Kiplings, little and large, have understood the British soldier. He dams his enemy like a sportsman—no blind hate, no furious zeal such as an author pent up in a comfortable study may brew over his imagination and attribute to the soldier's characteristic attitude, nothing of that kind; but the solid, stolid, grimly humorous, whimsical grumbling and not unfatalistic attitude of men who have settled down to a long, hard, dangerous job,—that is the way of the Highlanders.

The characters become, before the book is ended, well known as those in a good novel; and while Capt. Beith says they are fictional, he means that the names he has given them are. They are real fellows; they would be real if we didn't know there was a big war going on "oot there."

In the whole of the book there is scarcely a phrase of bitterness; the enemy is spoken of and referred to as becomes gallant soldiers who have met an enemy that is not easily crushed; and with patience and irony, the real irony of tolerant fortitude, Capt. Beith refers to the union leaders of Britain who held back munitions until they could get their "price" while the men in the trenches perished because the big guns behind them were without shells.

"The First Hundred Thousand" is more than merely a war book, or a good war book. It is one of those books that are meant when we speak of a "human document."

"The Oakleyites."

E. F. Benson in "The Oakleyites (George H. Doran) has written what may well be called an idyllic tragedy. It is not a "tearful" book, for much of it is amusing, and the setting of the story is not at all unadapted for comedy. The little English village of Oakley-on-Sea is filled with quaint middle-class folk who take themselves, their Christian Science, their vegetarianism, their art, with smileless devotion; and before the disclosures of Mr. Benson's delicate style they appear peculiarly attractive and entertaining.

Among them, and one of the most prominent, is Dorothy Jackson, a woman of loveliness to whom love has never come, though at 35 she remains much the dreamer. Dorothy is very precise, but wholehearted, and would readily believe that "a boy who had once run after Mrs. Andrews with a sixpence she had dropped in the High street, in order to return it to her, was the embodiment of all manly virtues," but that a tradesman who had offered a commission to her housekeeper for her custom was likely enough to be "a thief, murderer and wife-beater."

The Oakleyites awaken one day to discover that a new event has taken place: A young and prominent author, a writer of "popular" novels about the "lurid milieu of what is called smart society," and his mother have taken a house in their midst. This is attended by much agitation among the Oakleyites, who are some time in discovering that the author is accompanied by his mother and not his wife.

Gradually the amusing tone of the novel is suppressed, and Romance at last touches the lonely Dorothy—but the touch is light. That the ending is not as one's sentiments might wish is entirely overshadowed by the grace and emphasis with which Mr. Benson sustains and concludes his story. But the author of "Dodo," and a member of the literary family which includes A. C. Benson and others whose writings are characterized by delicacy of style and thought, may be relied upon to have the surety of touch which gives a satisfying emphasis to the variations of his theme; and in "The Oakleyites" there are many moods.

Stimulus for Women.

THE COMPLETE CLUB BOOK FOR WOMEN. By Caroline French Benton. The Page Company.

Country life, now receiving widespread attention from the various women's clubs throughout the country, comes in for elaborate consideration in "The Complete Club Book for Women" written by Caroline French Benton and recently issued as a companion volume to "Women's Club Work and Programmes."

Under the work of the rural club, the author points out that if any group of women need intellectual stimulus, it is the women on farms and ranches and in little villages, whose lives are monotonous, who have but few lectures or concerts to attend and few magazines or new books to read.

This is in direct line with what our State president of the California Federation of Women's Clubs gives out in her last message to the 33,000 and more federated clubwomen, in pointing out that the last census returns show a decrease in rural population. "The farm people not only need financial concessions, but need a fuller life, especially for the young. These country life problems should through careful study result in making rural life more desirable through better schools, better roads, county libraries, neighborhood clubs and rural credits."

In the mode of elections, however, the author is a bit antediluvian in her methods when she suggests the Nominating Committee—a method decidedly passe among modern club women, who prefer the more democratic preferential ballot.

Different phases of study are dealt with chapter by chapter (twenty-five in number,) and should prove invaluable to the smaller clubs in suggesting materials for programmes and reference reading, whether for self-development or a desire to be of civic use in the community.—[D. J.

"Universal Plot Catalog."

Henry Albert Phillips essays the role of rescuer for brain-fagged folk who object to doing menial labor except with a pen. His "Universal Plot Catalog" is defined by himself as "an examination of the elements of plot material and construction, combined with a complete index and progressive category in which the scource, life and end of all dramatic conflict and plot matter are classified, making the work a practical treatise for all writers of fiction and drama, prose and verse, also editors, orators, teachers, librarians, newspaper men, statisticians and preachers," being published by The Stanhope-Dodge Company, Larchmont, N. Y.

Mr. Phillips's intentions have been the worthiest possible; but his exuberance seems to have been heightened by the fact that the "Plot Catalog" is supposed to be supplemented by a filing case which will be sent to anyone upon request accompanied by $5. Of course, he suggests that anyone may make a similar filing case of his own, but his is especially adapted to the uses of the "Catalog."

The "Catalog" itself is an ingenuous arrangement of several hundred titles—"Russian"—"Rustler"—"Law Suit" etc—and the enterprising persons are supposed themselves to fill up these references with clippings from papers and magazines. At such times as they are in need of a plot they may rummage through their collection and become infected with plot germs, which, he assures us, will rapidly develop, and with proper culture, may be turned into a story that will sell. He shows how it is done, presents the story, and names the magazine to which it was sold. Anyone who can longer resist the inducement after perusing this feat must be very indurated to evidence, indeed.

We haven't the slightest doubt in the world but that some sort of an arrangement as this would be valuable to the dashing authors who toss off stories with no more brain work or study than the master plumber repairs leaky drains. It is only the author who hurries to put out his weekly supply, even as a baker his doughnuts, that is harassed by a lack of plots. And while scrap-books and collected information is always of possible value, it is presumptuous in the extreme to call this prospectus for a filing case a "universal plot catalog."

WHAT CITIES ARE DOING.

AMERICAN MUNICIPAL PROGRESS. By Charles Zueblin. The Macmillan Company, New York.

A NEW and revised edition of Mr. Zueblin's "American Municipal Progress" brings this comparative study of what the cities are doing from 1902 to 1916, and it is remarkably comprehensive for a book of some 500 pages, covering every distinctive feature of development in beautifying grounds, education, playgrounds, health and other sociological and civic improvements.

Los Angeles goes on record as the only city of 100,000 inhabitants that has doubled in size in ten years; is one of the forty cities to establish outdoor markets; one of the few to have developed specialized lines of social work in connection with juvenile courts; is among those that have done the most in regular organized school and home garden work; provides an exceptionally fine vocational curriculum; is one of the few with a municipal reference library; one of seventy-one having paid workers to carry on a social center, and is altogether—by Mr. Zueblin's reckoning—a pretty fine place in which to live.

The value of the book is its wealth of information. It is not, as are most books of like character, a study of one or two cities as compared to others; it is an impartial study of all cities that have done distinctive work along artistic, social, hygienic, commercial and legislative lines. Its scope extends from warfare on mosquitoes in New Jersey to boulevards in California; goes so far as to sketch the history of the fight some cities have had to make to get improvements, and particularly municipal ownership of certain industries.

G. A. Birmingham (Canon Hannay,) the genial author of "Spanish Gold" and "Gossamer," just published, has joined the English army as chaplain. He is now located at a big camp near Havre, France. Canon Hannay's elder son is soldiering in France. He is a member of the Irish Guards.

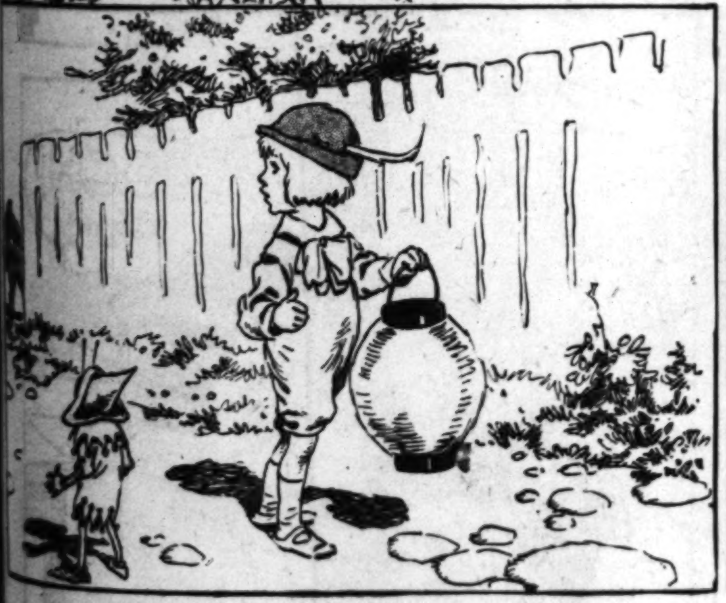
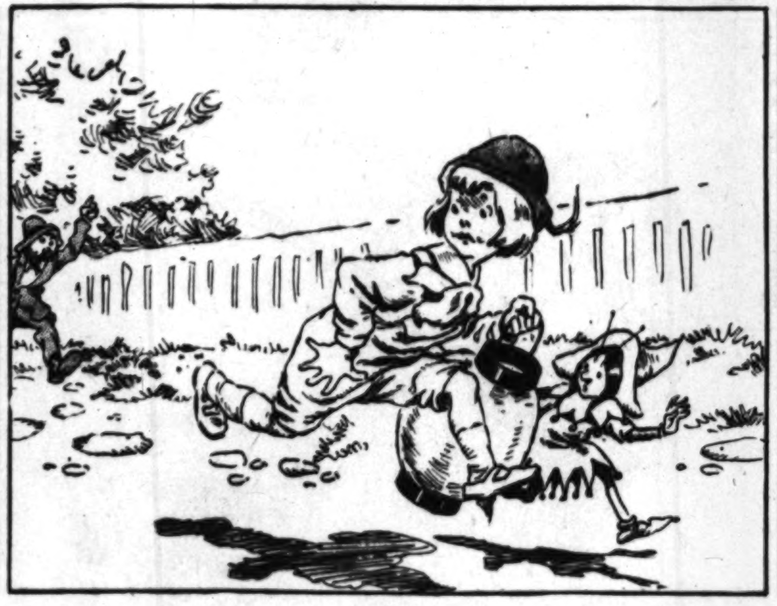
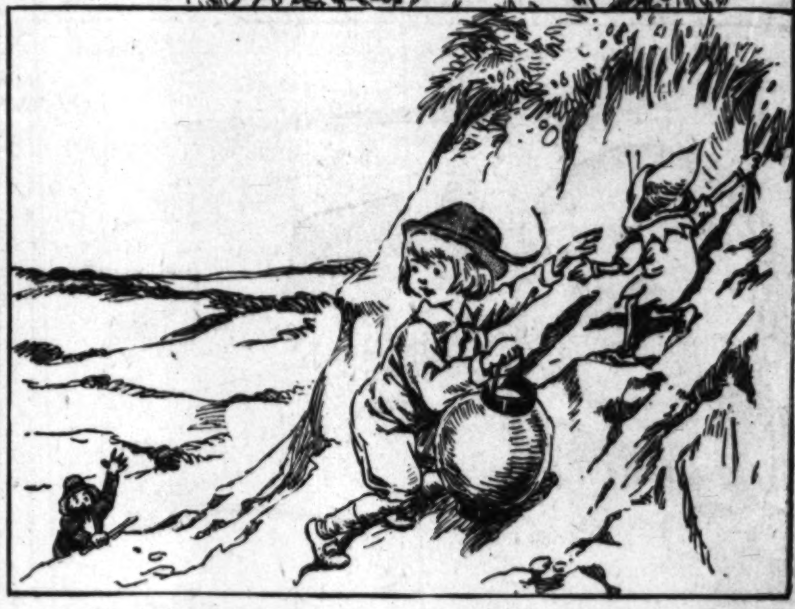
MR. TWEE DEEDLE.



1.—Mr. Twee Deedle and Dickie were walking down a country road one day when they noticed that they were being followed by a rough looking man. "What can he want with us?" Dickie asked.



2.—They quickened their pace and the man also walked faster. Then they began to run and the man ran after them shouting for them to stop.



3.—They finally came to a steep hill. Up this they scrambled as fast as they could. The man continued to shout in hoarse tones begging them to stop. "Perhaps he is a kidnapper," thought Dickie as he climbed faster.

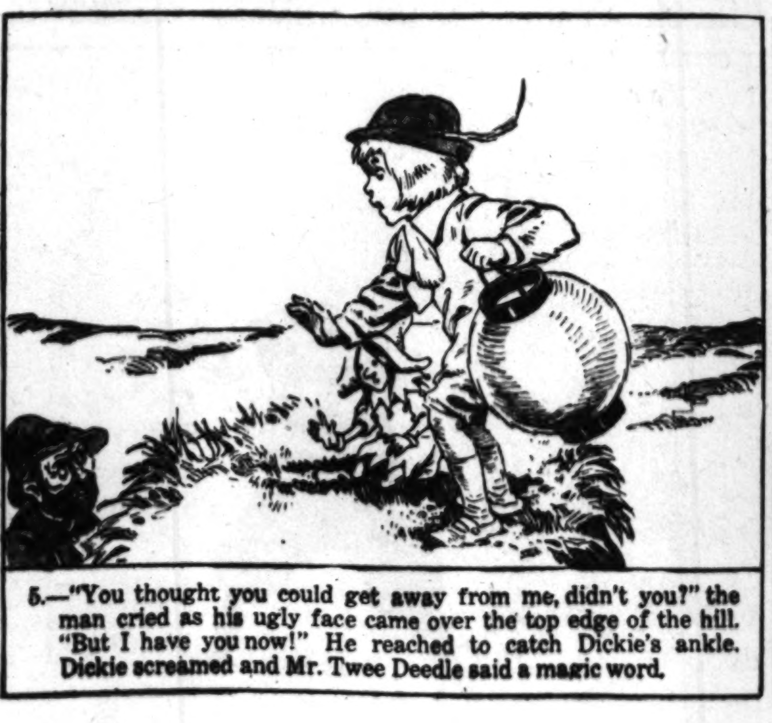
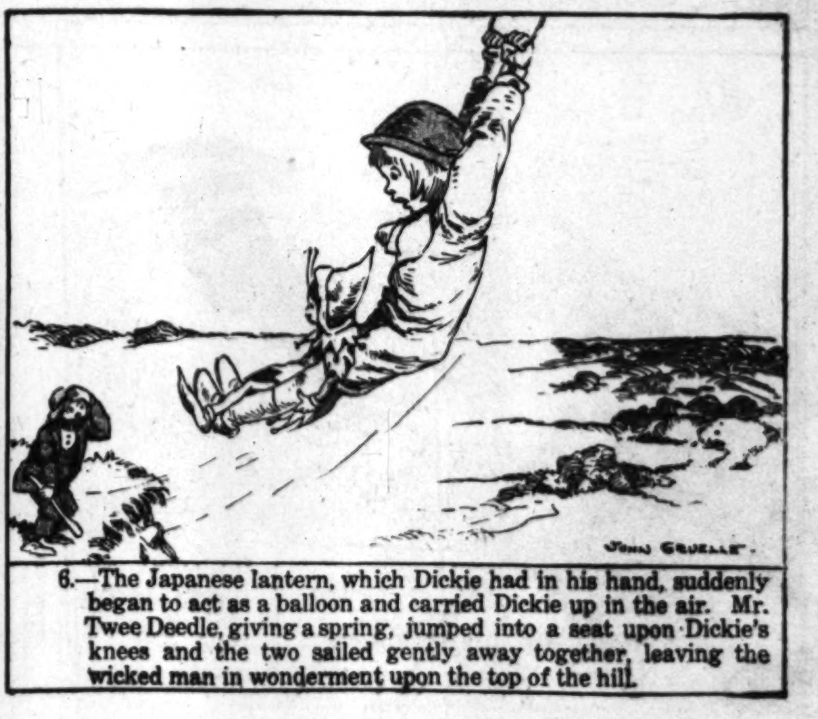
4.—But what was our friends' consternation when they reached the crest of the hill to find that there was a steep bank upon the other side which they could not climb down. "What will we do?" asked Dickie.



5.—"You thought you could get away from me, didn't you?" the man cried as his ugly face came over the top edge of the hill. "But I have you now!" He reached to catch Dickie's ankle. Dickie screamed and Mr. Twee Deedle said a magic word.



JOHN GRUELLE.

6.—The Japanese lantern, which Dickie had in his hand, suddenly began to act as a balloon and carried Dickie up in the air. Mr. Twee Deedle, giving a spring, jumped into a seat upon Dickie's knees and the two sailed gently away together, leaving the wicked man in wonderment upon the top of the hill.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

THE WORK OF THE HOUSE.

A TIME honored distich containing more truth than is often found in such rhymes, and the reason for its veracity lies in the fact that the work of the house—the woman's part—is made up largely of unending, because repeated, details. Sometimes I wonder if we have a clear perception of how many little things must be done to make a house comfortable and attractive. The big pieces of labor are not so trying, after all, as the constant recurrence of trifles.

A certain amount of triumph fills your soul when you have given a room what a maid I once had used to call "a good turning out." By this she meant a thorough cleaning of floors, walls, and windows, the removal of dust from the furniture and the pictures, and the restoration of everything in the chamber to shining cleanliness.

After the accomplishment of such a task you can view the result of your toil with self-approval and comfort. A different sensation possesses your soul when you have concluded the tidying up process which has kept you busy with odds and ends and shows no impressive improvement when you have finished.

"It's like washing your face," a housekeeper sighed to me after an hour or two of such work. "You're blamed if it's dirty and no one praises you when it's clean."

Like this, also, the comfort and charm of the house depend upon attention to just these minute items. Stop and think for a moment how much of your satisfaction and peace of mind in your home is made or marred by trifles.

Consider your table, for instance. The linen and other furnishings may be of the best quality, the food offered unexceptionable, but suppose the condition of some of the articles is not up to the mark. The tablecloth may be spotted or mussed—I confess that tumbled table linen takes away my own appetite—the centerpiece may have torn lace on it; there may be breaks in the doilies, or the silver may be dull and show in every piece the need of polishing, or the china may be chipped or cracked. Don't you know how the whole effect of the table is impaired by these defects, any one of which taken alone is so small as to seem almost beneath consideration?

Bestow the same sort of survey on the other rooms of your house. No matter how well your living room may be furnished, it has a slipshod air imparted to it if a curtain pin has been permitted to slip from the hook, so that the drapery hangs irregularly. The handsomest fittings do not show to advantage if your curtains or windows are not clean. The streak of dust on the piano or bookshelves which has escaped the ministrations of the cleaning cloth, the kicked-up rug, the books which have been put away upside down—my own pet abhorrence!—or in untidy order, the scraps of paper that lie on the floor beside the waste basket instead of in it, where they ought to be—all these details, not one important in itself, serve to give an impression of untidy living that no richness of plenishing can offset.

Look about your bedroom. The pieces of clothing which have been left out to be mended, the slippers or shoes which have been kicked off carelessly, the dress thrown over the back of a chair, the toilet furnishings that are scattered on your dresser instead of arranged in orderly fashion detract from the effect of neatness which every right minded woman longs to see about her.

As my friend said, it is the untidiness that counts. When everything is as it should be you may not notice the result; it is only when articles are out of place that the appearance of the room forces itself upon your observation.

When you meditate upon the minute character of the disturbance you do not understand quite why it should require so much time to repair the disarray. But it does and it is tiring and nerve racking work like so many of the other necessary items of housekeeping. Yet it must be done if the home is to be what a home should be.

As a matter of course there is much of the disorder for which the housekeeper herself is not responsible and which seems to lie outside the field of her regular employment. For instance, she takes it for granted that she should make up the beds which have been occupied by others than herself, that she should prepare food, set the table, and wash the dishes for more than her own use. All this seems part of her ordinary routine of life. But when she goes about the house picking up the articles that others have thrown down, repairing the results of their carelessness, expending strength and time not in rendering her home more beautiful but in merely endeavoring to make it livable and decent she can hardly be blamed for an occasional complaint.

I have said before this that a man can walk through a room and leave work that will keep a woman busy for half an hour. It may be the paper tossed on the chair or the floor or anywhere else that it does not belong; it may be the ashes from his cigar or his pipe flicked on the carpet, his hat or his gloves dropped on the table, this or that piece of furniture pushed out of place, but in some form the disorder is likely to be displayed.

Many of such acts the wife accepts and does not consider herself at all ill treated when she has to replace the articles the man of the house has disturbed. That is part of her job, she would tell you, if you attempted to sympathize with her. But even to her loving heart it does not seem quite fair that she should have to pick up after her children as well as her husband. Yet the picking up must be done if the house is to look as it should.

The old rule for keeping clean the streets of Jerusalem—that every man should sweep in front of his own door—is excellent to enforce in the family. No hardship is imposed upon the child when he is required to put away the articles he has taken out, to hang up his hat and coat when he comes in, and to recollect that there is another place for his overshoes besides the middle of the hall or parlor floor. On the contrary, it is only fair and wise that he should learn from the beginning to have a sense of responsibility for his own property and know that he cannot count upon some one to walk about after him and gather what he has dropped.

A mother of children taught me that lesson some time ago by her dealings with her small boys. When the cry arose from one of them, "Where is my hat?" or "What has become of my rubbers?" or bat or ball, as the case might be, the answer would come, calm and unruffled, "It is just where you left it, my son."

Such training as that is bound to have its effect, sooner or later. I do not mean that the children turned out models of tidiness and order, but they did come to understand, after a while, that if they wished to find their possessions when these were needed a certain degree of care was demanded of them. There was a place for everything, and if it was likely to be wanted in a hurry the act of prudence was to put it where it belonged when it was not in service.

The part played by small things is not sufficiently recognized, to my way of thinking. I have touched upon the discomfort wrought by disorder or uncleanliness in material trifles, but there is even more caused by the neglect of intangible items.

For example, some may count it a little matter when a member of the family comes down to breakfast accompanied by what is slangily known to the younger generation as a "grouch," but which would have been defined in an earlier day as a fit of the sulks. Possibly there are households in which the gloom of one of the circle does not affect the spirits of the others, but I doubt it. For my own part I have seen the darkened face of a single person cast a shade over the whole tableful. And it is even worse when the irritation or depression finds vent in the sharp retort or the critical and unkind remark.

I have spoken of this sort of thing as a trifle, but to my mind it is far more important than more apparently weighty affairs. Not often are we called upon to display heroism or large quantities of mind and heart, any more than the housekeeper feels it incumbent upon her to do a big housecleaning every few days. But the little things are always there, new every morning and fresh every evening, and the sum of them amounts to more in the long run than the one great task which looms up above the others.

To take a homely illustration, the most elegant and elaborate costume sinks into comparative insignificance if the wearer is tortured by a nail in the shoe or a pin in the neck. The whole attention is drawn from the perfection of the dress, the satisfactoriness of the appearance, to that one teasing annoyance, not dignified enough to be termed a pain, but which obliterates far more worthy and weighty thoughts. I have had a delightful concert spoiled for me because my neighbor behind me insisted upon beating time with his foot against the back of my seat, and the eloquence of a great lecturer rendered as naught because of an unshaded electric light which dazzled and pained my eyes.

If we take the measure of material things as a sort of standard by which to consider the impalpable items, we all have some idea of the part small courtesies and considerations play in determining our happiness or unhappiness. The fly speck on the mirror, the dab of dust on a polished surface, the grease spot on the rug or table cover render full enjoyment impossible to the housekeeper who wishes her home to appear at its best. In like manner, the unkind word, the harsh criticism, the undeserved rebuke, the clouded face, the grudging approval have their share in impairing the happiness of the home as much as the lack of consideration and the omission of the little courtesies which all go to make up that great and indefinable quality we term good breeding.

"Politeness is to do or say the kindest thing in the kindest way," and it has as great a portion in keeping the home content as has scrupulous tidiness in making it comfortable.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

"FOR some time after I wrote to your Corner I had no answer. Now I write to tell you that I am unspeakably grateful that through your kindness in publishing my letter a lovely supply of reading matter has poured in upon me from about a dozen unknown kind friends. It brightened my lonely Christmas, with its many limitations, more than I can express to you. I only wish I had the pen of a ready writer to condense and tell better the comfort and pleasure you have given me and the great thankfulness and gratitude I feel to you and your noble band of willing helpers. L. C. G."

This correspondent writes from a hospital. I am glad that she has learned before this that her failure to hear from us was due to no lack of interest on our part, but to the pressure of letters which had to take their turn before hers could appear. It is good to know of the pleasure the "willing helpers" have brought into her life.

Wants Some Pictures.

"Can you give me the address of Mrs. A. L. C.? I see she has paintings to give away and I would so much love to get some from her. If you cannot furnish me with the address, will you please keep mine and when you hear of some one with paintings to give away let me know, so that I can write to her? MRS. F. F."

I am sorry to say that the paintings asked for have been given away, but I am glad to comply with the request of Mrs. F. F. and hold her address in the hope that some one else may have such pictures as she desires and be willing to bestow them on her.

Quotation from Jean Ingelow.

"I notice an inquiry in your department regarding the quotation from Jean Ingelow, closing with the line: 'Joy is the grace we say to God.' I take pleasure in sending the inclosed, which is the best I can do from memory:

So take Joy home,
And in thy great heart make a place for her,
And give her time to grow and cherish her;
Then will she come and oft will sing to thee
When thou art working in the furrows—
Aye, when thou art weeding at the sacred hour of dawn.
It is a comely fashion to be glad;
Joy is the grace we say to God.

"R. H. D."

This quotation is so brief, as well as so beautiful, that it gives me pleasure to put it here to bring happiness to others besides the friend who inquired for it. The quotation has been sent by other Cornerites and I thank them all.

Little Girl Wants Quilt Pieces.

"I am a little girl 12 years old. My own papa is in heaven and I have a stepfather and two sisters. We live in the country and are not very well off. My sister and I would like to have the pieces to make a quilt that Mrs. J. D. offers. My grandma and my aunt would like to get a letter from Mrs. R. D. K. They like to make quilts, too. If you will write to me I will give you their address. My mama has a good banjo that she would like to trade for a guitar, as she can play that and cannot play the banjo. H. M."

I am sorry that the quilt pieces offered by the friends referred to have been given away. Has any one else quilt pieces to send to this child and to her grandmother, and is there some one who desires to make the exchange of a guitar for a banjo? I will send the address on application accompanied by a stamp.

Portieres of Beads.

"I see the request for instruction for wall paper beads. I have made them and used them in assorted colors, cutting a long triangular strip of paper, rolling this into the shape of a long bead on a hat pin, then gluing the edges together. When the required amount is on hand to make the portiere, varnish the beads. Use heavy linen thread in stringing the beads, putting first a wall paper bead and then one of glass until you have the desired length. Make a small tassel on the end of each string. The strings of beads are made in varying lengths, so that they may look like those sold in the shops. If E. H. C. will pay postage on them I will gladly send her a box of them, enough for one curtain, all rolled and ready to varnish. MRS. G. W. M."

Other sets of instructions for making these beads have been received and some of them already have been printed. I wish much that E. H. C. had sent her address in order that she might take advantage of this friendly offer. As it is, all I can do is to keep the address of Mrs. G. W. M. and hope that E. H. C. may see this letter and write to be put into communication with Mrs. G. W. M., inclosing stamp for reply.

Help for an Invalid.

"If there is any dear shut-in with whom I could correspond or to whom I could send reading matter I would be so thankful and glad to give such help. A sure exterminator of bedbugs is gasoline. I was unfortunate enough to get them into my new home several years ago and I was so horrified that I was almost tempted to set fire to the house. After trying everything I had ever heard of I learned of this remedy from a woman whose husband made it his business to go from hotel to hotel and boarding house with this cure. On a bright day in the morning fill with gasoline a can with a crook in the spout and go into each crevice in the beds and mop boards and everywhere else where the creatures might lodge. After everything has been soaked with the gasoline put down the windows, close the doors leading out of the bedroom, and leave everything shut up for a couple of hours. Then throw open the windows and air the room thoroughly before making the bed. You may have to repeat the process, but this is a sure exterminator. Be careful always about fire when using gasoline.

"Here is a recipe for delicious cream cookies: One cup of butter, one and a half cups of white sugar, half teaspoon of salt, three eggs. Whip all together thoroughly. Add to one cup of sour cream a level teaspoon of saleratus dissolved in a little hot water. Stir this into the other ingredients, add flour enough for a stiff batter, drop from a tablespoon into a greased pan about two inches apart, and bake in a quick oven. They will touch each other in making, but cut them apart and lift them out carefully. These are nice. If you wish them more fanciful you may put frosting on them and stick a raisin or nut meat on the top of each. MRS. H. L. M."

Without doubt the shut-in will soon be heard from and I will keep the address of this correspondent to send in response to inquiry accompanied by a stamp. We are glad to get the suggestion for the exterminator as well as the recipe for the cookies.

Taking Millinery Lessons.

"Has any one in the Corner some scraps of colored silk or soft velvet that I can have? I am taking millinery lessons at high school and need pieces to make flowers. Scraps too small for piecing will answer perfectly. We only came here in July and so have not collected any pieces yet. I would be glad to pay postage.

"Would you like our recipe for tamale loaf? It tastes like the commercial tamales and you have the satisfaction of knowing it is clean. Brown a pound and a half of round steak in bacon fat, cover with water, and cook until tender, seasoning with onion, salt, and pepper. Stir one cup of cornmeal into the liquor and cook four or five hours in the double boiler or the fireless cooker. Grind the meat fine, add one tablespoon of chili powder, salt, and pepper, a little mixed spice and celery salt, one can of pimentos, one can of tomatoes, and one small can of olives. Butter a bakedish and put half the cornmeal in the bottom, turn in the meat, add a chopped hard boiled egg and the rest of the cornmeal. Dot with butter and bake slowly about an hour, until well browned. Chicken may be used instead of the beef, and red pepper in place of the chili powder. This quantity makes a large loaf and is even better the second day than the first. M. W. M."

I am sure some of our readers will be glad to send to this girl the scraps of silk and velvet that are too small for patching and will be of service to her, in return for the excellent recipe she has given. I hold her address.

Long Walk with a Baby.

"I wonder if the Corner could help me out a little. Having had a good deal of misfortune during the last year I am absolutely unable to pay for a baby carriage. My baby is 5 weeks old and quite heavy. As I cannot afford to pay the regular prices for provisions in stores in our neighborhood I visit shops half a mile away, where they have frequent sales. This is difficult for me to do when I have to carry the baby, especially as I have gained a good deal of weight since the baby came and have little strength. I will gladly pay transportation on the carriage. Perhaps the following information would be of use to some of the housekeepers. When potatoes are frozen or not of the best variety, if put into a pot with a sieve bottom and this set in a vessel half full of water with a tight cover, the potatoes will turn out nice and white and mealy. Crust of bread is improved by wrapping the loaf in a warm cloth immediately upon taking it out of the oven. Gasoline will polish nickel on stoves easily. Kerosine added to stove polish will put a brighter polish on the stove. Could you suggest any occupation for me to follow at home that would pay me well? MRS. H. F. D."

I hope that some one may be found with an unneeded baby carriage this young mother may have. We are grateful for the household hint, but I feel I must speak a word of caution as to the care which should be observed in using gasoline on nickel trimmings to a stove or kerosene in the polish. Both are highly inflammable and cannot be handled recklessly or there may be a terrible casualty. Can some one suggest paying employment at home to this Cornerite?

Would Exchange Letters.

"I am a middle aged woman (European) of good education and came to this country a few years ago. As I live in a small town I feel lonely and homesick. Do you think there may be some person who feels somewhat as I do, and would exchange letters with me? I am particularly interested in literature and understand several languages. If we were of different nationalities we might mutually increase our interests in this field. If I can do anything in return for the Corner I shall be glad to do so. MRS. E. B."

Here is an attractive opportunity for a delightful and helpful correspondence. Who will take advantage of it and write for Mrs. E. B.'s address? Please inclose stamp for reply.

Making a Silk Quilt.

"Will some of the members of the Helping Hand kindly pass on to me old numbers of fancy work magazines? Also I would appreciate silk scraps and make what return I could for them. I am a partial shut-in, and to pass part of the time and to start a new interest I want to make a silk patchwork quilt for my couch, which is my best companion at times. I will repay all postage, and will be very glad of the new acquaintances. My life is so full of sunshine that I have plenty to spare. MRS. EAR."

I am sure there are some fancy work magazines that can be sent to this correspondent, and the silk scraps will also be forthcoming, I am positive. When a shut-in writes that she has sunshine and to spare in her life she is a correspondent worth having and one who will give as much as she gets, or more. I wish to thank her personally for her kind words to me and her good wishes.

Much to Be Thankful For.

"My Dear 'Unhappy': You little realize how happy you ought to be. Married to the best man in the world, and with two lovely children, and still you are unhappy. Think for a moment what it would be to part with them all and to be left alone. Would those friends who have more money take you into their homes and lives? If they did, would it fill the place of those loved ones? Even if you [illegible] a true wife and mother nothing on earth could take their place. My own life has had many sad experiences. I have lost my dear parents, three lovely babies who seemed a gift from heaven to my husband and me, and then he followed them and I was left alone in the world, except for one dear daughter. If I had given up then and thought of self, how could I have brought up my one daughter to take her place in this busy world? She has been to be my solid comfort—the one thing in my life that has not failed me. Try to be contented with the blessings you have, and do not make yourself wretched by envying the possessions of others. Such content is the only way to happiness. All the wealth of the world would not compensate me for the loss of my daughter, and many would give all they have for one of your children. So cheer up! Why groan for what you do not get? Look around you and do what you can for others less fortunate. The world is full of them! A MOTHER."

A good deal has already been said to "Unhappy," but I could not resist printing a portion of the letter of this sensible and practical correspondent. I hope her words and those of the others who have written on this subject may be of good help to "Unhappy" and others like her.

Made Her Own Kitchen Cabinet.

"I live on a farm with few neighbors and I would love to write to some one who would care to write to or to hear from me. I have made several pieces of furniture, the much needed kitchen cabinet among them. Here is the way to do it: Put in a large dry goods box shelves and drawers, if you wish the latter, made of smaller boxes, and use orange crates for the end cupboards. Put one on top of each end of the box and lay on top of them a long board taken from the front of the big box. This will form a top to the cabinet. You can either paper it with wall paper to match your kitchen or, better still, cover it with white oilcloth, which is easily kept clean. When done, curtain it neatly and it looks nice. If I could get a few chickens or hens I would return them at double value a year from now. MRS. N. F. G."

I wish I could give here the little drawing sent of the kitchen cabinet, but any one who has ever seen a picture of one of the conveniences ought to be able to construct one from the directions given and her own common sense. I am not certain that any one can send the chickens desired, but there is sure to be some one who would like to correspond with this practical Cornerite.

Blessing to Many.

"I am writing for one of the [illegible] given in the Corner. We who have [illegible] blessing can scarcely realize what it means to be shut in on a [illegible] have seen in my travels. The Corner [illegible] a blessing to many in all walks of life, and I congratulate the helpers on bringing a bit of sunshine into those [illegible] lack it. [illegible]"

The address asked has been given. Thanks for the kind words and [illegible] of the Corner. The helpers deserve all the praise spoken of them.

Glad to Contribute a Mite.

"A few weeks ago a Cornerite asked for postage stamps. I have a few from foreign countries that I will be pleased to send her. I love to read what you and the Cornerites have to say, and I [illegible] that a mighty blessing [illegible] from this department. [illegible] and then to contribute a mite. E. H."

The lack of the signature of the correspondent who asked for stamps made it impossible to [illegible] happy to receive [illegible] of the Corner, and [illegible] picture inclosed [illegible] agreeable to get [illegible] ance of any of my [illegible] ued friends.

FOR THE INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

BY ADELAIDE BYRD

A DAINTILY APPLIED APRON DESIGN

DESIGNED BY ANNA J. LOOS

THIS is leap year, girls, so you can't afford to miss any little opportunity that may assist you in winning the one whom you love. No matter how much a man may talk about being in favor of women taking their places in the business field, you will find that deep down in his heart he thinks that a woman shows to best advantage when placed amid domestic surroundings. Almost every man likes to see a woman wearing a dainty apron. Therefore, my advice to you is to transfer the dainty design offered to you today to the material you like best. This advice applies to wives as well as sweethearts—it's every woman's duty, you know, to look as attractive after marriage as she did before!

Only one-half of the design is shown. In order to get the complete pattern, turn over the section given.

If you are undecided as to the material to use, a few suggestions may help you. Batiste, barred muslin, handkerchief linen and organdie are suitable as a background for the design. Perhaps you are picturing these fabrics in their whiteness, but let me tell you that a delicate shade of blue will not go amiss, especially if you embroider the design in white with a touch of black here and there. Of course, this is merely a hint and can be accepted or not, just as you like.

In embroidering the flowers and leaves use the satin stitch. Pad each leaf and petal with a few stitches before applying the satin stitch. For the latter you will need rather fine thread and a correspondingly fine needle. The size of the petal and leaf determines this.

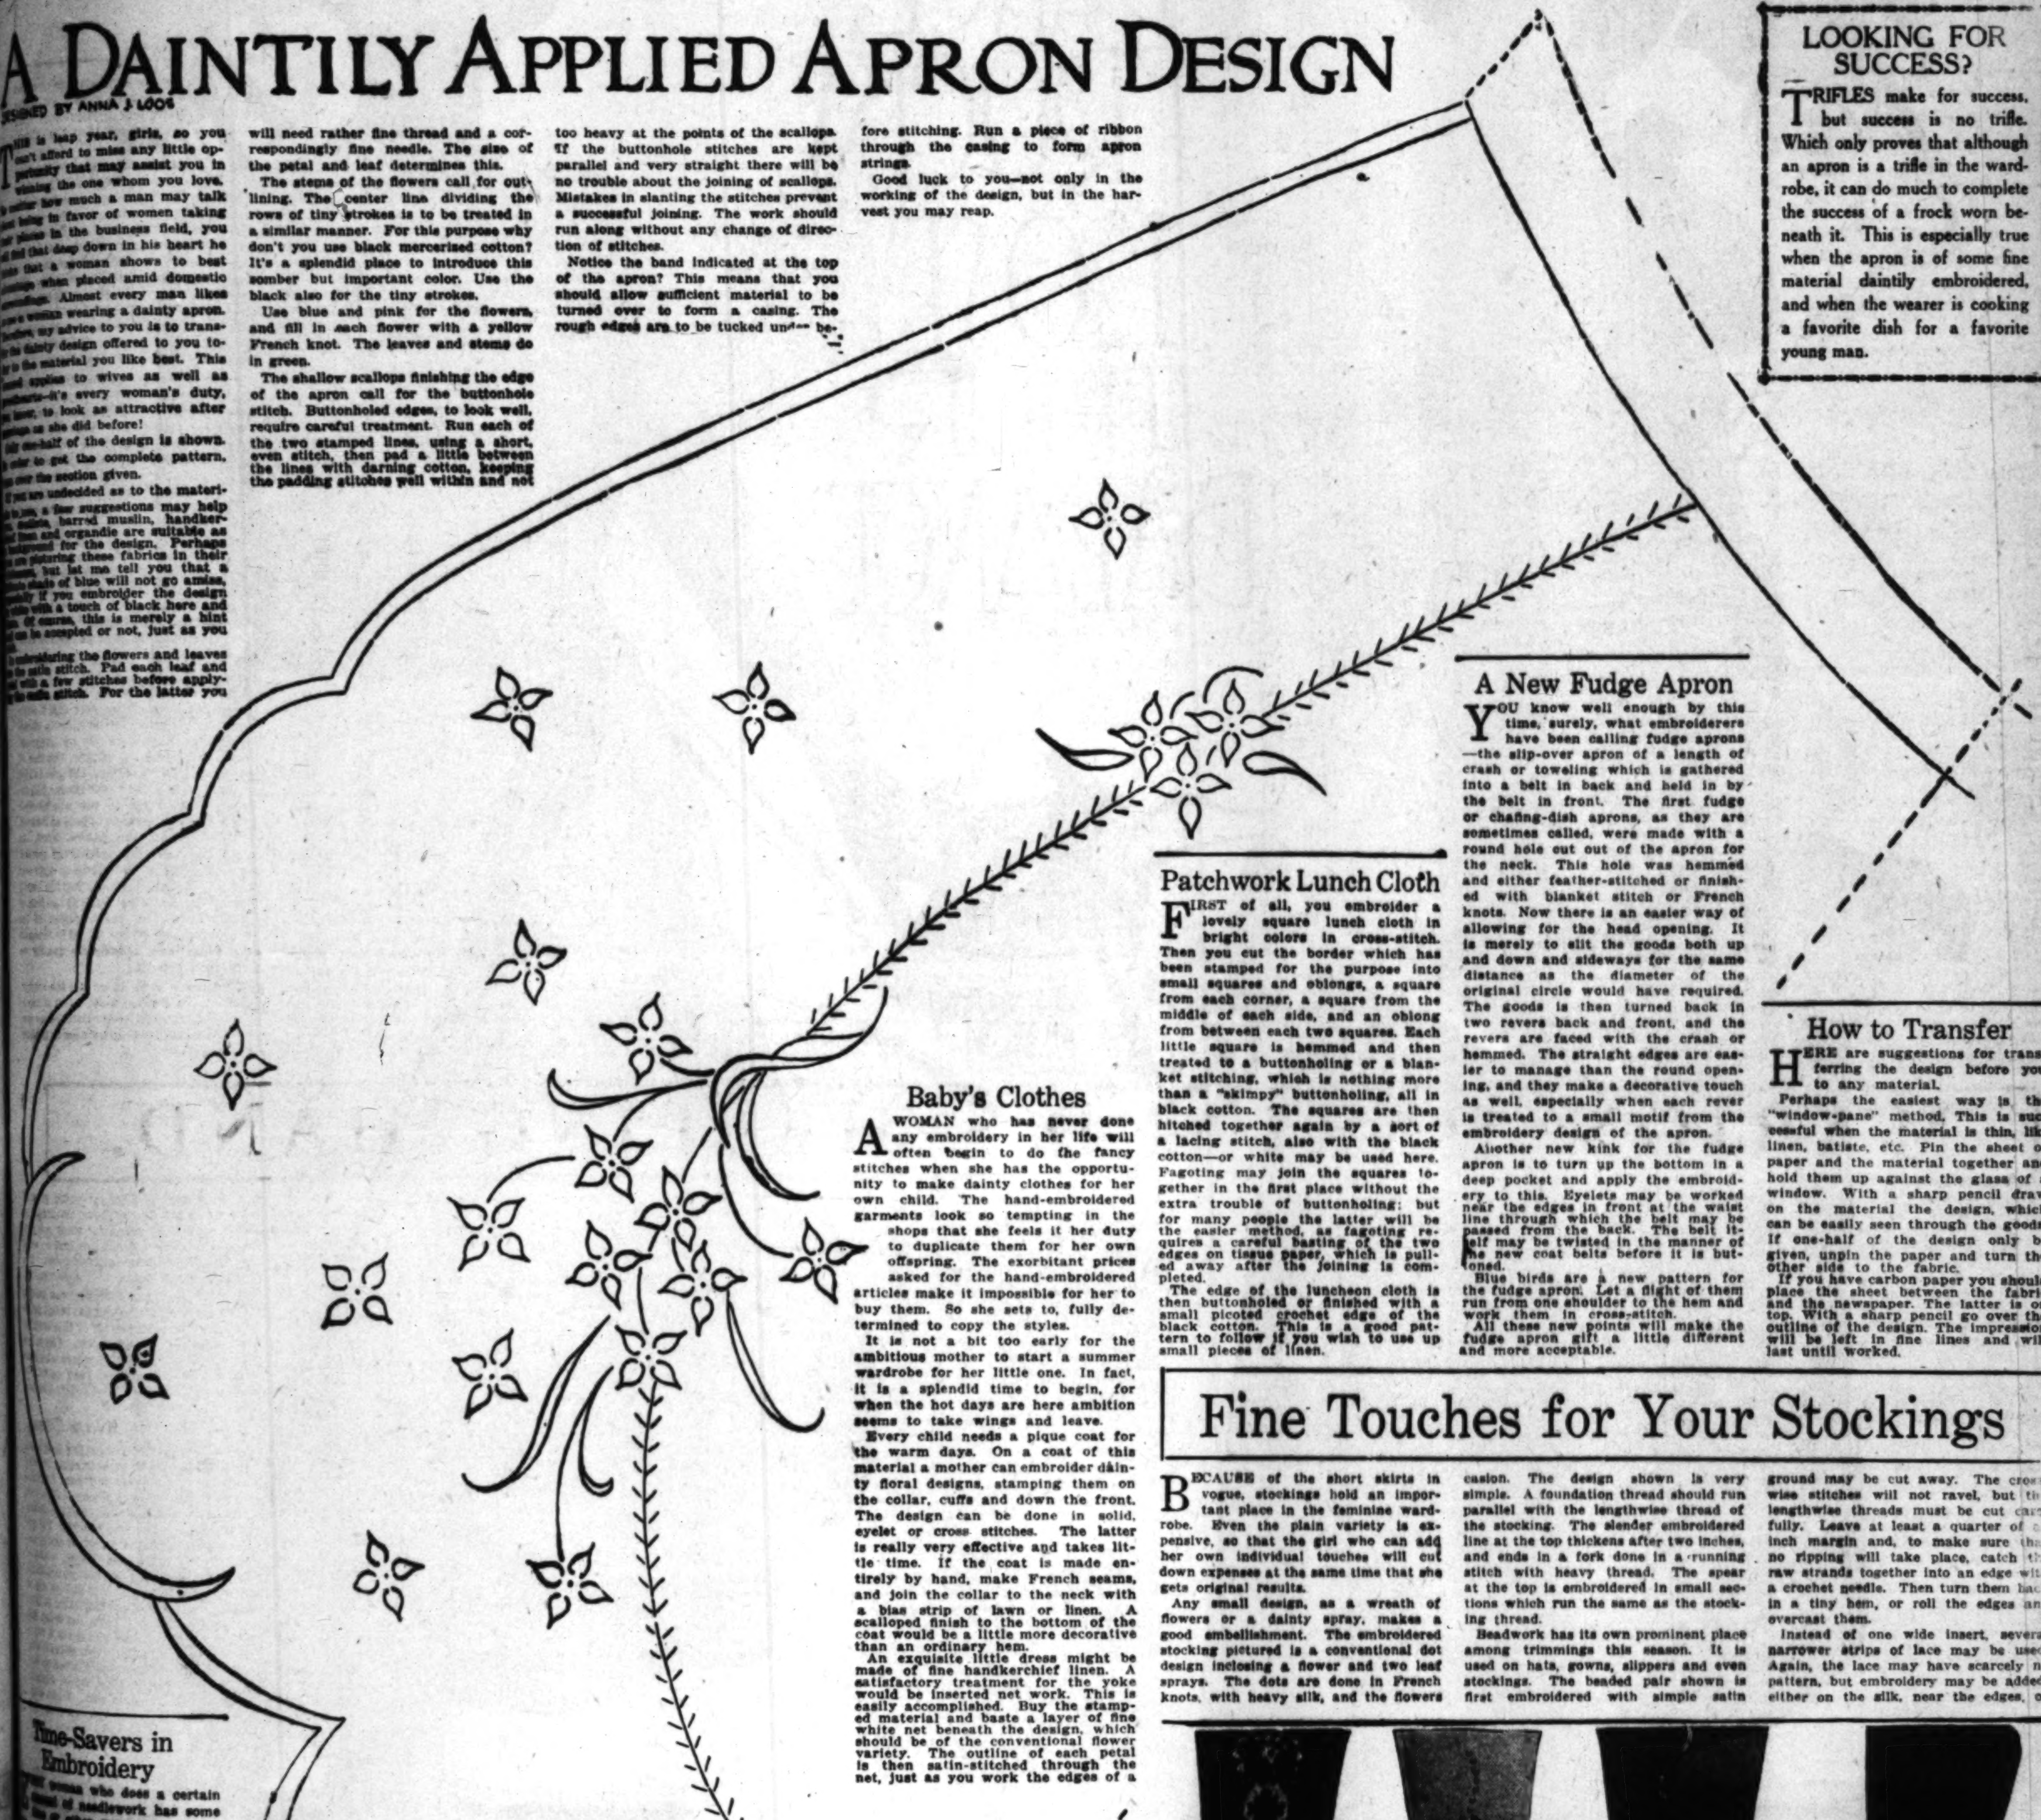
The stems of the flowers call for outlining. The center line dividing the rows of tiny strokes is to be treated in a similar manner. For this purpose why don't you use black mercerized cotton? It's a splendid place to introduce this somber but important color. Use the black also for the tiny strokes.

Use blue and pink for the flowers, and fill in each flower with a yellow French knot. The leaves and stems do in green.

The shallow scallops finishing the edge of the apron call for the buttonhole stitch. Buttonholed edges, to look well, require careful treatment. Run each of the two stamped lines, using a short, even stitch, then pad a little between the lines with darning cotton, keeping the padding stitches well within and not too heavy at the points of the scallops. If the buttonhole stitches are kept parallel and very straight there will be no trouble about the joining of scallops. Mistakes in slanting the stitches prevent a successful joining. The work should run along without any change of direction of stitches.

Notice the band indicated at the top of the apron? This means that you should allow sufficient material to be turned over to form a casing. The rough edges are to be tucked under before stitching. Run a piece of ribbon through the casing to form apron strings.

Good luck to you—not only in the working of the design, but in the harvest you may reap.



One Half of Design

LOOKING FOR SUCCESS?

TRIFLES make for success, but success is no trifle. Which only proves that although an apron is a trifle in the wardrobe, it can do much to complete the success of a frock worn beneath it. This is especially true when the apron is of some fine material daintily embroidered, and when the wearer is cooking a favorite dish for a favorite young man.

Baby's Clothes

A WOMAN who has never done any embroidery in her life will often begin to do the fancy stitches when she has the opportunity to make dainty clothes for her own child. The hand-embroidered garments look so tempting in the shops that she feels it her duty to duplicate them for her own offspring. The exorbitant prices asked for the hand-embroidered articles make it impossible for her to buy them. So she sets to, fully determined to copy the styles.

It is not a bit too early for the ambitious mother to start a summer wardrobe for her little one. In fact, it is a splendid time to begin, for when the hot days are here ambition seems to take wings and leave.

Every child needs a pique coat for the warm days. On a coat of this material a mother can embroider dainty floral designs, stamping them on the collar, cuffs and down the front. The design can be done in solid, eyelet or cross stitches. The latter is really very effective and takes little time. If the coat is made entirely by hand, make French seams, and join the collar to the neck with a bias strip of lawn or linen. A scalloped finish to the bottom of the coat would be a little more decorative than an ordinary hem.

An exquisite little dress might be made of fine handkerchief linen. A satisfactory treatment for the yoke would be inserted net work. This is easily accomplished. Buy the stamped material and baste a layer of fine white net beneath the design, which should be of the conventional flower variety. The outline of each petal is then satin-stitched through the net, just as you work the edges of a large eyelet. Cut away the linen or nainsook with a sharp pair of scissors, leaving the net exposed. Work the leaves with the satin-stitch and outline the stems. Scallop and buttonhole-stitch the neck line and the edge of the sleeves.

If desired, a cap for the baby could be decorated with the same design. The net produces a lacy effect, which is always sure to be pleasing if the work is neatly done.

Patchwork Lunch Cloth

FIRST of all, you embroider a lovely square lunch cloth in bright colors in cross-stitch. Then you cut the border which has been stamped for the purpose into small squares and oblongs, a square from each corner, a square from the middle of each side, and an oblong from between each two squares. Each little square is hemmed and then treated to a buttonholing or a blanket stitching, which is nothing more than a "skimpy" buttonholing, all in black cotton. The squares are then hitched together again by a sort of a lacing stitch, also with the black cotton—or white may be used here. Fagoting may join the squares together in the first place without the extra trouble of buttonholing; but for many people the latter will be the easier method, as fagoting requires a careful basting of the two edges on tissue paper, which is pulled away after the joining is completed.

The edge of the luncheon cloth is then buttonholed or finished with a small picoted crochet edge of the black cotton. This is a good pattern to follow if you wish to use up small pieces of linen.

A New Fudge Apron

YOU know well enough by this time, surely, what embroiderers have been calling fudge aprons—the slip-over apron of a length of crash or toweling which is gathered into a belt in back and held in by the belt in front. The first fudge or chafing-dish aprons, as they are sometimes called, were made with a round hole cut out of the apron for the neck. This hole was hemmed and either feather-stitched or finished with blanket stitch or French knots. Now there is an easier way of allowing for the head opening. It is merely to slit the goods both up and down and sideways for the same distance as the diameter of the original circle would have required. The goods is then turned back in two revers back and front, and the revers are faced with the crash or hemmed. The straight edges are easier to manage than the round opening, and they make a decorative touch as well, especially when each rever is treated to a small motif from the embroidery design of the apron.

Another new kink for the fudge apron is to turn up the bottom in a deep pocket and apply the embroidery to this. Eyelets may be worked near the edges in front at the waist line through which the belt may be passed from the back. The belt itself may be twisted in the manner of the new coat belts before it is buttoned.

Blue birds are a new pattern for the fudge apron. Let a flight of them run from one shoulder to the hem and work them in cross-stitch.

All these new points will make the fudge apron gift a little different and more acceptable.

How to Transfer

HERE are suggestions for transferring the design before you to any material.

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric.

If you have carbon paper you should place the sheet between the fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked.

Fine Touches for Your Stockings

BECAUSE of the short skirts in vogue, stockings hold an important place in the feminine wardrobe. Even the plain variety is expensive, so that the girl who can add her own individual touches will cut down expenses at the same time that she gets original results.

Any small design, as a wreath of flowers or a dainty spray, makes a good embellishment. The embroidered stocking pictured is a conventional dot design inclosing a flower and two leaf sprays. The dots are done in French knots, with heavy silk, and the flowers and leaves are worked in satin stitch. A darner may be used to give a firm foundation while working, but care must be taken not to stretch the stocking. If this happens, the design, when finished, will not lie flat, but bulge unsatisfactorily. To further prevent stretching while working, baste a piece of fairly stiff paper on the wrong side of the stocking before beginning. This may be pulled away when you have finished.

Very often the design desired is already stamped upon paper, though if it is not, trace it on wax or tracing paper. Then tack this on the right side of the stocking in the proper position. After the embroidery is finished the paper may be pulled away.

The clocked stocking is, perhaps, easiest to copy, and has the added advantage of being suitable for almost any occasion. The design shown is very simple. A foundation thread should run parallel with the lengthwise thread of the stocking. The slender embroidered line at the top thickens after two inches, and ends in a fork done in a running stitch with heavy thread. The spear at the top is embroidered in small sections which run the same as the stocking thread.

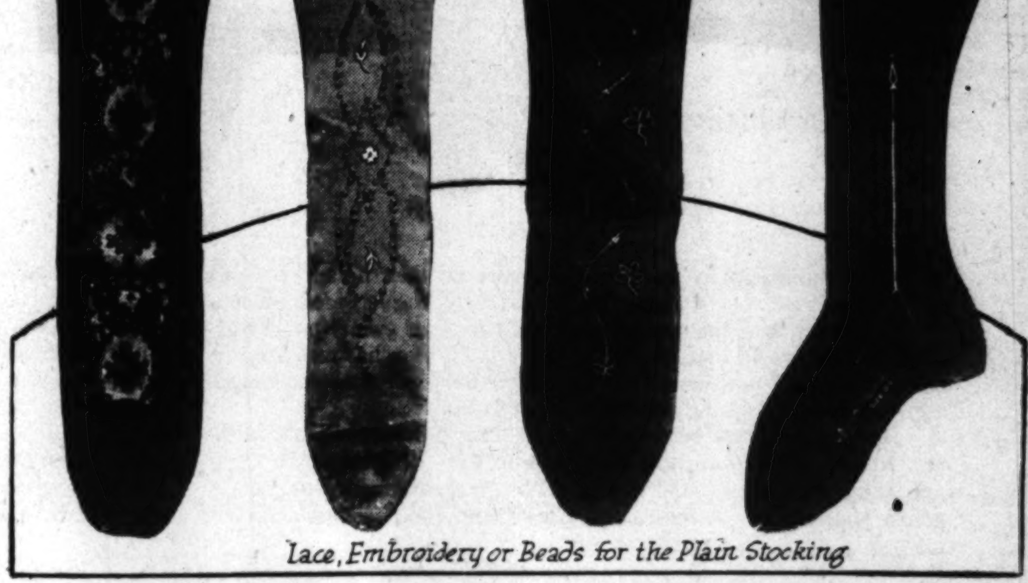
Beadwork has its own prominent place among trimmings this season. It is used on hats, gowns, slippers and even stockings. The beaded pair shown is first embroidered with simple satin stitch in four-petaled flowers and a curving stem. Then tiny steel beads outline them. The snakelike curve in between is nothing but alternating round and disklike steel beads strung on silk. The stocking upon which the beads are appliqued must be firm and heavy, so that it will not fray or pull out of shape with their weight.

The lace-ornamented pair makes a splendid addition to the dance costume. The lace used should be of the same color as the hose, and of not too open a pattern. The design furnished is a good example of what should be chosen. At first sight it seems rather difficult to insert the lace properly, but it proves quicker than the other methods. First baste the lace into place. Then sew it firmly with tiny close-together stitches, which run about an eighth of an inch from the edge. Then the stocking background may be cut away. The crosswise stitches will not ravel, but the lengthwise threads must be cut carefully. Leave at least a quarter of an inch margin and, to make sure that no ripping will take place, catch the raw strands together into an edge with a crochet needle. Then turn them back in a tiny hem, or roll the edges and overcast them.

Instead of one wide insert, several narrower strips of lace may be used. Again, the lace may have scarcely no pattern, but embroidery may be added, either on the silk, near the edges, or on the lace itself. Beads outlining the lace pattern are also pretty, and gold or silver thread is used with good effect.

Haphazard dots, triangles or squares are easy to execute. Broken stripes are also simple, a guiding thread being run in the places to be embroidered. Three leaves, a scattered daisy or a tiny ring make effective designs.

Silk is the most satisfactory material to use for working, though chenille or even a fine braid would be up to date. The motif on the stocking may aptly match that used on the gown. For instance, if the dress is trimmed with roses, put a quaint moss rose on the instep, either with colored chenille or wool, in solid or cross stitch. Butterflies, birds or even fruit, in this novelty season, will help to stamp your costume with that much-coveted attribute, individuality.



Lace, Embroidery or Beads for the Plain Stocking

Strawberry Centerpiece

AMONG the most colorful designs one can use on a centerpiece is the one where the strawberry has been used as a motif. Quite a tempting centerpiece about twenty-two inches in diameter has a single strawberry placed in each deep scallop forming the edge of the piece. Each berry calls for very little work, its shape being outlined in crimson thread. Golden yellow seedings in each berry are worked in the seed stitch. A fresh-colored green is used for the leaves.

The scalloped edge can be buttonholed in green or white.

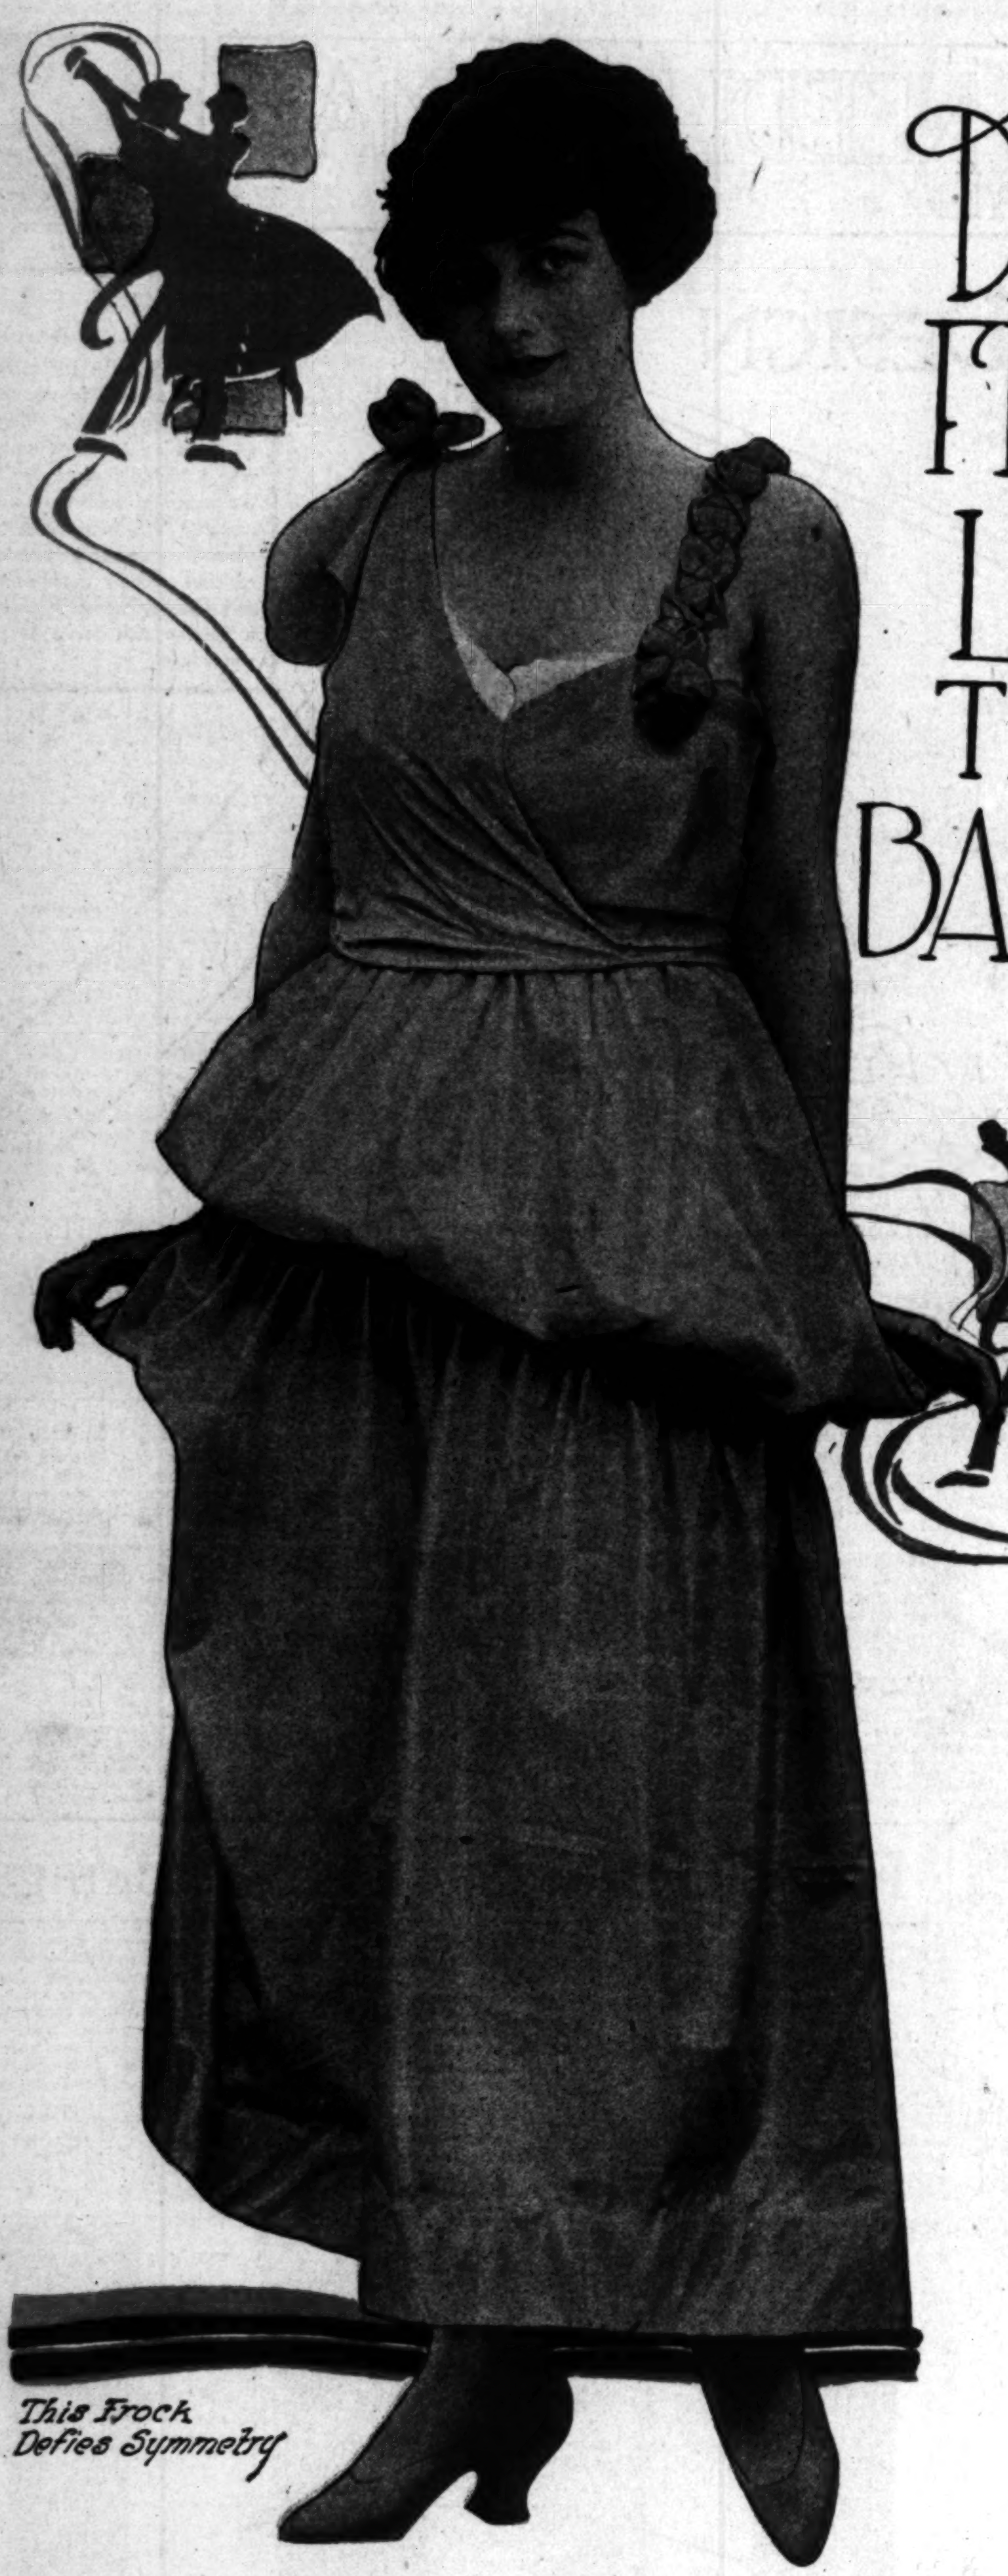
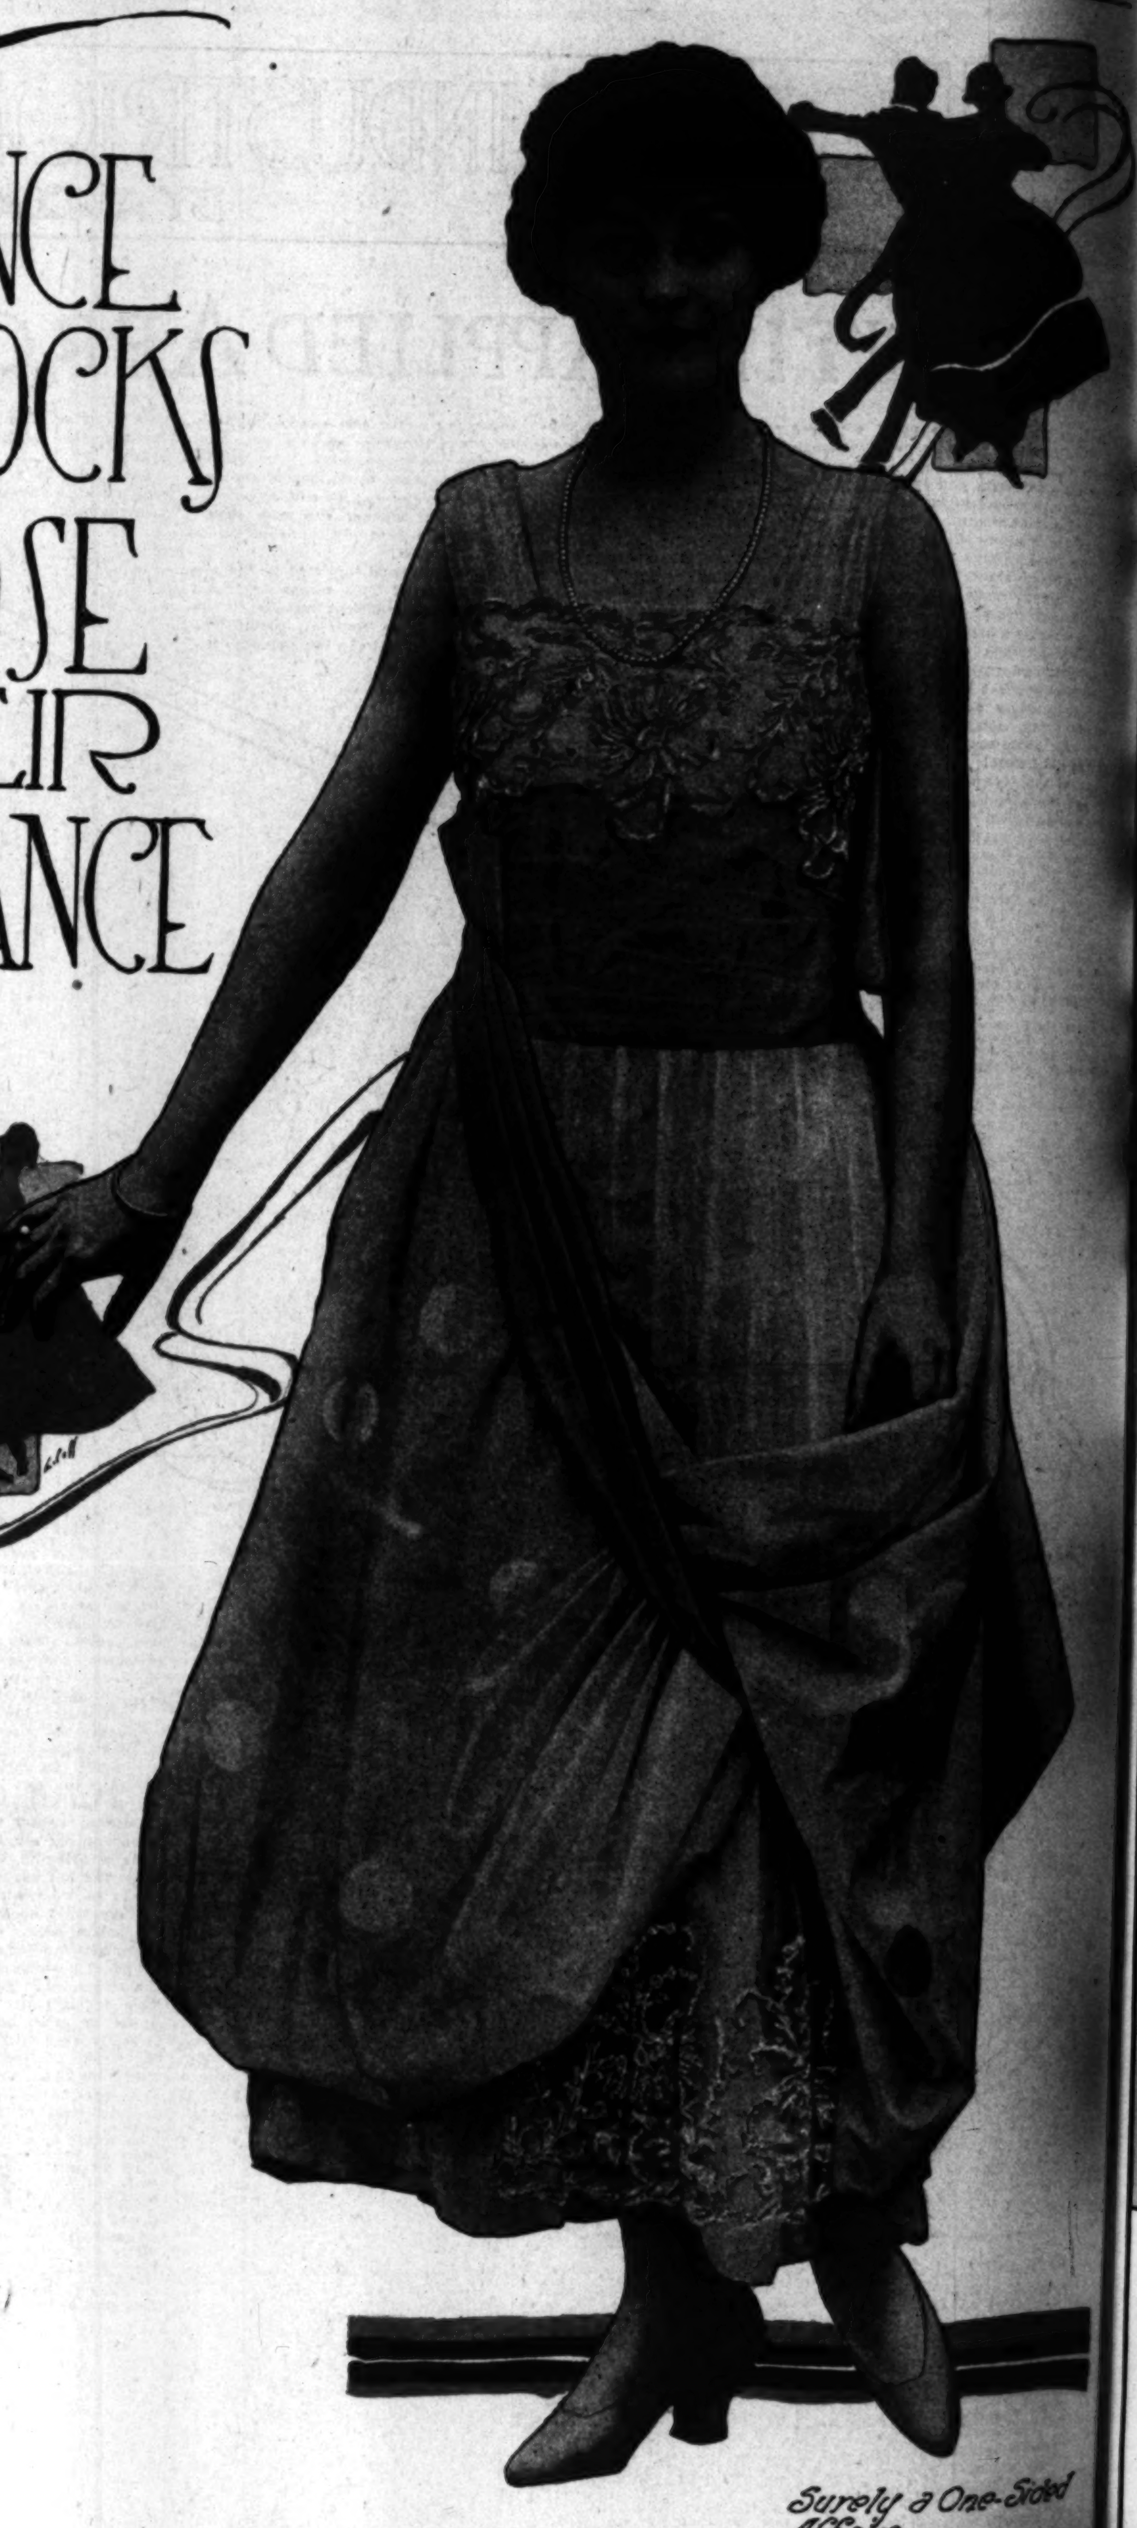
long-and-short straight stitches. The main pattern is usually in a round or square medallion and between the medallions are scrolls of black, the solid black being broken by straight lines. When covered with white cotton the finished scroll resembles rococo work.

Any one desiring to carry out a black-and-white effect in a room should not fail to make a set of this sort.

DANCE FROCKS LOSE THEIR BALANCE



This Frock Defies Symmetry



Surely a One-Sided Affair

POOR things! Why don't they advertise for their balance? Don't they want their balance back? Perhaps the lopsided effect is prettier than the symmetrical frock with its evenly-posed panniers and its sleeves exactly alike. At least, Fashion has made up her mind to try the "unbalanced" frock on her long-suffering devotees, if a great number of spring evening gowns can testify.

There are several ways in which you can lose your balance in the new frocks. First of all, you can ignore the laws of symmetry entirely and sling a ribbon around a long piece of skirt drapery diagonally across your figure. A most carelessly artistic effect is thus achieved, but it takes more than a little care to obtain this apparently negligent arrangement. A careful examination of this frock so treated shows it to be really a carefully-put-together piece of mechanism. The material is taffeta with a brocaded dot rather larger than a dollar. It is mounted over a petticoat of silver lace over a pleated foundation of flesh-colored chiffon. The ribbon which errs so grievously against the laws of equilibrium is of old-blue moire. It is used to form the deep girdle, which is partly covered by lace.

The second instance of the unbalanced frock might have been suggested by a lack of material if it were not for the one-sided pannier on the skirt, which is looped up by the same roses which are used for the left shoulder. The very lack of sophistication in this frock makes for its charm. It is almost what a nymph herself would have draped with a silken scarf and a garland of roses. The material is sky-blue faille and the roses are pink, as they should be.

Though these frocks do defy the laws of proportion, they do not offend harmony; and perhaps the only losing of balance will come from the spectators, who will more probably lose their hearts first and their balance afterward.

How Movie Actors Preserve Their Looks

Here are the Five Steuarts. All are in the movies. Mr. Steuart tells how they work, and how his entire family keep their beauty.

"I believe we are the largest acting family on the 'screen' " writes Mr. Steuart. "All of the children act and have done so since each was two months old. We are 'The Five Steuarts,' and you've very likely seen some of us filmed with Ethel Barrymore in 'The Nightingale,' Mabel Taliaferro in 'The Three of Us,' etc., etc.

"Wife and I think Pompeian MASSAGE Cream is great. Nothing like it for getting the dust and excess oils out of the skin. A massage with Pompeian sort of takes the 'tired' out of our faces, too. Do we look overworked? No, but we surely are. On our feet all day and always under a strain, but we take good care of ourselves, which includes using the 'Great Youthifier.'

"Cordially, Maurice Wilcox Steuart.

"P.S.—The kiddies use your new product, Pompeian NIGHT Cream. Fine for their tender young skins when they get rough, red and chapped by the wind or cold. Wife and I have just started to use your Pompeian HAIR Massage. It surely is good stuff."

Hon. Herbert S. Hadley

POLITICS AND THE WAR

By Herbert S. Hadley

Ex-Governor of Missouri

WHAT will be the effect of the European war upon the political campaign of 1916? This is a question which occupies a position of first importance in every political discussion. Any answer must of necessity partake of that uncertainty that belongs to all predictions and particularly to political predictions in times of war. The influence of the European war upon American politics will depend to a great extent upon whether the war continues, as it now seems probable it will, until after the close of the campaign of 1916. That it will have, in that event, a direct and important, if not a controlling influence upon our next Presidential campaign, seems entirely clear.

In the first place, there is to be considered its influence upon the attitude of the American people toward those important economic questions which the war has brought to the forefront of public discussion. Among these, the most important is the tariff. It is the opinion of our best informed statesmen and economists that we must, following the close of the European war, face a fierce foreign competition in manufactured products. The idea that the European nations now engaged in this titanic conflict will be too exhausted to be dangerous as commercial competitors is entirely lacking in substantial facts to sustain it. When the eight million fighting men who are now engaged in the work of destruction shall turn to the works of peace, it is entirely clear that they will produce manufactured products far beyond the necessity of their own markets. It is also known that while the working men of Germany have been engaged in fighting her battles, many of her factories have been operated by the old men, women, children and prisoners, producing manufactured products far beyond the need of home consumption. These products have been stored, awaiting the day when German ships can again carry them to our markets and the markets of the world.

These conditions should work to the advantage of the Republican party, for they will strengthen the opiniop that we will need in control of our National Government a party whose position in favor of a protective tariff is clear and unequivocal.

THE issue of National preparedness is another question, which the European war has made, for the first time in the lifetime of the present generation, a subject of National discussion. Outside of a group of Pacifists whose number is by no means inconsiderable, but small in proportion to the entire population, there is an overwhelming public opinion in favor of a better condition of National preparedness both on land and on sea. But when it is asserted that a large majority of the American people favor a "reasonable" or an "adequate" degree of preparedness, it is necessary to understand that there are almost as many different opinions as to what is "reasonable" or "adequate" as there are persons discussing the question. The burden of responsibility for dealing with this question rests upon the party in power and its difficulties are evidenced by the marked difference of opinion that exists within and without its ranks. There is on the one hand, Mr. Bryan, whose influence and following are still considerable, who is apparently opposed to any increase in our army or navy, and, on the other hand, there is the Naval Board, which represents the best expert opinion, recommending a navy greater than that of any other nation. If President Wilson and the Democratic party can deal with this problem in a way that will appeal to a substantial majority of the people, they will have accomplished a real achievement in statesmanship, which will be rewarded at the polls. But, on the basis of probabilities, it is much more likely that President Wilson will find himself, so far as this question is concerned, in the position of the public official who discovered that by his official conduct he had made a lot of "cool friends and warm enemies."

ANOTHER way in which the war is likely to have an important if not a controlling influence upon the next election is in the prejudices it has aroused in favor of or against the different political parties, on the part of those who sympathize with Germany and her allies, or with England and her allies. The attitude of those who favor Germany seems of the most importance, because more evident and concrete. At the present time, the prejudices of the German-Americans and their sympathizers are strongly against the present administration; but this may or may not be an element of weakness. In this regard, at least, the Republican party has no advantage over its Democratic opponent. A large majority of the German-Americans are Republicans and their vigorous opposition may bring to President Wilson a larger measure of support from those opposed to the German cause than he will thus lose.

The Republican party faces the difficult situation of adopting a platform which will unequivocally meet the demands of those who, like Colonel Roosevelt, think the present administration has been grossly neglectful of National duty in not effectively protesting against the invasion of Belgium and more vigorously resenting the killing of American citizens upon the high seas, and that considerable portion of the party which protests even against what the present administration has done. If the Republican party equivocates or attempts to compromise upon this proposition, it will confront the danger to itself of Colonel Roosevelt's again leading the Progressive party, with an issue of Americanism, upon which he may be able to appeal more effectively for the support of the American people than he did with the issue of social and industrial justice in 1912. And, on the other hand, the defection of the German-American voters who constitute a considerable portion of the Republican party in a number of doubtful states might well give the election to the Democrats, even though those votes were cast for some other party than the Democratic party or were not cast at all. To increase the difficulties of the Republican party in its attitude toward the present administration's handling of international problems, Mr. Taft and other influential leaders have from time to time commended practically all that President Wilson has done in this regard, except in dealing with the Mexican situation.

Altogether the political situation as affected by the European war is a complex and complicated one. About the only safe prediction that can be made concerning it is that that party will deserve and receive the support of a majority of the American people which asserts without equivocation or hesitation the primary obligation of every citizen to be, first of all, an American; of our Government, to at all times be prepared to protect American citizens on land and on sea, and to perform unhesitatingly the obligations which it has assumed by treaty for or against other nations, whether weak or strong.

Fruits and Their Uses—Cooking and Serving

As a rule not a little of the enjoyment of a meal depends on daintiness of service, and a service of fruit is no exception to this. Fruits may be fresh, delicious and wholesome but much of the value is gone if the appeal to the palate through the eye is wanting. And in this age where most attractive china and glass may be purchased for a small outlay and where dainty napkins of linen or paper in endless variety are within reach of all there is no excuse for carelessness or slovenliness of service with fruit or indeed any food.

Fruits are best when served raw, in season—a few cannot be taken in their raw state while some are rendered more easily digestible by cooking. The cooking should be done in a kettle of earthen or granite ware and a silver or wooden spoon used for stirring. All fruits contain certain acids which when brought in contact with tin or iron develop a poisonous compound.

In serving use small plates of china or glass with silver knives and paper doilies for fresh fruit where cream is not used. Fruit napkins are smaller than the ordinary napkin and may be had in almost every quality of linen. Bear in mind that peaches, pears, and several kinds of berries make stains on linen that are very hard to remove.

To serve Grapefruit:

After wiping the grapefruit cut in half crosswise. With a small sharp pointed knife cut between the pulp and the skin all around. Remove with sharp scissors the center part and run the knife all around each section. Sprinkle liberally with sugar and chill thoroughly before serving. If liked a tablespoonful of sherry, a teaspoonful of rum, one-half tablespoonful of sloe gin or apricot brandy may be added before chilling the fruit.

Apples—baked.

There are many ways of adding variety to the everyday baked apple. A spoonful of whipped cream with a stuffed date, a dab of jelly or chopped preserved ginger make easy and effective garnish, while filling the core cavity with mincemeat or chopped raisins will not only decorate but will impart a very delicious flavor. Serve with cream, whipped or plain.

In baking apples baste frequently with the hot syrup so that they may bake an even rich color.

Berries.

These should be washed and picked over carefully before serving. Garnish when possible with the natural leaves of the fruit but if not possible any soft "greenery" will do.

Grapes.

These should be kept in bunches but washed and looked over before piling lightly into a fruit dish.

Syruped Apples

Apples
2 cups sugar
1 cup water
5-cent can condensed milk
Vanilla
Powdered sugar
Chopped nuts

Pare medium size apples and remove cores. Stew until soft in a syrup of the sugar and water boiled until sugar is dissolved (a few minutes), taking care to keep the apples from breaking. Place in glass dishes with syrup and a sprinkling of chopped walnuts. Then heat the can of condensed milk in boiling water, without opening. When thoroughly heated, remove from water and shake vigorously for a few minutes. Then place on ice until thoroughly chilled. When ice-cold open the can and beat contents in a bowl with egg-beater, flavoring with a few drops of vanilla and a sprinkling of powdered sugar. This makes a cheap and perfect substitute for whipped cream. Garnish each apple with the cream and a sprinkling of chopped nuts. A candied cherry adds daintiness.—Mrs. A. F. P., Laguna Beach, Calif.

Fruit Pudding

1 can pineapple
Juice 1 lemon
½ cup sugar
½ box lemon gelatine
½ cup cold water
4 egg whites
½ lb. malaga grapes
Whipped cream

Put into a saucepan over the fire the juice of a can of pineapple, sugar, and gelatine which has been dissolved in the cold water. Let come to a scald, then pour over the egg whites, well beaten. Cut the pineapple into small pieces and add grapes, halved and seeded. Arrange the fruit in the mold, pour the liquid gelatine over it and let congeal. Serve with the following:

Dressing

1 pint milk
Sugar
4 egg yolks

Cook to a soft custard the milk, yolks of eggs and sugar to taste and flavor with vanilla. Drop flecks of whipped cream over top.—Mrs. H. L. W., Racine, Wis.

Apricot Short Cake

2 teacups flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 large teaspoon baking powder
2 tablespoons sugar
2 egg whites
2 large tablespoons butter
¾ cup sweet milk
Canned apricots
4 tablespoons sugar
2 tablespoons powdered sugar

Mix flour, salt, baking powder and sugar together, then rub in—as for biscuit dough—butter and milk. Make into dough, roll out and bake in well greased layer-cake pan. Cool and split open, spread with butter and then with canned apricots, which have been strained of the juice and chopped fine and sweetened with 4 tablespoons sugar. Finish with a meringue made of whites of two eggs and two tablespoons powdered sugar. Brown slightly. Serve with the following:

Custard Sauce

4 tablespoons sugar
1 tablespoon flour
2 eggs
2 cups sweet milk
Small piece stick cinnamon
Vanilla

Stir sugar, flour and eggs together, then add sweet milk and cinnamon to the milk. Cook in double boiler until light consistency. Flavor with vanilla.—Mrs. C. A. D., Xenia, Ohio.

Brown Pudding

1 cup New Orleans molasses
1 level teaspoon soda
1 cup sweet milk
Pinch salt
1 large spoonful butter
1 cup seeded raisins
1 cup chopped nuts
1 cup chopped dates
3 pieces canton ginger

Beat molasses, butter, salt and milk. Add other ingredients and steam two hours in coffee cans half full.

Dressing

2 cups confectioners' sugar
Butter size of an egg
2 eggs
1 pint whipped cream

Rub butter into sugar, add egg yolks, then the stiffly beaten egg whites, then the whipped cream. Flavor as desired. This recipe serves about 16 people. —Mrs. W. D. McC., Crafton, Pa.

Soft White Cookies with Raisin Filling

Flour
1½ cups sugar
¾ cup shortening, either lard or butter or both mixed
1 egg
½ cup milk
1 level teaspoon soda dissolved in little milk
Salt
Nutmeg

Mix well 1 cup sugar (reserving ½ cup for sprinkling on tops of cookies before baking) with shortening, egg, milk, soda, pinch of salt and a sprinkle of nutmeg, and flour. Use enough flour to enable to roll and cut.

Filling

½ lb. raisins
½ cup water
½ tablespoon butter
Flour

Put raisins in pan with water and butter, and as they come to the boil, thicken with tablespoon of flour mixed with a little water. Put one layer of cookies in pan, spread with raisin mixture, then place another cookie on top, sprinkle with sugar and bake.—Mrs. M. A. F., Chicago, Ill.

What Standardization Means to Automobile Buyers

It means VALUE—the utmost in efficiency per dollar of cost. Just to the extent that a car is standardized does the buyer's dollar approach the maximum of purchasing power.

Standardization means definite, proved quality, known manufacturing costs and reduced selling costs.

Of the million autos that will be sold in 1916, 75% will be standardized cars selling for less than $1000.00 each. This remarkable American achievement is the result of standardizing motors, starters, carburetors, speedometers, ignition and lighting systems, transmissions, differentials, tires, wheels, axles, rims, bearings, etc.

Finally the upholstery has been standardized by the almost universal adoption of

DU PONT FABRIKOID
REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.
MOTOR QUALITY

40% of all 1915 cars sold were upholstered in this proved, guaranteed material, and in 1916 the total will be nearly 60%.

Fabrikoid is the only standardized automobile upholstery. It wears better than coated splits (commonly sold as "genuine leather") and has the artistic appearance and luxurious comfort of the best leather.

Rayntite Fabrikoid top material, single or double texture, is guaranteed one year against leaking, but built to last the life of the car.

Craftsman Fabrikoid, the artistic and durable upholstery material for furniture and home decoration is sold by the yard in leading department stores.

GIVING EYES TO THE BLIND

By William Martin Richards, M. D.

Schools are full of neglected, near-sighted and far-sighted children

Emerging from darkness they were like six magpies chattering for joy

Stephen was considered a hopeless case

At twenty-six she began to read

IT IS said that most of the discoveries of benefit to mankind have come about through accidental circumstances. Generally, of course, the accident happened to a person who had already been studying the problem, but it took the accident to switch his thoughts into the path which led to solution. So it was in my case. Although I had been for a long time studying the problem of how to help the nearly blind, if Alexander had not recently come into my office, so soon after Stephen, it is probable that many near-blind school children would not be studying their lessons today with their eyes instead of with their fingers.

Oculists differ on several important questions of method, but all, I believe, accept the doctrine that reading lenses which focus nearer than ten inches cannot safely be prescribed, as they will overstrain the muscles which turn the eyes toward each other. I had a theory that nearly blind children should be given glasses to keep them from going entirely blind.

Extreme nearsightedness is generally confused with blindness. As long as there is any sight, it should be stimulated with glasses and the eyes made to perform their function; for disuse of a function occasions atrophy, and finally total loss of that function. On the other hand, correction of near sight by the proper glasses progressively decreases the near sight, and a nearsighted person whose eyes are regularly examined keeps getting less nearsighted. Though this theory is held by oculists, most of them draw the line at the nearly blind. Their sight is considered hopeless. I believed that the large majority of nearly blind could be given an amount of vision which would keep them from being helpless, and in common with other oculists I knew that without the proper glasses, the little vision they had must decrease until they became totally blind. I thought there must be some way, if we could only discover it, to give them not only vision which would render them less dependent, but vision which they could work with. The trouble was that reading lenses for the nearly blind would have to focus at less than ten inches, and I saw no way to get around that. Meanwhile I kept on studying the problem and went into the blind classes in the public schools.

STEPHEN is sixteen. His head was run over by a wagon when he was three, and almost total blindness resulted. Yet he had persisted at his lessons until he was now in High School. In this school there was a blind class in which there were twelve children, two of them whose cases the teacher did not consider hopeless, and these two she proposed to send to my office. Stephen, with optimistic determination, told the teacher he thought it very hard that she was going to try to do something for the others and not for him. She believed him to be past helping, but wishing to show her appreciation of his spirit, she brought him to my office. The other two boys I made able to see well enough to go into a sighted class, but I could not give Stephen glasses which would enable him to do so. The best I could get gave him only seven per cent vision in one eye, and fifteen per cent in the other. I told him sorrowfully, for I too was struck with his sturdy character, that these would enable him to see slightly, but not enough to do any book work or to see the blackboard. I said good-bye to him, and tried to forget his cruel disappointment.

Shortly afterwards, in another public school class for the blind, I found Alexander. He brought Stephen sharply to my mind. He too was sixteen, had grit, and his good eye had the same amount of vision as Stephen's. But his other eye was glass. I found that with the proper lens I could give Alexander a distance vision of fifteen per cent, precisely the amount of Stephen's. But since he had only one eye, I was also able to give him a reading lens which focused at three and a half inches; and with this he could study his lessons. So Alexander with his one eye was much better off than Stephen with his two, even if one of them was exactly as good as Alexander's sole eye. It seemed a tragic joke played by fate. Suddenly the solution flashed over me. Why not make Stephen one-eyed for reading only? I did not dare give him two reading lenses, but I could give him one! So I covered the lower part of the glass over his poorer eye with a black wafer, pasting it on just as a reading lens is pasted upon the distance lens in a bifocal glass; and I fitted the other eye with a reading lens which focused it at three and one-half inches. There would now be no more strain in reading for the other eye than if it were artificial like Alexander's, for that eye could not, covered up while reading, see the letters. And with his better eye Stephen now studies from his books, and can now read from the blackboard in the sighted class of which he is a member, while his other eye doesn't mind it at all. And I have since done the same for many other children in the public schools of New York City. They owe the fact that they can now study with one eye in the sighted class instead of with their fingers in the blind class, to Stephen's splendid persistence and to the happy chance that Alexander had a glass eye, which made me think so ruefully of Stephen's illogical fate.

So far I have examined in the so-called blind classes one hundred and fifty-one children, and I find that ninety-nine of them can be made to read from their books. All of these children were thought to be practically blind. They could distinguish light from darkness and some of them could see large objects, but their cases had been pronounced too hopeless for glasses. My experience has taught me that two-thirds of the so-called blind people in the world had a little vision left when they were children, and this vision could have been much increased with the proper glasses. So long as so-called blind children, having no glasses, are kept in classes for the blind and taught to use their fingers instead of their eyes, they will inevitably become blind, through atrophy of what little vision they possess. Their sight must diminish unless they wear glasses, and improper glasses will accomplish blindness more quickly than none at all. With the proper glasses their sight will progressively improve.

It took three months for Stephen to learn to do sighted reading, and now he can perform all the work of his class—that is, not only read from books, but work on the blackboard and see from his seat the blackboard work of others. The time required for this readjustment was due to the fact that he had to get acquainted with his new machinery. Although a bright boy and in the High School, he did not know the shapes of letters.

For the blind, Braille's system of raised dots now takes the place of the cumbrous raised letters formerly in use. The public school teachers experienced in dealing with the blind think that it will take children about two years in a transition class to become familiar with the shapes of written words. Their minds must translate the letter into dots first—just as when we learn a foreign language we must translate each word separately into English before we can group the idea together. "Think in Braille," recommends the teacher to the nearly blind child who first opens the book of lettered words and begins to piece the letters together one by one. Stephen's case, however, gives room for hope that a child's stay in the transition class need not be so prolonged.

I HAVE a case of a woman of twenty-six who learned her small letters in three days. The capital letters she was familiar with because she had learned to know them on the advertising signboards in the streets. As she had never seen the small letters, she knew only by hearsay that there was another kind. When I fitted on her new glasses, with the bifocal lens, and handed her a newspaper, she picked out and named the capital letters at once. And when she saw how much of the page was in small letters and how great was the new world thus opened to her, she cried.

This soul-stirring little drama of making the blind see has been enacted in my office many times. Each grown-up actor has his own form of expression, abandoned to joy yet struggling for self-control. This woman of twenty-six had been partially blind since she was four days old. She has now an artificial eye and an artificial pupil in the other eye, her total visual apparatus consisting of one retina and a corner of a cornea. With this she could distinguish light from darkness and make out large objects. As a blind student she had worked through Perkins' Institute, Boston, and graduated from Columbia University. Compelled to earn her own living, she had sought a place as teacher for the blind; but she had been told she would be of little service in spite of her education and her knowledge of the psychology of the unsighted, because she would not be able to see what a child was doing at the back of the

Celery for the Home Garden

ANY person who has ever grown his own celery successfully has no desire to eat any other, and there is no reason why anyone who has the room to grow it should not have his own winter supply.

The old method was to dig a trench a foot and a half deep, which was filled with good loamy soil, and stable manure, in which the young plants were set. The first objection to this was that these young plants were shaded part of the time until they grew up to the top of the trench, and in the effort to accomplish this, nature grew them so rapidly that the stalks grew long and slender and the crowns did not bush out as they should. From time to time, as the plants grew, the soil from the sides of the trench was filled in about them, using the hand to get it about the stalks, which was back-breaking work at the best. As the plants emerged from the trench, the soil was ridged about them, frequently until growth stopped, when they were allowed to stand until bleached.

Compare this with the new way: Select a strip of mellow sandy soil, following potatoes is good if the latter were fertilized heavy. Dig the soil to the width of two feet, as deep as the top soil, working in as much stable manure as it will take, not putting it deep down in the furrow as you dig, but laying it half way up the furrow, so that when covered it will be not more than four inches from the top of the soil, as we desire the fibrous roots to luxuriate in this later on. If you have the time, or assistance, it will benefit this soil if it be trenched before digging. To do this, throw it out clear down to the subsoil for a width of two feet, on the side of the row, and allow it to lie a week, and then put it back, and allow it to lie another week before digging. This must be done as soon as the soil can be worked, and not when the weather gets warm, as the soil should not be exposed to the hot sun. Sunshine kills vast numbers of the beneficial soil bacteria, without which no soil is fertile. There is no use in digging up the ground between the celery roots, as this space need only be kept free from weeds, and is used as a path as well.

Of course the celery seeds should, for an early crop, be sown in the house or greenhouse in flats thinly, and when they have shown their third leaf, thin them out to two inches apart in the flats, and shear them off a half inch above the crowns, to make them stool out. The more branches you get the more heart there will be to the celery. The seedlings should be kept in a warm light place, but not in the direct rays of the sun, or they will become spindling in spite of all you can do. They may remain in the flats until time to transplant them to the open ground; but if you have not too many to handle, it will repay you to shift them into other flats, allowing them to set three inches apart and set them out about the first week of June.

The rows should be leveled off before the planting is begun, and the plants set level with the top, and just as deep as they set in the flats. It is the intention to grow them "flat" just the same as beans or peas. The soil is worked about them, but never ridged up or allowed to have access to the heart of the plants.

There is a reason for this method of celery growing or rather a number of them. The one which suggested it is the fact that all the diseases of a fungous nature, which afflict celery, carry their spores in the soil, and it is these spores coming into contact with the plants which cause heart-rot, brown-rot, and anthracnose, all of which render the celery plants unsightly, and often unsalable. You have often noticed the brown on the ribs of the outer stems of celery? This is caused by anthracnose, a fungous disease, the spores of which are carried in the soil, and when the soil is banked against the plants, these spores find a lodgment thereon and develop with the result stated.

All this we avoid in growing celery "flat," and keeping the soil away from it. In addition, the celery plant, like others, develops best in the full light, sunshine and air, and it gets all of these when it is allowed to grow normally as any other plant would.

Making the Most of the Garden

By Edward I. Farrington

HORACE GREELEY used to say that the potatoes he grew cost him a dollar apiece. He seemed to think they were worth the price, too; and that was all very well for a man who was riding a hobby and could ignore the expense. Most people who make gardens, though, want to get as much out of them as they put in and a little more, even while appreciating the fact that such corn and peas and melons and strawberries as they grow in their little back yards can not be purchased at any price. That is easily done if one makes the most of his garden, which means, above all, careful planning, after which comes the choice of tools and the adoption of all new methods which are found practicable and labor-saving.

Summer showers are always on tap

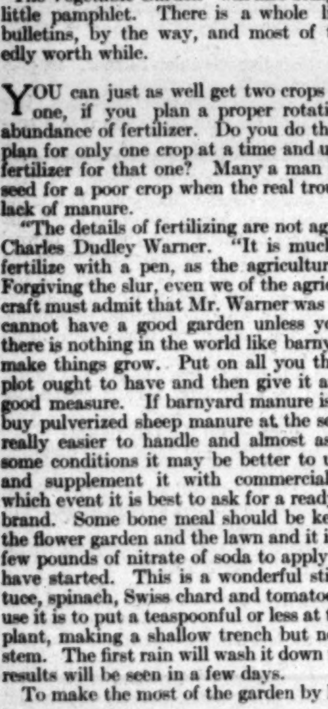
You can't expect to wait until planting time before you order your seeds and then get satisfactory results. The only right way is to sit down for an evening with the catalogues long before the snow is off the ground. And it is safe to say that it will be midnight before you get to bed, for the modern catalogue is more fascinating than a novel to anyone who is garden-wise.

Spread a sheet of wrapping paper on the floor and map out the garden just as you would draw the plans for a house. Allot the proper amount of space to each vegetable and assign such tall growing kinds as corn and pole beans to the back, where they will not shade the lettuce and the root crops. Most of the seedsmen issue bulletins on the growing of different crops which contain invaluable information. It is worth while writing for some of them when you send in your order. A postal card to the department of Agriculture at Washington asking for farmer's bulletin No. 94 on "The Vegetable Garden" will also bring a very helpful little pamphlet. There is a whole library of these bulletins, by the way, and most of them are decidedly worth while.

YOU can just as well get two crops off the land as one, if you plan a proper rotation and use an abundance of fertilizer. Do you do that? Or do you plan for only one crop at a time and use only enough fertilizer for that one? Many a man has blamed his seed for a poor crop when the real trouble has been a lack of manure.

"The details of fertilizing are not agreeable," wrote Charles Dudley Warner. "It is much pleasanter to fertilize with a pen, as the agricultural writers do." Forgiving the slur, even we of the agricultural writing craft must admit that Mr. Warner was right. Yet you cannot have a good garden unless you feed it, and there is nothing in the world like barnyard manure to make things grow. Put on all you think the garden plot ought to have and then give it another load for good measure. If barnyard manure is not to be had, buy pulverized sheep manure at the seed store. It is really easier to handle and almost as good. Under some conditions it may be better to use less manure and supplement it with commercial fertilizers; in which event it is best to ask for a ready-mixed garden brand. Some bone meal should be kept on hand for the flower garden and the lawn and it is well to have a few pounds of nitrate of soda to apply after the crops have started. This is a wonderful stimulant for lettuce, spinach, Swiss chard and tomatoes. The way to use it is to put a teaspoonful or less at the base of each plant, making a shallow trench but not touching the stem. The first rain will wash it down to the roots and results will be seen in a few days.

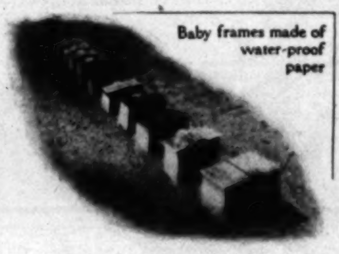
To make the most of the garden by keeping it occupied, arrange for two short-time crops in the same place. As soon as the early peas have been cleared away, the space they occupied can be given to late cabbage and Brussels sprouts. Early radishes may be followed by beets, early lettuce by peppers, early beets by carrots, spinach by turnips and so on. Turnips may be planted wherever an empty row appears up to the middle of Summer. Radishes and lettuce may be tucked into odd corners. Japanese cabbage can succeed any early crop. There are many combinations, but such vegetables as squashes, melons, onions, potatoes and tomatoes will need most of the season. Make several sowings of radishes, lettuce, beets and sweet corn to prolong the season and finish out half rows with crops that take the same kind of care as those you started them with.



Transplanting with paper pots is as simple as it looks

Hot Beds and Baby Cold Frames

YOU simply can't make the most of your garden unless you have a hot bed and a few dozen baby cold frames. Why depend upon somebody else to grow your lettuce and cabbage and tomato plants and so on?



Baby frames made of water-proof paper

Of course you can use the back of the range and the kitchen window, but that may mean getting a new cook or some pointed observations from your wife. A hot bed or even a 3 x 6 cold frame will make it possible to start lettuce, beets, onions, celery, corn and melons, as well as cabbage and tomato plants, and keep them growing until warm weather comes and there is a place for them in the garden. If paper pots or dirt bands are used, the work of transplanting becomes simplicity itself and the plants sustain practically no shock.

The baby frames are supplementary but exceedingly useful. They are about a foot square and may be made of light boards or of waterproof paper and a light of glass is placed over the top of each for protection, being partly removed as the weather grows warmer, until it is dispensed with altogether. Such frames may be made at home, using boxes from the grocery store. They are not expensive and make it possible to start corn, melons, cucumbers, lettuce and other crops in the open ground much earlier than otherwise would be the case.

There is also a place in the flower garden for these frames. They can be used to protect all sorts of flowering plants that are set out early and are splendid for forcing bulbs into early bloom. When warm weather has become established, these frames may be stored until another year, but in the vegetable garden they are often left several weeks longer, a square of wire fly screening being substituted for the glass. Adopt this simple plan and you can laugh at the striped beetle and other insects that delight to feast on tender melon and cucumber vines.

Tools That Cut Out Backache

IT is certain that you cannot make the most of your garden unless you have the right kind of tools to work with. Some tools on the market are not worth carrying home, but a few are indispensable. First of all, you will need a good, old-fashioned hoe. There is no use dodging the issue; you will have to tickle the ground with the hoe if you want to make it laugh with the harvest. By all means get a hoe that you can use with pleasure, one that has just the right feeling in your hands and is neither too heavy nor too light. Then keep it sharp. Carry a file in your pocket and apply it to the under side of the blade every time you think of it. Then you will save time, keep your temper and not lift a pound or two of earth when you pull the hoe out of the ground.

Of course you will need a wheel hoe, too, if you have anything larger than a handkerchief garden. It is the greatest labor-saver ever invented for the use of the garden maker. With it you can weed and cultivate. You can open furrows for the seed at planting time and fill them up again when the seed has been dropped. You can do the work yourself that you used to hire a man to do. You can avoid no end of stooping and getting down on your knees. The wheel hoe is the article which has taken the backache out of gardening.

If you have an acre or so to plant, a seed sowing attachment will be worth while, but with only a little garden you will seldom use it and will do better to save your money for a Warren hoe, a useful, heartshaped implement, and a scuffle hoe for making a dust mulch and uprooting incipient weeds. You must have a level garden in good tilth, though, to handle a scuffle hoe to advantage.

Nature is bound to fill your garden with something and it is for you to decide whether it shall be vegetables or weeds. If you try, you will keep the weeds out but you will get no end of exercise. Weeds travel both under and above ground. The wild onion, as John Burroughs says, multiplies at both ends. No wonder he further declares that weeds are the tramps of the vegetable kingdom. You must deal with them harshly, but it helps to plant a scattering of radish seeds with such slow-germinating kinds as parsnips and carrots and even with beet seeds coming up quickly, the radishes will mark the rows, so that you can begin to cultivate at once. Another plan calls for mounding the earth slightly over the rows, and germination can often be hastened by wetting down the soil in the bottom of the furrows before the seed is put in, especially if lukewarm water is used.

Rain Makers That Never Fail

OF course an abundance of water is indispensable if you are to make the most of your garden, although diligent cultivation is a great help. Somebody has said that a good hoeing is worth a shower, but it is much easier to supply the shower when one of the modern systems of irrigation is used. For some years market gardeners have been using the perforated pipe system, but now this system has been made available for any ordinary back yard garden. It does away with bursting hose, with the carrying of water in pails and the lack of water in a dry season. It puts the water just where you want it and in a mist that cannot wash out the most delicate seedling. The pipes may be set up permanently or they may be moved about on a set of wheels and the whole garden may be watered at one time. With such a system, you need not worry about rain, and your crop yield will be increased a third in an ordinary season.

It would be foolish to enthuse over this new system if it cost so much that only the rich could afford it, or if carrying water was a kind of exercise that everybody needed. As a matter of fact, the cost is no more than that of enough good hose to do the same amount of work. And the pipes will last a lifetime, while the hose is of course good for only a few seasons. A rain-making

It's the clean, sweet sap of the Sapota Tree

In tropical regions grows the Sapota Tree. Botanists call it the "Achras Sapota." Its buds turn into delicious fruit. It yields a creamy sap for Sterling Gum.

In the late Fall of the year, the rainy season comes. The sap rises. The trunk of the tree is tapped. The milky sap flows out, rich, pure and clean.

Then they boil it into buff-colored cakes. The cakes are wrapped and sent to the Sterling Kitchens.

As you enjoy your Sterling Gum, remember the clean, sweet sap of the Sapota Tree. Remember the gloved hands that guide its making into Sterling Gum.

The 7 points of Sterling excellence are:

Point 1—Crowded with flavor
Point 2—Velvety body—No Grit
Point 3—Crumble-proof
Point 4—Sterling purity
Point 5—From a daylight factory
Point 6—Untouched by hands

[illegible] Flowers of sulphur may be used in this new kind of blow gun for mildew and other fungus troubles. There are also good dry insect killers which come in boxes with perforated tops, by means of which the powder is easily distributed over the plants. All in all, the garden maker requires a much less expensive bug arsenal than formerly was the case in order to wage an effective campaign against the host of garden pests which is sure to appear.

Berries Until Frost Comes

SO much for the vegetables. How about the fruit garden? Do you enjoy strawberries and raspberries all summer? If not, you are failing to make the most of your garden, after all. Perhaps you are skeptical when you read about Fall-bearing strawberries. Yet these berries have proved their worth and are being grown in constantly increasing numbers. Plants set out in April will begin bearing in August and not stop until frost freezes the berries on their stems. When Spring comes they will start in again and produce another generous crop. An acquaintance of the writer's figures on a quart box of berries from each plant. They are fine, large berries, too, and delicious in flavor to the very end of the season. Particularly satisfactory results can be obtained in the home garden when these all-season strawberries are grown in hills rather than by the more common matted-row system.

The St. Regis ever-bearing raspberry must also have a corner, if you are to make the most of your garden, at least if you have a fondness for red, ripe raspberries of high color and fine flavor. Remarkable as it may seem, the St. Regis raspberry begins bearing earlier in the season than most other varieties and continues to bear until cold weather interferes. Ripe fruit was found in the writer's garden the past season two weeks before Thanksgiving Day. It is true that the plants are never so heavily loaded at any one time as are those of the Columbian and Cuthbert varieties in their brief season. Isn't it better, though, to have a moderate supply all summer rather than a feast and then a famine, as when the old-time sorts are grown? Certainly it is in the home garden. When one is growing raspberries commercially the situation may be different.

You will need blackberries in your garden, of course. Have you excluded them up to the present time because you dislike plants that are covered with needles? That excuse will hold good no longer, for the Wachuset is almost free from thorns. It is a fair sized berry, too, and the quality is excellent. There are some fine newer sorts, however, that are worth testing, among them the Star blackberry, which is reputed to be enormously productive. The vines are so heavy that they need to be tied to stakes or trained on trellises and the fruit is borne in gigantic clusters.

Finally, there are grapes. You cannot make the most of your garden if you omit them, and they can be trained along the sides where they will interfere little, if at all, with the ordinary garden operations. There are many standard sorts and there is also the new Caco grape, a cross between the Concord and the Catawba. It can be grown in any back yard and the red fruits are at least two weeks earlier than Concords. The man who is making the most of his garden will be slow to forsake his old and true friends among the vegetables and the fruits, but he will not refuse to become acquainted with new arrivals when they are properly introduced. If he does, he will soon find that he is not making the most of his garden, as he should.

Red Glass Milk Bottles

IT is not at all improbable that milk will be generally delivered in red bottles, for it has been discovered that while ordinary light hastens the "spoiling" of milk, the red rays prevent it. The violet rays, on the contrary, cause the milk to turn.

Pure, fresh milk, or sterilized and pasteurized milk, if placed in an uncolored glass bottle and left in the full sunlight, is completely spoiled by evening. But substitute a red glass bottle, or wrap the ordinary bottle in red paper, and milk is perfectly good after standing ten hours in the sun.

The Fall of a Nation

feted by the fair ones. Every railroad agent, conductor, dispatcher and superintendent was an officer in the Imperial Army. These men who had rarely shared the glory of the regular army were particularly elated at their triumphs with the girls.

When the Day dawned every great terminal and every train in America was decorated with the royal flags. The spirit of abandonment in a strange subdued mania swept the nation. Beneath it beat the throbbing hearts of a million sons of the new revolution and a million Daughters of Jael.

Angela received her final instructions at the Holland home at six o'clock. The magnificent display of fireworks would begin at eight-thirty—the dancing at nine-thirty, the banquet at eleven-thirty.

"You have a girl with every chauffeur?" Virginia asked sharply.

"Si, signorina——" Angela paused and smiled. "And they have learned to drive too—yes—they have had some fun these three months!"

"At the Seventy-first Armory, a girl for every sailor of the fleet?"

"For every one——"

"At the Twelfth Regiment?"

"For the aerial chauffeurs—I have two—very prettiest girls—two for each, signorina——"

"At the Seventh Regiment?"

"A girl for every waiter to help them serve. My girls they help the waiters everywhere——"

A look of fierce triumph overspread the dark features of the little mother. Her eyes grew misty. She fumbled in her bosom and slowly drew out the blood-stained flag her boy had worn on his breast.

"And I have the flag, signorina! When I tear the red crown from the staff I wave this one and shout for my bambino!"

Virginia merely nodded. Her mind was sweeping the last possibility of accident.

"You haven't been able to reach a single man among the wireless operators of the Woolworth tower?" she asked dreamily.

"Not one, signorina. The old devil up there don't like the girls. He is not human——"

"There's no help for it then," she answered. "We'll try another way—when all is ready attend me at the Palace of the Governor General. When the signal flashes from the Metropolitan tower I want the car I always drive to be at the door instantly——"

"Si, signorina—my chauffeur he like me very much—I must think of my bambino when I strike!"

"You will not fail?" Virginia sternly asked.

Angela touched the little flag and shook her head.

"Do not fear—I shall not fail!"

With a quick pressure of her hand Virginia hurried to enter the car of state which was already standing at the door.

The streets were thronged with thousands who talked in subdued tones. They had felt the iron hand on their throats too often during the past three years to abandon themselves to the occasion.

There were no screeching horns, no riotous boys and girls hurling confetti. Such crude expressions of liberty were forbidden.

Beneath the outer quiet slumbered the coming volcano.

Virginia drove to the Waldorf-Astoria, sent her card to a distinguished guest and was ushered into his parlors.

A tall dark foreigner with VanDyke beard bowed over her hand.

"Your Lordship had a pleasant trip across I trust?" she asked.

The door closed and they were alone.

With a smothered cry she was in Vassar's arms murmuring foolish inarticulate sounds.

She freed herself with quick decision.

"There's not a moment to be lost," Virginia whispered. "I've failed to reach a single man in the Woolworth tower."

"It must be taken then!" he answered firmly. "I have ordered the other stations destroyed. We must hold that before you strike in the banquet halls. I've made my plans to call our cavalry and automobile orders from there. Our first line of men must mobilise and be on their way within five minutes after the searchlight signals from the Square——"

He paused thoughtfully.

"There's not a moment to lose. I'll take that tower myself. Send three of your girls to meet me there at nine o'clock dressed as country folks on a sight-seeing trip to the city——"

"Armed of course?"

"Yes—with automatics, if you have them. I'll find a way to get them up to see the fireworks."

At nine o'clock a noisy group of country louts succeeded in reaching the room that led by a narrow winding stair to the upper room of the Woolworth tower. They were singing loyal songs for God and Emperor! Their pilot was drunk but good natured and was determined to show them to the pinnacle.

The cautious red-faced captain in charge of the wireless, who had been celebrating a little on the quiet, had thawed to a genial mood.

"Tree cheers for the Emperor!" the jovial pilot from the country shouted.

The captain laughed and joined the chorus. He glanced contemptuously at the giggling girls.

"Say cap," the leader cried, leaning heavily on his shoulder—"my girls gotter see the fire works—from the top—tip top! I promised 'em I'd take 'em to the very tip top—gotter make good——"

His legs wobbled.

The captain laughed.

"Think you could climb these winding stairs?"

"Surest thing you know!"

The man staggered to the steps, rushed half way up, slipped and fell sprawling to the floor.

The captain roared.

"Try again!" he shouted. "I'll let you go, but not these women!"

The girls joined in the laughter while he made another ludicrous effort and slipped again.

The two operators left their instruments and peered down the shaft.

"Go back to your places—this is my show!" the captain called.

The staggering countryman watched them withdraw, with wagging head but keen eye. He saw there were only two. He knew his task now.

He made another desperate effort to climb the spiral, turned a complete summersault and came down head foremost.

The captain slipped to a sitting posture weak from laughter.

"Shay, pardner help me!" the seeming inebriate pleaded.

"No—this is my show—it's too good to lose—I'm the audience—help yourself!"

The countryman tried it backward this time holding first to the rail.

The captain wiped the tears from his eyes and bent again to laugh as the lout reached the last step and waved his triumph. He turned and staggered against the wall feeling his way to the door beyond.

The girls crowded about the captain.

"Please let us go too!" they pleaded in chorus.

The captain was adamant. They kept up their parrot cries until the crash above came. They heard the blow that felled the first operator—the shuffle of feet, the tiger spring—the smothered cry.

It was all over with the captain before the cry. Three athletic girls had plunged their dagger hat pins into the captain's side at the same moment. They bore him to the floor and held his writhing body until it was still.

"All right!" Vassar called. "Stand guard now at the door leading from the elevator—inside the door. Let no one pass!"

The leader of the guard touched her hat in salute. He took his place at the operator's table and answered a call from the tower of the Governor General's palace.

"Your wireless stations have all answered?" the machine sang.

"All"—was the brief answer.

"I'll give you the signal for the Emperor's toast on the stroke of twelve."

"Good!" Vassar answered with a grim smile.

How I Jumped from $1500 to $50,000 Yearly

"Power of Will" Was My Guide"

"Three years ago I was making $1500 a year and working day and night. Today I make a thousand dollars a week and have time for other things as well. To the lessons in 'Power of Will' more than any other thing do I owe this sudden rise."

These are the exact words of an owner of "Power of Will." His name is not published, for obvious reasons, but will be gladly given in confidence on request.

As remarkable as is his experience it might almost be called typical of what this wonderful course in Will Training is doing for thousands of men and women in every walk of life who are using "Power of Will" as the stepping stone to greater accomplishment.

What is "Will Power"

The Will is the motive power of the brain. Without a highly trained inflexible will, a man has about as much chance of obtaining success in life as a railway engine has of crossing the continent without steam. The biggest ideas have no value without Will Power "to put them over." Yet the Will, hitherto entirely neglected, can be trained into wonderful power like the brain or memory and by the very same method, by intelligent exercise and use.

If you held your arm in a sling for two years, it would become powerless to lift a feather, from lack of use. The same is true of the will—it becomes useless from lack of practice. Because we don't use our wills—because we continually bow to circumstance, we become unable to assert ourselves. What our wills need is practice.

"Power of Will"

by FRANK CHANNING HADDOCK, Ph. D., a scientist whose name ranks with such leaders of thought as James, Bergson and Royce, is the first thorough course in Will Power ever conceived. It is the result of over 20 years of research and study. Yet you will find every page in the 28 lessons written so simply that anyone can understand them and put the principles, methods and rules into practice at once with noticeable results right from the very start.

Meant For You

There are over 75,000 people in all walks of life who own "Power of Will." Among them are such master men as Judge Ben B. Lindsey; Supreme Court Justice Parker; Wu Ting Fang, ex-U. S. Chinese Ambassador; Lieut.-Gov. McKelvie of Nebraska; Assistant Postmaster-General Britt; General Manager Christeson of Wells-Fargo Express Company; E. St. Elmo Lewis, now Vice-Pres. Art Metal Construction Company; Gov. Ferris of Michigan, and many others of equal prominence.

Never in the history of self-help literature has there been such a record. And the owners regard it as veritable text book. It has been instrumental in changing the entire lives of thousands—making them dominant personalities, self-confident and eager, in place of the fearful, unhappy, unsuccessful men and women they formerly were. No matter what your position—whether an errand boy to the president of a mighty corporation—no matter what your age, from 17 to 70, Power of Will can change your whole life—can make a new man of you just as it has for so many others. Whatever you want in life is yours, be it money, power, prestige or happiness, if you but master the wonderful system of will training taught in "Power of Will."

Making Most of the Garden

machine that will water twenty-five hundred square feet costs only $12. It is fifty feet long, portable, can be attached by a length of hose pipe to any sillcock, throws a mist in three directions and will cover a width of eighteen feet.

For small gardens and for lawns there are spray attachments to be used with the hose which do very good work indeed and costs $5 or less. They cover a wide area with a spray of water that falls as gently as an April shower and they can be carried anywhere at a moment's notice. Surely there is no reason for letting one's garden burn up if a fair pressure of water is available. And even a hose will be given added years of service if properly cared for, which means oftentimes keeping it free from kinks. Several kinds of reels are to be obtained, but the writer likes best the sort that is attached to the sillcock, where it can be wound up with the least possible trouble.

Equipping the Bug Arsenal

EVEN water, though, will not save your garden from the bugs. You need poison, bad odors and no end of patience. Covering some of the plants with screening will help, but you will have to do more or less gunning for the pests all through the season. The ammunition commonly used consists of arsenate of lead, kerosene emulsion, whale oil soap and Paris green. Of late, though, various preparations made from tobacco have been put on the market and have proved exceedingly useful in the small garden. Likewise there are ready-made oil or soap mixtures which are much more convenient than kerosene emulsion and fully as satisfactory, while they lack the exceedingly disagreeable odor of whale oil soap. These remedies are applied with spraying devices which may range all the way from a sixty-cent hand sprayer to a barrel pump on wheels.

While the conventional methods are those just described, many garden makers are breaking away from them and are adopting dry sprays as being more convenient and quite as effective. Arsenate of lead may be used in the dry form by means of a new gun which is very easy to operate and distributes the powder all over the plant. Hellebore may be applied in the same way and is better for fruit and berries that are partly formed.

Tobacco dust is one of the best of remedies to use in fighting all sorts of garden pests, both in the flower and the vege-

Roses the Summer Long

By Edward I. Farrington

THERE is no rose for the amateur like the hybrid-tea, for it blooms all summer long. No class of roses is more satisfactory for the home garden, in city or country, for the flowers are wonderful in size and color. And no roses are more acceptable as cut flowers, for they last a long time and most of them are delicately perfumed. With all these qualifications, it is not strange that hybrid-teas have become the most popular of all garden roses, and that new varieties should be welcomed with enthusiasm as soon as their merits have been established.

Never have finer novelties been offered than those which are being put out this season and most of those mentioned below have been given thorough and careful tests in this country. And it is an interesting fact that a particularly large number of yellow roses are to be introduced this year, meeting the popular demand for roses of that color. Among these yellow varieties is Imogen, the center of which is orange yellow, shading away to a paler tint, and turning to creamy white at the outside. Gorgeous is a deeper yellow, as its name would indicate, and is flushed and veined with copper in a most unique and interesting way. As this is a vigorously growing plant, with large, splendidly formed blossoms, it is likely to meet with high favor. The yellow of Iona Herdman is a clear, orange flame, wonderfully deep and beautiful. This is an excellent rose for garden use, as well as for cutting, blooms freely and has an exquisite perfume. The yellow of Margaret Dickson Hamill, a splendid new rose from across the water, is really a delicate straw color, while the backs of the petals are flushed with carmine. This is a very sweet scented rose, too, and doubly to be prized because of the beauty of its bronze-green foliage. Even more generous with its flowers is Mrs. Ambrose Riccardo, an extra large rose for its kind, with a soft rose suffusing its delicate yellow base. Mrs. Archie Gray is a light canary yellow, but the long, pointed buds are cream yellow. This rose also has shiny, handsome leaves and is a strong and upright grower. Coming to Mrs. MacKellar, we are introduced to one of the finest of all the new yellow hybrid-teas. It is very liberal with its large, full flowers, and makes a strong growth, while the light lemon-yellow tinting of its petals is exquisite. The delightful scent of the real tea rose is found in Mrs. Maud Dawson, and the color of the flower is a brilliant orange carmine, making this a most desirable rose, especially as it blooms all summer.

H. V. Machin

In time the growing popularity of the yellow rose may make it the fashionable flower of the day, but so far the "red, all-conquering rose" has maintained its supremacy, and among the new hybrid-teas there is a red rose which has rightly been christened Brilliant, for its intense scarlet is the brightest color yet obtained by rose growers. It makes a good branching growth and is especially desirable as a bedding rose, giving the garden a dash of color which is most pleasing. While less free-flowering than some of the others, the new H. V. Machin, scarlet-crimson in color, is extremely large and a rose which will interest all growers who raise exhibition flowers. Another splendid red variety is Edward Bohane, free-flowering, very fragrant, and crimson scarlet in color, with a velvet-like texture which is nothing less than fascinating. The markings of Muriel Dickson are quite different, for the long and pointed buds are reddish copper, changing to cherry red with coppery shadings as the blossoms unfold. The distinct and handsome tints of this rose assure it of a warm welcome. Of all the new red roses, however, none can surpass a variety which comes into the market this Spring for the first time and bears the name of National Emblem. The trial tests made with this rose mark it as one of the finest ever produced and the dark velvety crimson flowers, shading to vermilion at the edges, are borne in the most gratifying profusion. In many ways National Emblem is a rose of wonderful possibilities.

Many people prefer pink roses to all others and they will be delighted with Colleen, which is really rose pink, with deeper rose-crimson veneering on a creamy-yellow ground. The petals are large and the center high, and the fragrance of this rose is delicious. Countess Clanwilliam is a delicate peach-pink at the base of the petals, which are heavily edged with deep cherry red, making a contrast which is as distinctive as it is beautiful. Large and remarkably symmetrical are the flowers of Mrs. Bertram J. Walker, and the color is very unusual, being a bright cerise pink. In all ways this is a most satisfactory rose and a worthy companion to Mrs. James Lynas, an extra good garden rose, having large, well formed blossoms of pearly pink, flushed with delicate peach.

The list of new hybrid-teas might be made longer but only one more will be mentioned and that because it is an exceptionally dainty rose and very free with its flowers. Its name is simply Janet and it looks much like the climbing Gloire de Dijon which has long been in high favor from Philadelphia South. It is a blush rose with salmon shadings and most attractive.

Why We Stand on One Leg

NATURALISTS have distinguished us from the higher animals by the fact that we stand upright on two legs. But, do we? Watch a crowd standing about a street orator and see how many are really standing on both legs. Or try yourself to stand on two legs and see how soon you are ready to fall from fatigue.

The truth is we have not yet absolutely acquired the upright position ascribed to us by the scientists. Even in the army, where comfort is always sacrificed to trim appearance the command "stand at ease" which allows the soldiers to throw one leg back and prop themselves upon it, shows how impossible a perfectly upright position is to maintain for any length of time. And have you ever noticed that all seafaring men acquire the habit of walking back and forth, even when ashore. On board ship the rolling of the ship makes the resting position on one leg difficult, so the sailor paces back and forth across his deck, even though he may be able to take only two and a half steps each way.

As any anatomist will tell us, we are still built very much like the monkeys. Standing perfectly upright can only be done by a very complicated cross strain, one set of muscles pushing forward, another holding back. With every movement we make a new adjustment of these muscles takes place.

The trouble is all with our hip bones. If they fitted vertically into the pelvic girdle and not at an angle and if the spine were directly above it, all that would be required to stand perfectly upright would be a slight amount of balancing.

Therefore, to rest these muscles we place one of them at rest by throwing one leg to one side, allowing the other to do the work. When one leg has rested sufficiently, it takes up the strain and the other takes a spell. Nor does it matter how much we strengthen our leg muscles by walking or other exercises, the perfectly upright position is still a hard one to keep.

Art and Utility in Window Boxes

ARTISTIC effects may be obtained as easily and permanently with the window box as with the flower bed on the lawn or in the garden. But the same care and attention is required to make a success of one as of the other. With what high hopes do many flower lovers start porch and window boxes in the spring, only to reap a harvest of disappointment before the summer is well under way. This may result from two or three reasons: One is that poor judgment has been shown in selecting the flowers or vines, both as regards their color combination and the location of the box in sunshine or shade. The other may be owing to neglect in watering, especially if the box be of wood and therefore subject to leakage.

Many people err in using boxes that are too shallow and dry out too quickly. While there are some advantages attached to the wooden box its disadvantage is that it will not hold moisture but will leak over the window sill and frequently, in city apartment homes especially, will prove to be an annoyance to the tenants below.

Metal window boxes are rapidly finding favor on this account. There is no leakage and furthermore they guarantee a proper moisture for the seed bulb or vine for days at a time and thereby insure the flowers against neglect in watering. Daily watering is needed in case the box be of wood and is very much in the sun. The advantage of the metal box lies in the fact that the soil dries out much more quickly than in the garden and if neglected the plants will perish of thirst.

Most any catalogue will give a good idea as to plants that will harmonize. Care must be exercised in getting the proper combination of colors and also as regards the length of life of the plants, as it never looks well to have two or three plants in a box die or fade very much earlier than their companions. A box very much exposed to the sun will thrive with geraniums and petunias, with thunberga or maurandia and trailing nasturtiums to droop over the front. Where there is a good deal of shade the begonia and also vinca rosea do well.

"What Lovely, Artistic Walls!

"Mine are a fright. They need re-papering badly, as usual. And the plaster is cracking and falling again. How do you fix yours?"

"Our walls and ceilings never need 'fixing'—they're always just like this. No expensive repairs and cleaning after messy workmen, for us! We've UPSONIZED. Quite the modern way, you know."

UPSON PROCESSED BOARD

Upsonizing makes every room so much more beautiful. The paneling is an artistic delight, and you can finish it in such handsome tints. Washable paint gives a surface that you can always keep clean, fresh and sanitary.

All this beauty lasts. Because UPSON PROCESSED BOARD is strong, durable, perfect and permanent. It is like real lumber—altogether different from ordinary wall boards. It is DEPENDABLE.

The long, pure, wood fibers are compressed into hard, stiff, wood-like panels, kiln-dried. That's why your carpenter finds it so quick and easy to work and apply, any time in the year. Takes only one-third as long as plastering, and no fuss or muss.

The specially prepared painting surface saves you from $5 to $15 a room over the cost of painting ordinary wall boards, besides giving handsome effects. And this surface is waterproofed, defying ordinary dampness or leaks.

Yet the cost of Upsonizing is just about the same as the first cost of plastering. In the long run, it is a big saving over any other interior lining. Adaptable to every building, the costliest or simplest.
